Only Enough Vaccine For 1% of Canadians

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada will have enough vaccine to treat just over one per cent of the population next winter when the expected epidemic of swine flu strikes.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the Commons Thursday that Canada has no vaccine on hand at present and has the capacity to produce only 300,000 doses by next fall.

He stated the government has been in touch with foreign authorities to see whether enough can be imported to immunize the rest of Canadians who might require it.

Dr. I. A. D. Todd, member of the board of directors of the Canadian Medical Association, however, says CMA officials will not react to the possibility of an epidemic of swine flu virus in the emotional manner shown by United States officials in the last few days.

Todd, a Toronto surgeon and vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association, said there is always the threat of an outbreak of a new flu virus because strains develop every few years.

However, until the last few weeks there has not been much information to suggest that even the threat of a swine-flu epidemic is imminent, he said.

The U.S. often reacts with more emotion than necessary in health matters and if an epidemic occurs at all it will not be for some time, he claimed.

A Calgary doctor said Thursday, that health officials in the United States are creating a national panic by recommending a campaign to inoculate every citizen.

Dr. Ken Buchan, a virologist at Foothills Hospital, said there has been one outbreak and occasional individual cases "but there is no epidemic yet."

Alberta, meanwhile, moved

APOLOGY ORDERED

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed told a government backbencher Thursday to apologize after he made a disparaging remark about Quebec.

The incident occurred during the legislative question period when A. L. Fluker (PC — St. Paul) asked Recreation Minister Al Adair if he was aware of a "new seating capacity Mr. Drapeau has come up with for the Olympics.

"I understand that they are removing every other seat and now replacing them with lily pads for frogs, and I wonder if the minister was aware of it," he said.

The remark instantly drew groans and a few chuckles from the Conservative-dominated assembly.

Later, Fluker apologized in the house for the remarks, which he said were meant "as a joke."

He said no slur was intended.

Premier Lougheed recommended that the apology be accepted, stating that he was certain Quebec "would accept the apology in the way in which it was made here."

Justice Threatened By 'Too Much Law'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada Thursday recommended that Parliament carefully reconsider whether abortion, indecency, bigamy, incest, obscenity and gambling should remain offences under the Criminal Code.

"In the light of present social attitudes, inquiry should be made whether they should be abolished or redefined or whether the law needs strengthening," the commission said in a report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Ron Basford.

The commission's report on criminal law says the 700-section Criminal Code is a document "wedded to a Victorian philosophy which now is inadequate."

The code should be pruned so that only offences that are serious and harmful are included.

"Too much law, too many offences and too many cases — they threaten the whole criminal justice system with collapse," the report said.

Besides the 700 Criminal Code sections, there are 20,000 federal offences and 20,000 under provincial law.

"No one can possibly know all these sections and offences. Yet since ignorance of the law is no excuse, the citizen can never be sure he is not breaking the law.

"Worse still, 70 per cent of federal offences are offences of strict liability and need no proof of fault; prove the act and conviction follows automatically."

The criminal justice system's theoretical aim was to promote humanity but in reality it was inhuman.

"Canada . . . is one of the harshest western countries when it comes to use of prison sentences," said the Commission.

"Many of the terms imposed are far too long, half the people in prison should never be there, and so many are in jail that those few needing real care and attention cannot get it.

"The whole system resembles a vast machine sucking people in one end, spewing

Teamster Talks Stalled

Attempts to end a three-day-old strike of some 2,000 B.C. Teamsters continued in Labor Minister Allan Williams' office at the legislature today without sign of progress by late morning.

Representatives of the Teamsters Union and Transport Labor Relations Association which bargains for 90 companies handling 80 per cent of truck freight business in the province, were brought to Victoria by Williams in an effort to bring speedy settlement to the dispute.

Bargaining is hung up on the issue of wages, with Teamsters asking for $1.40 an hour increase on a typical $6.50 an hour rate for semi-trailer drivers employed by cartage firms.

Employers, about 15 of whom have indicated agreement to the demand and remained operating, offered a two-year pact based on $1.05 and 90 cents hourly in the period, plus 5 cents an hour vacation pay.

When the strike was called Tuesday, said Teamsters' leader Sen. Ed Lawson, many employers had already started paying the increased wage and offered improved working conditions.

Budget Data Leaked More Than Week Ago?

Did confidential provincial budget material fall into the wrong hands before its official release today?

The Times has learned that a young man was asked by an aide of Premier Bennett about 10 days ago to put a folder of papers in a hotel safe overnight.

The curious young man took a look at the papers and saw at the top of the pile a press release concerning the Alberta budget.

Next came a page with a paragraph concerning federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements and their relation to the constitution. Under that was a stack of xeroxed pages which mixed written copy with graphs, tables and other provincial financial data.

A friend of the young man, it has been learned, was writing a university essay on the topic of the constitution and the paragraph he had seen nicely fitted in with her essay.

So he gave her a call and they decided they could "scoop" everybody if they used the paragraph in the essay.

One problem was that the paragraph had handwritten brackets around it with the word "omit" and a question mark in the margin, but the young man copied the words down anyway and they were used in the essay, handed in earlier this week.

His curiousity continued to get the better of him, and the young man leafed through the remaining pages.

Being rather intelligent and somewhat politically aware, he quickly assumed they pertained to the upcoming budget.

The importance of the documents and their potential value flashed through his mind and he decided he didn't want to be burdened with that knowledge. He carefully put the material away.

No one might have known about the incident, but as newspaper people know, when you've got a "scoop" it's hard to keep quiet about it.

Word got out through the university and eventually the Times confronted the young man, who related the details of his encounter with the confidential documents.

He now regrets that little "peak" and says he didn't think through the full consequences of it.

The Bennett aide was asked today about leaving the confidential material overnight and the question was met with a long silence.

Asked if he was still on the phone, he replied: "Yes, but I'm sure not going to say anything." Then he hung up.

Times News Services

BEIRUT (AP) — Moslem leaders threatened today to shell from land and sea the Christian stronghold in which Lebanese President Suleiman Franjieh has taken refuge.

The Christian-Moslem civil war raged with full fury in Beirut and the surrounding hills. The estimated death toll since last April passed the 13,000 mark. Statements from both sides indicated that Syrian plans for a political compromise are doomed and that the war will only be settled by a military showdown.

Police reported 146 persons killed and more than 200 wounded after midnight, raising the toll to 1,172 dead since the last Syrian-sponsored ceasefire began collapsing on March 11. But the police figures were incomplete.

Artillery shells and mortar rounds crashed down on most of the city. Much shelling from both sides was directed into residential quarters at random, apparently to terrorize noncombatants. Many of the casualties were civilians.

Franjieh, Lebanon's 65-year-old Christian president, fled early Thursday with his family and top aides to seaside Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut, when heavy Moslem shelling made a shambles of the hilltop presidential palace four miles east of Beirut.

"We have warships that are going to visit Jounieh," Lebanon's leading Moslem leftist, Kamal Junblatt, told a Beirut newspaper. "I am sorry for Jounieh, because that town, where we have a lot of friends, is going to be subjected to shelling from the sea."

How Jumblat could shell Franjieh into submission remained to be seen. The Lebanese navy consists only of a few gunboats and they are in the port of Jounieh under Franjieh's control.

Loss of Korbin Decried by Lauk

Suspended Pair Foolish —Curtis

Two employees of the B.C. Housing Management Commission were suspended Thursday in the wake of allegations of conflict of interest.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis announced the move to the legislature Thursday but would not name the officials or the strata title management firm they alledgedly set up.

He stressed that he believes their actions were merely foolish rather than an attempt to misuse the corporation.

The allegations, which surfaced in the house Wednesday, are that the two men set up the management firm while they were still working for the public corporation.

Curtis said the men were told by their solicitor in February, when they set up the company, that they might be in a conflict of interest.

He said he understands one or both of the men subsequently divested themselves of their share in the firm.

The suspensions, without pay, are pending completion of the investigation.

The B.C. Development Corporation may be headed for "pork barrel" politics, former NDP Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk said the departure of BCDC president David Korbin means the corporation has lost a highly qualified, non-partisan head, who kept the government agency non-political.

Korbin was appointed by the NDP when the BCDC was founded in early 1974. He resigned Thursday saying he felt Economic Development and BCDC chairman Minister Don Phillips did not have confidence in him.

"In order for the corporation to be effective in assisting the industrial development of B.C., it is imperative that the government have confidence in me," Korbin said.

Korbin said he regrets the situation as he believes "the corporation has performed well in its initial experimental phase of operation."

Lauk said the new Socred government fired former BCDC chairman Peter Stanley and now, in effect, has fired Korbin by expressing lack of confidence in him.

He described Korbin as a "good British Columbian and a devoted British Columbian" and said he believes Phillips did not have confidence in him because he is a friend of Lauk's.

Korbin is a Vancouver chartered accountant.

Boozy Binges, Suicide Talk Finished Nixon

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Richard Nixon, in the final phase of his days as president of the United States, was portrayed in newspaper and magazine accounts today as a man who drank to excess and was obsessed with suicide.

The former president's suicide talk so disturbed his aides that they removed all medication from his medicine chest.

The revelations appear in a book, The Final Days, by Watergate reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post. Time magazine and The Daily News say it has been closely guarded prior to its publication next month by Simon and Schuster and serialization of excerpts beginning Monday in Newsweek.

A report in Time, as amplified by columnist Liz Smith of The Daily News, says the book relates that in the days before his resignation Nixon spent much of his time drinking in a small office in the Executive Office Building, either alone or with press secretary Ron Ziegler.

The News says that Nixon's son-in-law David Eisenhower, expressed concern for Nixon's mental condition, reporting to an aide that he had seen the president intoxicated, talking to the portraits of former presidents.

Time says that as the end neared, Nixon asked State Secretary Henry Kissinger to kneel and pray with him, saying:

"You are not a very orthodox Jew and I am not an orthodox Quaker, but we need to pray."

The News says that after the prayer Nixon began crying, screaming and beating his fists on the floor.

Even though Ziegler was one of the former president's few confidants in the final days, Time says, the press secretary sometimes became the object of Nixon's temper and that Nixon was heard on one occasion screaming at Ziegler: "Get out! Get out!"

When Nixon summoned his family, wife, daughters and sons-in-law, for a final White House photograph, says Time, White House photographer Ollie Atkins had to shoot for some time to get a picture which did not show tears on any of their faces.

Nixon's wife, Pat, also was reported to have sought solace in alcohol and began slipping down to the servants' quarters at night and returning to her private bedroom with glasses full of bourbon.

The former president also sought seclusion on the presidential yacht Sequoia to get away from the "goddam press" and those he considered his enemies.

Time reported that Nixon cried as Kissinger tried to reassure him that his foreign policy accomplishments would survive the tragedy of Watergate.

"Kissinger . . . often sneered at Nixon behind his back," Time said, "and sometimes concealed his loathing only with difficulty when they were together." Privately, Kissinger referred to Nixon as "our meatball president," the magazine said.

IT WAS A BUM WRAP BUT IT SAVED HIM

SEATTLE (AP) — Coast Guard crews are used to seeing the people they rescue in various states of dress or undress, but a Port Angeles air station helicopter crew saw a new one Thursday morning.

In answer to a request from the Seattle rescue co-ordination centre, the helicopter was conducting a shoreline search for a missing sports fisherman along the northwest side of Blake Island in Puget Sound.

Suddenly, the helicopter's lights hit a mummy-like figure, swathed from head to toe in toilet paper.

Gene Lajoie of Port Orchard, Wash., had gone fishing in an eight-foot pram. When it sank off the island, he swam ashore. Lajoie found an outhouse, stripped off his wet clothing and wrapped himself with the toilet paper to stop hypothermia.

The startled coastguardmen agreed the action was a bit unorthodox, but highly effective.

Lajoie was in good shape, despite his dip in the chilly waters. The coast guard flew him to Port Orchard — toilet paper and all.

Binge By Wine Buyers

LONDON (UPI) — The greatest sale of vintage Bordeaux wines of this century netted almost $2 million at its close Friday with 360,000 bottles changing hands in two days.

Christies, the London fine art auctioneers, said the wine — including some of the most famous of French wines such as Chateau Margaux, Chateau Lafite and Chateau Latour — was bought almost exclusively by international wine merchants, with Americans bidding "as though prohibition was just about to be reimposed."

The top price of $580 was uncorked for a 12-bottle case of Chateau Haut-Brion 1955.

The mountain of 30,000 cases was sold for a total of $1.8 million, Christies said.

Arab Riots Spreading

Times News Services

Arab rioting spread within Israel on Thursday as hundreds of youths in this Israeli Arab village near Haifa threw stones at police and passing cars.

Meanwhile, a second Palestinian rioter was reported killed in a clash with Israeli troops in occupied West Jordan.

The riot erupted outside the Shfar'am town hall where mayors of Arab villages in Israel were meeting to discuss a one-day general strike called to protest a government plan to purchase 1,500 acres of Arab-owned land in the Galilee district.

The youths went on a rampage, stoning police and cars, after 35 of the 50 mayors announce they had voted to postpone the Communist-inspired strike, planned for Wednesday, until after a meeting next month with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Twenty teenagers were arrested.

The military command, meanwhile, annouced the second fatality in a month of anti-Israeli rioting in the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

It said a 34-year-old Palestinian man died Wednesday after he was beaten during a riot in Hebron.

An 11-year-old boy killed by Israeli army gunfire during a riot outside Jerusalem had been buried only hours before.

The United States has vetoed a Security Council resolution criticizing Israel's administration of occupied Arab territory, prompting Arab charges the vote was motivated by election-year politics.

Newly appointed U.S. ambassador William Scranton, who earlier criticized Israeli policies, cast the veto Thursday after four days of debate.

The council's other 14 members, including the Soviet Union, voted for the resolution sponsored by five non-aligned nations.

Scranton vetoed the measure despite a speech Tuesday in which he said Israel's annexation of Arab areas of Jerusalem and its establishment of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories were an "obstacle" to Middle East peace.

Several delegates speculated the state department decided to veto the resolution because of President Ford's defeat in the North Carolina Republisan primary Tuesday.

Although this was not voiced officially, Mansur Rashid Kikhia of Libya and Zehdi Labib Terzi of the Palestine Liberation Organization said on the council floor they believed the veto was cast because the Jewish vote is important this election year.

Scranton said the resolution would have damaged Middle East peacemaking efforts.

Poison Fumes

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Poison gas fumes spread through a residential area today, sending more than 140 persons to hospital. The fumes were formed when the driver of a tank truck mistakenly poured several tons of sulphuric acid into another chemical tank. The reaction formed chlorine gas.

quickly Thursday to purchase nearly $750,000 worth of the vaccine.

Alberta Social Services Minister Helen Hunley said the vaccine could be in short supply "unless we order now."

"Everybody won't need it," she said, noting that certain target age groups would be most affected by the outbreak.

No cases of the disease — called swine influenza — have been reported in Canada, but "concern is increasing greatly" that it could spread and that it could develop here by fall, Miss Hunley said.

Stressing that the move was a "preventive measure," the minister said she expected vaccinations would be done through local health units. Administrative details and information on the purchase volume have not been worked out, she said.

Alberta was the third province to order the vaccine, following Manitoba and Ontario.

In Vancouver, Tony Larsen, director of the British Columbia health department's epidemiology division, said Thursday he should know by the end of the week how his division will respond to the possible flu threat.

Although the problem is being discussed nationally, he said, the final decision for B.C. will be made here because health is a provincial responsibility.

The Armand Frappier Institute of the University of Quebec is ready to start producing 300,000 doses of swine influenza vaccine for distribution to Canadians by next fall, institute director Aurele Beaulnes said.

The institute, formerly the Institute of Hygiene and Microbiology, is the only one in Canada capable of developing such a vaccine in the desired time, he added.

"Even for us, it will be a real challenge to make from scratch a new, effective and safe vaccine and to produce 300,000 doses before fall," he said.

Simpler Laws Urged

The report said a general section should be placed in the Criminal Code obliging the prosecution to find "intent of recklessness" on the part of the offender unless this was specifically excluded.

If it was the defence of due diligence — allowing a defendant to explain himself and show that he used all reasonable care to avoid the offence — should be allowed.

The first test of criminality should be whether the offence results in serious harm to others.

The second should be whether it seriously contravened fundamental values to the point where society was harmed. The third should be whether enforement measures themselves might do more harm than the proposed offence.

Legislators should then consider whether making something a crime would make a significant contribution to dealing with the problem.

The report said that offences which most people don't consider to be wrong — booking bets, pretending to practice witchcraft — should be deleted from the Code.

A hard look should be taken at offences "whose wrongfulness and seriousness today is controversial." These included the drug laws and those governing abortion, for example.

There should be a "fundamental reappraisal" not only of criminal law on property offences but of the role of property in Canadian society.

Theft, the most prevalent property offence and mentioned in about 60 sections of the Code, indicated the value placed on private ownership.

"Our paradigm of crime is theft," the report said. "Sometimes, however, paradigms need changing.

Pollution, depletion of resources, poverty, unemployment, inflation, race conflicts, terrorism, alienation — all these throw doubts on the adequacy of our older criminal law paradigm."

The commission said it will propose simpler property offence law.

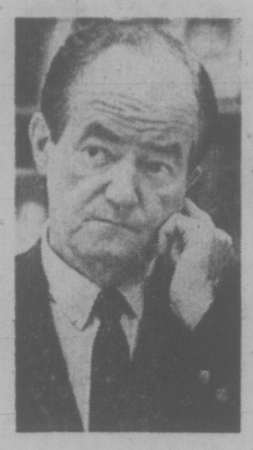
HUBERT WOULDN'T SAY NO TO OFFER



United Press International

Sen. Hubert Humphrey said today if no Democratic presidential candidate has a clear lead by early summer it would be "wise on my part" to make preparations for seeking the nomination at the national convention.

Humphrey also said if a stalemate did exist it was a "possibility" he might actively campaign for uncommitted delegates during the month between the final primaries and the New York City convention, which runs from July 12-16.

Humphrey said if any democrat has "real momentum and a commanding lead" after the primaries "then I think one ought to get out of the way."

"But, if it looks like it is kind of blocked, that there is no way anyone can proceed to tie it together," Humphrey said, "Then I think it would be wise on my part, in light of the interest that has been shown in me, to go to the convention prepared to seek the nomination."

Funding Pledge Averts Strike

Health Minister Bob McClelland Thursday averted a threatened month-end strike by 16,000 members of the Hospital Employees Union by making funds available to hospitals to end pay discrimination.

Two Greater Vancouver hospitals had voted for strike action and the union had served strike notice on the 97 other hospitals in the province, including Victoria General and Royal Jubilee that unless pay adjustments were made by March 31 union members would walk off their jobs.

The adjustments were negotiated last year between the union and provincial government and involved a $37.50-a-month increase retroactive to January, 1975, for 10,000 female union members to bring them in line with what their male counterparts were being paid.

The government had authorized $4.5 million but the hospitals said it wasn't enough, that they would only be able to meet about two-thirds of their commitment.

McClelland said he has agreed to transfer a further $175,000 to the hospitals to make up the shortfall.

"I have sent word to all of the hospitals involved telling them that the money is available and urging them to make these payments by the end of the month," the minister said.

Under the agreement each of the 10,000 female workers will receive $450.

JOHNSTON KEEPS POST

VANCOUVER (CP — Doug Johnston has been re-elected president of the board of directors of British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference.

TWO ISLANDERS IN SWEEPS RACE

Ticket-holders from Campbell River and Victoria have drawn long-shots on horses in Saturday's running of the Lincoln Handicap at Doncaster, England, following Thursday's ticket draw.

Doug Stobo of Victoria holds a ticket on Gan on Geordie, and Al H. Miller of Campbell River holds one on Duboff.

There were no Canadians who had tickets drawn on the top three early-line favorites — Golden Aim, 7 to 1, Bell Tent, 10 to 1, or Halicas, 12 to 1.

First prize is about $142,500, second $38,000 and third $19,000 at the current exchange rate. Holders of tickets on starters or horses out of the money are assured of about $1,000 each.

Sweepstakes largest prize of 400,000 pounds or $760,000 went to San Francisco resident Kenneth Householder whose ticket was drawn first from the drum containing all tickets sold.

The superprize has been won 12 times by Canadians, seven times by Americans, twice by Britons and once by an Irishman.

Quebec Demands Full Control Of Programs

Times News Services

MONTREAL — The Quebec government wants jurisdiction over all forms of communication within its borders, including Bell Canada, and a say in the policies of national networks, such as the CBC, Communications Minister Denis Hardy said Thursday.

He told a public relations group he did not feel the jurisdiction sought by Quebec would require constitutional changes, but was rather a matter of negotiation with the federal government.

"I believe that a clear distinction must be made between national unity and national uniformity," the minister said.

"The centralization of decision-making powers in the name of national unity constitutes without a doubt a very important factor of dissension and fragmentation."

"Quebec can only develop culturally by taking charge of communications within its territories," he added.

However, Jeanne Sauve, federal communications minister, was quick to retort that Ottawa will not allow Quebec to gain control over private broadcasting in the province.

The demand by the Quebec government for regulatory powers over private radio and television broadcasting is "not negotiable," she said.

In his speech Hardy said content policies by the CBC should "harmonize" with Quebec's cultural objectives.

But Sauve said no government should control program content.

"He's asking for control over programming, but no one controls that, neither the provincial nor the federal government," she said.

"In any case, the public doesn't want the government to control program content."

Hardy told reporters after his address that a federal refusal — such as that by Sauve — would increase the "danger of separatism."

He said Quebec demands for jurisdiction over Bell Canada are not excessive, since six Canadian provinces already have complete control over telephone companies within their borders.

BOMBING CHARGES

OTTAWA (CP) — Police today charged Michael Wiser, 17, Allan Fernie, 16, and a juvenile with "intent to destroy or damage Ottawa school board property," in connection with an explosion in a high school locker Thursday.

They were scheduled to appear in court today.

No one was injured in an explosion at Laurentian High School in the city's west end. But a vacant locker was destroyed and a hallway littered with pieces of it.

Police said it appeared the intent was to make a smoke bomb but the chemistry of the maker of makers "was not up to par."

The same school was damaged Jan. 31 by a fire which police say they believe was

Olympic Offices Raided Again

MONTREAL (CP) — Police seized more documents from the offices of Les Terrasses Zarolega Inc. Thursday in connection with an inquiry into alleged fraud and contract kickbacks in the Olympic Village development.

A joint RCMP-Quebec Provincial Police force took several files in what a police spokesman called a routine visit to supplement documents taken in a major raid on Zarolega's offices last November.

Andrew Gaty, Zarolega's partner, said the seizures are "continued harassment" of the four-man building consortium.

"It's curious that they time this visit now when we're starting to speak out against what the government may have in mind about the Village," said Gaty.

Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said last week the provincial government is considering taking over the Olympic Village, where athletes will be housed during the Games this summer.

The committee holds an open-ended mortgage on the project, the final costs of which will likely soar to between $85 million and $95 million from the original $32 million, Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldbloom said Thursday.

120 Killed When Ferry Burns, Sinks

PORT AU PRINCE (UPI) — More than 120 persons died in a fire that destroyed an overloaded ferryboat off the south coast city of Jeremie, Haitan officials reported today.

Jeremie authorities said only three persons survived the accident Thursday afternoon, including a Seventh-Day Adventist pastor. No foreigners were believed to have been aboard the coastal vessel.

They provided few details of the accident but said a full investigation was ordered into the causes of the blaze.

Officials said many of the passengers drowned while other died in the fire.

Positive Government Spending

When a prime minister uses army helicopters to go on a political mission it is an abuse of taxpayers' money. When a federal government spends in excess of $200,000 to transport and entertain a member of the royal family in the Canadian Arctic, many taxpayers think it is a waste of their money. In fact, one doesn't need an auditor-general to pinpoint flagrant examples of government waste. But the lion's share of more than $28 billion in federal spending estimates for 1975-1976 will benefit individual Canadians.

Nearly 28 per cent, or more than $7 billion of the total budget, will be spent on health and welfare costs. This is the largest single item in the federal budget. It includes hospital insurance services, direct northern health care facilities, family allowances, social assistance and a host of other programs that indirectly bolster the free enterprise system in Canada.

The second largest item, economic development and support, accounts for 16.5 per cent or more than $4 billion. In the words of treasury board its role is to "enxourage stable and balanced growth of the national economy."

During the 1975-76 year $671 million will be spent in support of agricultural and food policy objectives, $234 million to aid secondary industry. Would the fellows of the C.D. Howe Research Institute or the Canadian Chamber of Commerce remove these subsidies? In essence some of our largest companies are socialist principalities subsidized through government grants, loans and tax concessions.

After these two large items, the 1975-76 expenditure budget breaks down as follows: servicing the public debt, 12.6 per cent or $3.57 billion; defence, 9.9 per cent or $2.8 billion; tax transfers to provinces, 9.3 per cent or $2.6 billion; transportation and communications, 7.4 per cent or $2.08 billion; general government services, 5.1 per cent or $1.4 billion; internal overhead expenses, 4.1 per cent or $1.1 billion; foreign affairs, $2.5 per cent or $701 million; culture and recreation, 2.4 per cent or $690 million; and education assistance, 2.4 per cent or $672 million.

Other than inevitable waste and excessive spending amounting to thousands among these billions what could be pared? General government services cover such things as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the National Parole Board. Internal overhead expenses encompass the contentious bilingualism program as well as an estimated $76 million that will be paid to municipalities and provinces in lieu of taxes on federal property. To severely limit defence, transportation or communications, foreign affairs or education assistance is clearly impossible in a growing nation like Canada. It soon becomes clear that to run a far-flung, delicately balanced enterprise such as Canada takes a great deal of money and careful allocation.

Business invariably complains about government spending, yet it never suggests an end to sizable industry concessions or dollar incentives. Consumers scream about lower taxes but never at the expense of family allowance cheques. To some degree it would seem that good government is in the eye of the receiver. Still the refrain continues, lambasting big government and government spending. Certainly there is room for improvement in federal spending habits. But, generally speaking, big government and increasing spending are necessary evils if we wish to preserve individual liberties and prevent the balkanization of Canada. A weak diffused federal government would reinforce regionalism in this diverse country, inevitably resulting in separation and ultimately absorption by the U.S. or at the very least, a kind of economic commonwealth status with our large neighbor.

The coercive powers of big business and labor can only be checked by application of public power. It is the only other powerful force in the marketplace. Among the three, it is also the only elected force. Election candidates who campaign on promises to end big government resemble the cocktail lounge owner who lists among his licensing qualifications a Womens' Christian Temperance Union membership. Government spending must be carefully supervised. Waste must be checked.

But are we to tear our carefully woven social fabric because of a need for restraint? Big government and government spending have become simplistic shibboleths, trotted out as the major causes of inflation. If government bears some guilt, so does business and labor. Balancing the books is an admirable goal. It should not become an end in itself. Canada is a concept much larger than a debit and credit ledger.

Hints From the Ambassador

The United States ambassador to Canada had some vaguely intimidating remarks for Canadians in his first address since taking his Ottawa post last February. Thomas Enders said Canada's new nationalism has ended the special relationship this country enjoyed with the U.S., highlighted by special treatment and consideration. Instead, Canada and the U.S. will deal with each other just as they do with other countries, he said. The implied threat is if you want to fight with heavyweights then you must be prepared to take a few knocks.

Some Canadians might question what lasting positive benefits we received from this so-called special relationship. In many cases Canada was never consulted on major changes in U.S. foreign policy, despite our military alliances with the U.S. Subtle and not so subtle pressures have been exerted on Ottawa in matters of trade, foreign policy and even the presence of U.S. magazines operating here. Yet now we hear Enders grousing that Canadian actions have not taken American interests into account. He specifically referred to oil and gas pricing, supplies, and cable television commercial deletions.

It is interesting to note that Canada currently exports more oil to the U.S. each day than all the Arab countries combined. While the National Energy Board has decreed no petroleum exports after 1980, Syncrude development in Alberta, where many U.S. companies are participating has been specifically excluded from the export ban. Deleting U.S. commercial messages from Canadian cable television has been shelved for the time being. Even the long suffering Time-Readers Digest hassle ending up being a half measure. The Readers Digest qualified as a Canadian magazine, keeping its tax privileges, while Time was forced out, victim of a stupid rule, as it were. As for the Foreign investment Review Act, it is a hollow shell. U.S. investment in Canada has continued apace despite its rulings.

If this is the kind of nationalism Enders' government worries about, what would they do if we really got tough? The way the ambassador talks, Canada is still a special case in American eyes. Venezuela and Mexico nationalized their own petroleum industries and the eagle hardly blinked. Canada enacts a few ineffective pieces of nationalistic legislation and we receive veiled warnings. If Canadian nationalism stirs hostile feelings in the U.S. as the former U.S. ambassador to Canada claimed, the Americans are just going to have to put up with our pretensions. Ideas are the only renewable resource we haven't sold out up here.

Whom Should we Heed?

OTTAWA — The bigger government gets, the more incoherent it seems to get.

It is very clear from the public professions of the Trudeau ministers (if not quite so obvious from the Blue Book of spending estimates) that the present government stands solidly for restraint. In their collective judgment, this is what the economic situation demands. We are entitled to look on them as men united in conviction behind their public policy.

From Treasury Board President Jean Chretien's illuminating comments to a Senate committee recently, it is not apparent that cabinet ministers see themselves in exactly this way. According to the president of the treasury board, who speaks with an authority quite beyond challenge: "I'm the only one in the cabinet with the incentive to cut spending."

Textile Board

According to Chretien's fascinating account, he has been able to make headway against wayward colleagues only by urging ministers to make "deals" and by fortifying his suggestions with a bit of pressure. There may even be a problem of disincentives. When expenditures have to be cut, scheming bureaucrats on whom the ministers rely, invariably come up with suggestions calculated to cause the greatest possible political embarrassment to their political chiefs.

But the government does not always act directly to solve grave economic problems. Commonly, it delegates authority to boards. The problems of the textile industry, for example, receive special consideration from the textile and clothing board and the general battle to stabilize prices and incomes has been entrusted to the Anti-Inflation Board.

By an interesting coincidence, we heard from both these boards on the same day. Jean-Luc Pepin, in the public relations role assigned to him by the government, issued a warning that there may be a price surge in the next few months. His point was that price changes have been delayed by uncertainties. As these are clarified, there is a likelihood that prices will advahce.

Meanwhile, a Senate committee, considering textile troubles, heard an interesting suggestion from the textile board which takes a natural interest in the welfare of its clients. The board is obviously persuaded that we import too much. It may also have noted that consumers do not respond very positively to direct action, as was clear some years ago from the reaction to the shirt tax.

JEAN CHRETIEN
. . . let's make a deal

Its recommendation was, therefore, that the department stores should accept a "self-imposed restraint," limiting their purchases of foreign merchandise. According to the board, these stores "do not hesitate to switch their purchases from domestic to off-shore low cost countries without notice and in volume if there is a cost advantage to them."

The board suggests that cost savings are not necessarily passed on to consumers.

There is nevertheless a likelihood that they are passed on because high prices meet with consumer resistance and the department stores compete strongly with each other. It is also the government's view that competition works to keep down prices. That surely is the philosophy of the competition legislation recommended to the present parliament.

Ask Beryl

Here then is an odd but not particularly unusual situation. One emanation of government is solemnly warning the country against coming price increases. Another emanation of government urges the department stores, in the interests of the textile industry, to keep the high cost items on the shelves and to resist the temptation to purchase lower price offerings when opportunity affords.

The Senate committee and the department stores would be well advised to ignore the suggestion. Alternatively, they might consider an invitation to some member of the Anti-Inflation Board (preferably Beryl Plumptre) to comment on the thoughts of the textile and clothing board. If government is to speak with many voices, it is at least important to hear all of them.

RICHARD GWYN

Broadbent Revamps NDP

OTTAWA — Like acolytes approaching an archbishop, the two New Democratic Party intellectuals — party research director Peter Sadlier-Brown and Carleton University professor Steven Langdon — called on economist John Kenneth Galbraith in his study, appropriately book-lined and cluttered, close by Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass.

What, asked the pair, should be the NDP's response to wage and price controls? "Don't criticize them," answered the sage.

Whether good or bad in itself, the flaw in Galbraith's advice was that it was out of date. In a political calculation that, on the evidence of the moment contains more risks than opportunities, the federal NDP has cast itself in adamant and unrelenting opposition to controls.

Different Perspective

The party is thus in opposition, not just to Prime Minister Trudeau but the NDP governments in Manitoba and Sakatchewan, the other provinces, and to the prevailing public sentiment. Its single ally is the trade union movement, and perhaps even only the union leaders, since their members are divided on the issue.

The strategy has its critics within as well as outside the party. "We have to decide whether we are a labor party or a socialist party," says New Democratic Party MP Max Saltsman. "I believe we should be a socialist party."

In narrower political terms, the risks are obvious. "Union-bashing" is a popular public sport. Some of those knocks are bound to land on the NDP.

Yet the strategy also contains opportunities. For the first time since elected to the post last summer, NDP leader Ed Broadbent has been able to stamp his own personality and his ideas upon the party. A month ago in Winnipeg, for example, Broadbent debated toe-to-toe on the controls issue with Manitoba's NDP Premier Ed Schreyer at the party's provincial meeting.

Broadbent also has been able to force his caucus to accept some of the consequences of its alliance with labor. Unionists, by and large, are conservative on social issues. In the past, though, the NDP has championed each cause of the month, from feminism to abolition of capital punishment.

Just before Christmas, Broadbent turned down pleas from the Company of Young Canadians for his support in its fight to survive the government's spending cuts. He also deliberately delayed, despite caucus pressure, expressing approval for the recently announced land claims of the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada.

"We've got to stop always leading from the heart," says Broadbent. "We've got to start focussing on the real concerns,, which are economic concerns, of working people."

The essence of Broadbent's strategy is "to build on strength." The unions may be unpopular in today's opinion polls, but they still have the numbers. If the labor rank-and-file could be convinced to actually vote NDP — which a minority now do — the party's strength would rapidly recover.

Broadbent has identified 60 ridings where NDP prospects either are bright or are hopeful. Between now and the next election he intends to visit these ridings again and again and again.

"On the national level, Ottawa is seen as a straight Liberals vs. Conservatives fight. With only 16 MPs we can only make so much impact in parliament and we can only attract so much national media attention, except on special occasions like the 'corporate welfare bums' issue (during the 1972 election campaign)."

Much as Conservative leader Joe Clark plans to do, Broadbent has mapped out an itinerary that will take him away from Ottawa an average of two days a week and for three weekends out of each four.

"Away from Ottawa, the perspective changes. I can tell my story to the local press. If we go into a town like Fort Francis, Ont., to explain why we oppose wage and price controls, people listen. In Saint John, N.B., where we've never before had 25 people in one room, I drew more than 100 the other week."

Party Split

At the same time, Broadbent depends upon a range of new policies being developed by a back-room group headed by McGill University professor Charles Taylor. (Notable among the group is ex-Waffle leader James Laxer, who now is back in the NDP fold.)

In addition to new policies, in housing, transportation, food and energy, Broadbent looks for old ones to be dropped.

"We've got to be hard-headed. We've got to rid oursleves of inconsistencies like demanding cheap food at the same time as high farm incomes."

If all goes well, what Broadbent calls an "Oshawa-model" NDP will emerge, "identified with working-class people and with working-class issues."

Anyway, says Broadbent, the NDP has no choice. "If our union base goes, we're finished."

Childish Behavior

In 1972 when the NDP came to power I was quite prepared to wait and see how they would perform, although they were not my choice. As a matter of fact I was at times overjoyed by their enthusiasm to do "the right thing" in so many instances.

After about a year and a half I felt time had come to judge the NDP performance. It is an understatement that I was startled, they had shown little business sense, little foresight, most of the things they had done were messed up and inefficient, millions of taxpayers dollars, yours and mine, were spent recklessly in pursuit of their desires and whims, not to mention overruns.

Now with a new government and the opening of the legislature, the NDP (and to my even greater surprise the Liberals and Conservatives) minority, are, on the first day showing that they care little about the people's business. The NDP obviously do not, even now, understand the mess they have brought to this province during their three years in power, nor the monetary world wide problem that exists.

If the NDP, the Liberals and the Conservatives will permit themselves to think about the problems of the province rather than themselves, and let Social Credit have a go at running this province then, maybe then, some useful business will be done in the legislature. We can all judge them after 1½ years of office or so.

Political behavior such as displayed on opening day of the legislature by the NDP, PC and Liberals we can do well without.

Get on with the business and behave like grown, intelligent men, and not like whining stubborn children. If you do not, none of you should sit in the legislative assembly. — E. Hoel, B.A.Sc., Victoria.

Additional Facts

I feel there are some additional facts in the matter of Mayor Young and Mayor Lum's attendance at the condominium seminar in Arizona, sponsored by the Victoria Real Estate Board.

In the first place, housing is a prime concern in our society and it is certainly no benefit to either the real estate business or to the people we serve, to have housing priced out of the market. Simply having municipal governments bury their heads in the sand will not halt progress, and some municipalities in British Columbia are first class examples of what artificially suppressed land and housing development can bring.

How, then, to best proceed? On behalf of all of us, these elected officials were striving to meet the housing question rather than skirt it. They were seeking information about planned housing and solutions to similar problems as they faced our neighbors to the south. Everyone concerned with housing for the generations to come — our children's and grandchildren's chance to own a home — feels the importance of carefully planned housing at a price people will be able to pay. It was to this end that the V.R.E.B. sponsored the heavily-programmed trip to Scottsdale, Ariz. Anyone interested in some of the facts and findings could contact the undersigned, or I'm sure anyone else who attended the seminar. — J. D. Blodgett, Realtor, Victoria.

Alimony Agency

Mr. Vander Zalm, minister of human resources, has announced that he will set up a collection agency to collect unpaid alimony. This move is long overdue and should be applauded. However, I have some concerns about the operation of this agency.

For one thing, it attacks the problem from the wrong end. The effectiveness of an ounce of prevention in this area is demonstrated by the fact that the unified family court in Richmond, B.C. experienced a drop in the percentage of maintenance orders in arrears from 35 per cent to only 10 per cent when the following conditions were present:

1. Separation or conciliation counselling was available to the separating couple so that they could settle matters like amount of maintenance, custody and access to children, etc. out of court and avoid our adversary process in court that is based on finding fault, and

2. Court staff have the time and the mandate to make a friendly phone call when an order is a few days in arrears to find out what the problem is and help solve it.

Even under the humane system described above, there are a few spouses who refuse counselling, ignore their lawyer's advice and their responsibility to their children and will not pay. In these cases the "collection agency" is necessary, but if it is set up without the two conditions listed above, there is a danger it will scare spouses who might have been talked into paying, out of the country or onto welfare themselves as a result of avoiding work.

Another concern I have is that the reports I have seen mention only alimony. I assume Mr. Vander Zalm means to include child maintenance and family court orders as well. Also, he talks about this on terms of "husbands" and "men" only. Our courts are more and more recognizing the abilities of fathers to care for children and are increasingly ordering wives and mothers to pay maintenance. I hope the minister is not planning to let mothers get off without paying maintenance when fathers have costody. The use of the term "spouse" gets around this difficulty. — Jocelyn Gifford, MSW, RSW, formerly Family Counsellor, Unified Family Court, Richmond, 141 Wellington Ave.

Splendid Example

As a citizen greatly concerned about the appalling ravages of inflation in Canada, I consider that the B.C. government should be commended for its decision to reduce the salaries of the premier and cabinet and MLAs.

Also, I commend Ald. Ron MacKenzie for his sterling efforts to fight inflation by brining restraint in aldermanic salaries. — J. C. Uhlman, 2590 MacDonald Drive.

Bad Government Inevitable From 'City of the Blahs'

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
Maclean's

It happens as soon as you get off the plane, walk stiff-legged across 20 yards of frigid tarmac and enter the Ottawa airport terminal. It hits me in the face each time as surely as if it were a tepid facecloth. It is the miasma of Ottawa. My blood congeals, my heart sinks, my pulse rate slows, a melancholy lassitude overcomes me. I know, sadly, that once again I have been immersed in the all-pervading blahs of the capital of the country. Ottawa.

You may think I exaggerate, but most all other refugees from the outside world report the same symptoms. There is something about the town — the atmosphere, the people, the palpable feel to the air — that is discouraging, that is disheartening. If you wish to understand why the government that governs you doesn't govern very well, you have to understand the dismal backwater that is Ottawa. The main problem, of course, is its isolation from reality. That very quality is endemic to the mind of the civil servant, as we know, but silly Queen Victoria reinforced it by perversely plunking the capital down in a spot on the globe where no one really wants to go and no sensible soul would stay.

One of the reasons why British politicians have such sense is that every day as they leave Westminster they shove their way onto the tube or wrestle for a taxi with the common folk. They actually know what a taxpayer looks and smells like. Other, less intelligent countries seek to place their lawmakers in sealed cocoons in sylvan settings as if the clear air would purify their tiny minds. Washington is bad enough, but at least it has a certain power link with New York.

The worst example is Victoria, otherwise known as God's waiting room, floating adrift on a fantasy island, oblivious to real life. Brasilia, naturally, stands as the ultimate monument to planned irrelevancy but our own little Ennui-On-The-Rideau runs a close second for a capital out of touch with the land it is designed to serve.

The problem with Ottawa is that it is inhabited by only three types of people: civil servants, who have no interests; politicians, who have no principles; and journalists, who have no manners. They all talk about the same things, the same gossip, the same stale speculation, the same jokes. They drink their own bath water so much their innards, not to mention their thought processes, grow rusty.

After about three straight days in Ottawa I tend to develop the ying-yangs, a condition brought about by running into my own rumors that I had started several days previously. In Ottawa you continually bump into yourself coming round the corner. The torpor spreads out as if in ripples from that depressing airport terminal. The place is impervious to outside influence. None of the verve of Montreal, only 120 miles away, seeps through. None of the grasping voraciousness of Toronto (not a New York, as someone said, but a failed Boston). Nor even, on the other hand, any essence of what Judy LaMarsh calls the "happy sluggards" of Vancouver. Instead, it is merely the blahs.

The amazing thing about Ottawa is that over the past few years it has become a more interesting place to live. Journalist Doug Fisher states that in terms of middleclass affluence, Ottawa is now "the top large community in the world." There are now 16,000 civil servants making more than $20,000 a year. Top mandarins make $66,000 (Henry Kissinger gets only $60,000). There is skating on the Rideau Canal, 50 miles of bicycle paths laid down by the National Capital Commission at a cost of $1.25 million, the $46-million National Arts Centre to bring culture to the civil service mind. As Fisher says, it is now an almost obscenely "secure and comfortable city" where one has to be a cretin to lose one's job.

The sad fact is that none of this material cushiness has improved the personality of the town. It has resulted only in a more expensive type of dullard, even more smugly reluctant to stray once one's nose is securely in the public trough. There's no flux, no movement. If you leave the press, you move into government flackery. If you are defeated at the polls, you are fixed up with a job. (When the voters disagree with the Liberals, the Liberals prevail.)

Ottawa has a cachet all its own. Every place in town seems just too far to walk, but not far enough for a cab. The Sparks Street mall, a brave idea, is lined with second-rate restaurants. There are no decent shops, as every guilt-ridden conventioneer trying to buy a salving gift for wifey has discovered. That faded Disneyland, the Chateau Laurier, is suffering the lingering death of all railway hotels. Its basement Canadian Grill, a few of the cabinet still dine, reminds me of some faded flower of cuisine in an Adriatic port. Upstairs, in the Cock and Lion bar, executive assistants lunch on martinis and bile. Can we understand, in retrospect, Pierre Trudeau when we recall that he lived for years in a single room in the Chateau while he was a Privy Council adviser? No wonder the social life at 24 Sussex Drive is so dull.

At the base of Ottawa's dullness is the beastly weather. If Jim Coleman describes Winnipeg's climate as 10 months winter and two months hard sledding, Ottawa's is masochism raised to public ritual. It is flagellation by Mother Nature. No wonder Mackenzie King fitted in. As Sharon Churcher of the Wall Street Journal proved in her celebrated (and accurate) critique, Ottawa is colder than Lhasa, Tibet, colder than Helsinki, colder than Moscow. In summer, thanks to Queen Victoria's genius in picking a swampy area at the junction of the Gatineau, Rideau and Ottawa rivers where mosquitoes can breed unmolested, an oppressive blanket of moist air hangs over the city. Mandarins keep fresh shirts in the desk drawer so they can remain kissin' sweet until cocktail hour. God did not intend man to live in a city with two bad seasons.

OTTAWA . . . the mind turns to stone too

In the end, it is the calcification of the mind that does it. I arrive from Toronto, 50 minutes away, and have to wait three days for the locals to get the current magazines so we can talk about the same things. I feel in a space lag, waiting for Alley Oop's time machine to decompress me. The city is largely unaware of the Toronto Star, the biggest paper in the country. Marc Lalonde, one of the most powerful men in town, has been commuting from Montreal since 1967. Ottawa does not represent Canada since nothing in Canada is so dull. If there is lack of reality in the legislation emanating from your capital it is in large part due to the influence of Ottawa itself; yesterday's city tomorrow.

Trudeau: Too Early to Count Him Out Yet

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has lost the confidence of most of the important powers groups in Canada and made active enemies of many of them.

His talk of a new economic order has alienated business. Wage controls have outraged the union leaders who are now dedicated to his destruction.

By threatening to repatriate the constitution without their consent, he has challenged the provincial premiers on whose co-operation he must rely in other, more potent matters.

The news media have been bitter critics for several years, but there is now a new note of excitement in the reporting and some of the commentary is ferocious. One can almost hear the baying and smell the blood.

The extent of dissatisfaction in his own party was apparent last year when about 20 per cent of the delegates to the national conference voted to review Trudeau's leadership. One suspects the vote would be substantially higher now.

The affair of the judges is important not for substance, but for style. It is a symbolic issue which enables the critics to trot out all the favorite codewords: Arrogance, insensitivity, contempt for Parliament, threat to democratic principles.

Equally damaging to the prime minister has been his inept handling of the politics of the unfolding events. For his own protection, he might have asked for the resignation of Andre Ouellet when he was first charged with contempt, pending the outcome of the trial, and he should have accepted the resignation of C. M. Drury when it was offer.

Instead, he chose to regard Ouellet as innocent until found guilty, and he was compassionate to Drury, leaving himself vulnerable to legitimate criticism and illegitimate innuendo.

A prime minister who is thought to be competent in running his cabinet and skillful in politics can survive all sorts of attacks on his character and motives. Incompetence and clumsiness are in the end fatal to reputation.

Trudeau's position is further weakened by the resignation of Robert Stanfield as Conservative leader and the appearance of Joe Clark as the leader of a more spirited and less disunited Opposition. The country was never keen on the idea of having Stanfield as leader, and a squabbling Conservative caucus never looked like an attractive alternative government.

Clark does not appear yet to have made any great impression on the country. He is a fresh face, but a trifle stodgy in his public appearances. He is young and enthusiastic, but inexperienced and untested. The Conservative party, however, looks better than it has for years.

On balance, Clark is probably seen by the voters as a more attractive alternative to Trudeau than Stanfield.

Many people feel that if an election were held tomorrow, Trudeau and his government would be soundly beaten. They say that the mass of voters are as critical of the prime minister as the leaders of the power groups, and there is no particular reason they should be eager to support him when they are beset by inflation, unemployment and disturbing social change.

But there is no election tomorrow, and not likely to be one this year or next. The question is whether the prime minister can recover before he has to face the voters.

The temptation at this stage is to say that his wounds are so deep, his enemies so numerous, his friends so few, that barring some extraordinary event or divine intervention, his decline is irreversible.

But he is a determined man who has demonstrated in the past surprising powers of recuperation, based on his ability to change his style and image to suite new circumstances.

He was on the edge of defeat in 1972 and few thought he would be able to handle a minority parliament or wage an effective election campaign against the opposition. But he did.

The recent appointment of Richard O'Hagan as adviser on public relations is significant because it reveals that Trudeau has at last accepted he has a serious problem in this area and has decided to do something about it. O'Hagan can work no miracles but he is a skilful practitioner with much experience in political communication, and particularly in the sensitive area of relations between the prime minister and the parliamentary press gallery. He would surely not have agreed to join the prime minister's staff unless he were convinced Trudeau is in a mood to make a serious effort to communicate better with the press and public.

We in the media tend to be egotists: Recognition is almost more important than financial reward. One of the reasons Trudeau has been unpopular is that, unlike his predecessors, he has never treated us as equals or even as associates, let alone flattered us. Nor has he employed an effective spokesman to engage in discreet management of the news, which we deplore in public but tend to accept in private when we call a private source in the government for "guidance."

It will be interesting to see how we respond if Trudeau, advised and aided by O'Hagan, now applies himself seriously to changing his relations with the media.

On another front, Trudeau would be foolish to miss the opportunity to present a new image to the public by retiring at least half a dozen of his ministers this summer and to bringing in new personalities and ideas from the backbenches.

He must also seek to develop new policies, perhaps through the medium of a Thinkers' Conference, or put flesh on the bones of his New Society, both to reassure business and enthuse his party.

If he can manage all that, if he is fortunate enought to avoid a new scandal such as the looming Sky Shops affair, if the economy improves, he may possibly recover from his current decline.

But the "ifs" are large, and much depends on his own will to survive. If he is at all inclined to retire from public life, the temptation must be growing week by week.

TRUDEAU . . . fought back before

Let the Chips Fall . . .

State department fellow calls up. He's got some classified documents he wants to leak. Says America ought to know about this. It's red hot stuff. Will I meet him, take the documents, splash them in the papers?

"You think I got a sponge in my head?" I hang up sweating. Suppose the phone is tapped? It rings again. I tear it out of the wall and put it in the trash.

Little while later, a knock at the door. Who could it be? The FBI? Bozo the Congress on one of its $350,000 stamp out these unpatriotic leaks investigations?

"Who's there?"

"A state department fellow. Open up and get your red-hot leaked classified documents?"

I put the chain on the door, then nail up a two-by-four to brace it against bodily assault, go back into the living room. He's standing there smiling. "Came in the back window while my stooge faked you out at the door," he says.

I asked does he want to ruin me in the news game. Doesn't he know I can be wiped out if I start reporting things the government doesn't want people to know? I am scared. Scared of being investigated by Bozo the Congress. Scared the president will sic the FBI onto my bank accounts and love life. Scared Henry Kissinger will tell the world I'm the mug who is destroying America's standing in the world. Scared that the CBS affiliates will phone my boss and ask him to fire me.

"What kind of news hawk are you?" he demands.

"A chicken news hawk," I tell him.

He lays a paper on me. "A subpoena?" I ask. "Read it," he says. I read it. It says Henry Kissinger is strongly in favor of the American home.

He hands me another. It says Henry Kissinger has taken the position that the American mother is the greatest mother on earth. Another. It says Henry Kissinger loves the American flag.

"If you have any journalistic courage, you will expose Kissinger's secret views for what they are," he says, "and let the chips fall where they may."

It is breathtaking. I am almost tempted. "You're giving me — me, a small-bore print writer — the chance to reveal that Henry Kissinger is in favor of home, flag and mother?"

"Do you have the courage to do it?"

Yes, I am almost tempted. But I remember the fate of Daniel Schorr, who revealed that what the papers said Bozo the Congress had found out about the CIA was actually what Bozo the Congress had found out about the CIA. I don't want to be put out of work like Schorr. I don't want to be investigated for revealing to the public what the public already knows.

And I think of this brave state department fellow, who is willing to risk his career so America can know what kind of man Henry Kissinger really is. Do I have the right to help him destroy himself?

I stall. "Do you have any other red-hot documents?" He draws the blinds. Perspiring heavily, he produces a sheaf of papers. Classified records of Kissinger's diplomatic conversations with foreign statesmen! I recoil.

"But — but —" I can't even speak.

"I know what you're going to say," he murmurs. "These papers reveal that Henry Kissinger is absolutely brilliant."

"Dynamite!" I gasp. "Kissinger will be furious."

"He will be thunderstruck," says the state department fellow.

I agree to sleep on the proposition. "But what about you?" I ask as he leaves. "You know, of course, that Bozo the Congress will ferret you out as the leaker."

He smiles the smile of a man who knows a thing or two.

"I don't think we will have much trouble out of old Bozo with this sort of thing," says he.

"You mean it's too hot for them to touch?"

"Let us just say that Bozo the Congress isn't going to risk having the president take away its clown suit," he says.

I am really moved by this guy's courage. I tell him I know it will be very bad for him when Kissinger finally tracks him down as the leaker who exposed Kissinger's brilliance and love of home, flag and mother.

"Yes, terrible," said the state department fellow. He shudders.

"What will Kissinger do?"

"He will call me into his office and threaten that if I ever do it again he will send a note to my mother."

I am unable to subject the poor devil to this kind of treatment.

After he is gone, I put the secret papers in the fire.

A week passes and he phones in a rage. "Are you ever going to print those secret documents," he demands, "or are you trying to get me fired?"

Ernie Hall Was Top Flier In NDP

Former provincial secretary Ernie Hall was the highest-flying minister of the Barrett cabinet, according to the log report of the provincial government's flying service tabled in the legislature Thursday.

Hall used government aircraft 163 times during 1975.

Although Hall's tally was 50 per cent greater than any other cabinet minister, it still fell short of the all-time record of 190 flights set in 1969 by "Flying Phil" Gaglardi.

Gary Lauk, economic development minister in the former NDP government was second behind Hall with 108 flights.

He was followed by Phyllis Young, who held the consumer services portfolio, with 89 flights; Dennis Cocke, then health minister, 74; Jack Radford, former recreation minister, 70; and James Lorimer, municipal affairs and Lorne Nicolson, housing, each with 44.

Former premier Dave Barrett logged 34 flights during the year.

By contrast, the then minister responsible for government aircraft Robert Strachan had 13 flights, and Bob Williams, former resources minister, only four.

Carl Liden used the aircraft least of all — three flights — but then he was only a member of the cabinet for three weeks before the Dec. 11 election.

The total tally of flights logged by NDP members was 626.

In the nine days from the time they were sworn into office to the end of the year 11 of the Social Credit ministers used aircraft.

There were two flights each for Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, Environment Minister James Neilsen and Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Mines Minister Tom Waterland and Transport Minister Jack Davis each had one flight.

BARBER
. . . both sides applaud

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber apologized to the legislature Thursday for statements he made about the sobriety of a fellow MLA.

The freshman MLA was applauded by both sides of the house when he said, as a new member, he had made observations he was now informed were not correct.

Social Credit MLA Jim Chabot (Columbia River) had angrily demanded an apology from Barber calling his remarks despicable and vicious as well as libellous.

Barber said Wednesday he was disappointed with the calibre of performance in the house and added that a member was "less than sober" when he spoke in the legislature the day previously. He would not name the member.

But a Vancouver radio station apparently reported Barber's remarks and added its own nomination for "drunk of the day award."

Chabot said he had never heard such a despicable and vicious attack on a member of the legislature.

NDP house leader Bill King at first came to Barber's defence, saying Barber was not cognizant of the "unwritten rules" of the house concerning remarks of a personal nature.

Speaker Ed Smith was going to make a ruling on the issue at a later date but Barber rose to his feet and apologized.

He said he had not named any member but apologized fully and without hesitation.

Earlier, in his maiden speech to the house, Barber described his reaction to the proceedings of the legislature and asked if it was necessary for so much "rudeness and hostility."

He said he admires the hard work done by the MLAs but cannot admire the "boorish and quite unnecessary rudeness used in the house."

Members are constanly calling each other down and demanding each other's resignations, he said, and every speech is a "triade."

Government Secrecy Concerns Macdonald

Debate on the Throne Speech opening the spring session of the legislature ended Thursday, clearing the way for the Social Credit government's budget speech this afternoon.

The vote on the motion to accept the Throne Speech, read March 17 by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen, passed by a vote of 33 to 18 with all 17 New Democratic Party members and Conservative Leader Scott Wallace voting against. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson was not present for the vote.

During Thursday's debate, Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) said he is worried that the government is becoming more and more secretive.

He called for a Freedom of Information Act which would open up the processes of government and allow the public to scrutinize government documents.

Macdonald also criticized the government for not dropping the ceiling on allowable rent increases to eight per cent from 10.6, as the NDP government had said it would do Jan. 1.

He said the government left the ceiling at 10.6 per cent as a payoff to landlords who he said will receive an extra $5 million "from the hard-pressed tenants of the province."

George Kerster (S.C.-Coquitlam) said it it time to restore a sense of purpose to community colleges and universities in the province.

He also praised the contribution of teachers and school boards toward the school system and warned that "the heavy hand of Victoria must not destroy the public awareness and participation" in the system.

Len Bawtree (S.C.—Shuswap) said it is time to solve the problems facing the forest industry such as too little or no profits, poor employment and ever-increasing costs.

He also complained that the costs of the Worker's Compensation Board have increased excessively and should be controlled.

Norm Levi (NDP-Vancouver–Burrard) said the government, in its attitude toward social programs, is out to punish people.

The theme of the throne speech is one of restraint, he added, and the ones who are going to feel restraint first are the little people and the poor people.

Levi said it is obvious that as far as the Mincome program is concerned the government is going to revert to the days before the former New Democratic Party took office when people had to pass a strict means test before qualifying for government income supplements.

NO DECISION ON DIRECTORS

Premier Bill Bennett told the legislature Thursday the government has made no decisions regarding new directors or management of Crown corporations.

He was replying to a question from Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) as to whether Ray Williston, lands and forest minister in a previous Social Credit government, was being considered for the position of president of B.C. Railway.

Lauk said Williston was a B.C. Rail director when, according to a report prepared for the former New Democratic Party government, a railway deficit of $52.7 million had been hidden from the public.

Williston, defeated in the August, 1972, election, is general manager of the New Brunswick Forest Authority.

He was contacted in Fredericton Thursday and said he will return to B.C. within the next three months but declined comment about the reports of his appointment as B.C. Rail president.

If he is appointed to the position he would succeed Dave Barrett, former NDP premier.

BRYNMORE FARM NETS $440,000

The provincial government paid $440,000 for the 106-acre Brynmore farm on the Saanish Peninsula.

The price amounts to $3,300 an acre with the improvements valued at $97,000. Environment Minister Jim Neilsen told the legislature Wednesday.

Neilsen said the farm was appraised by the land branch after farm owner Gordon (Bud) Mitchell approached the land commission last February to buy the land.

The appraisal valued the land at $4,800 an acre, he said.

French TV Furore Unfounded—Boyle

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The brouhaha raised over a proposed French language television station serving B.C. is unjust and unfounded, Harry Boyle, chairman of the Canadian Radio Television Commission said in an interview Thursday.

Boyle, in Victoria to attend the B.C. Association of Broadcasters 29th annual convention disclaimed charges that the CRTC was attempting to foist the French language on the people of the province.

On the contrary, Boyle said, the CRTC's concern rests not so much with the bilingual issue as the administration of an accelerated coverage plan.

He pointed out the CRTC has pledged to bring Canadian television to all communities with a population more than 500 and Canadian radio to centres with a population more than 200.

Although that aim generally applies to the sparsely populated northern parts of the country, it also includes the pockets of French-speaking people in English Canada and vice versa.

He said he gets far more pressure from the million or so English people scattered throughout Quebec wanting English language programming than he received from the French-speaking communities in the west desiring French stations.

He noted the CRTC recently approved an English station in Chicoutimi, Que., despite the fact there are only about 2,500 English-speaking people living there.

"I have sympathy for the English in Quebec because they have little or no choice in what they can hear or see on television or radio.

"But out here, why, the people have enormous choice."

To oppose a French station just because it might impair one American station (KIRO Channel 7) and interfere with the viewers' freedom to see what he wants on television was "a selfish attitude."

"It's not freedom of choice that's at stake," he stated, "but rather it's the freedom to see a particular show at whatever time you wish."

He said that within a year, converters should be on the market to restore the station or stations temporarily bumped off the cable system.

"For the interim, there's bound to be some problems but it is wrong to make a French language station a cause celebre."

He said he could understand although not accept the opposition.

"Some people feel threatened, some are biased, and some just don't like the idea."

However, he felt the opposition was not nearly as great as people might have been led to believe.

"We've got a lot of support from younger people, university students and teachers," he said.

The support would likely be greater, he said if more people realized any French station would be part of the national French system and thus would carry a plethora of cultural programs . . . and all the at-home Montreal Canadien hockey games.

Boyle said the CRTC expects to make a decision by the end of April on the application for a French-language station.

On another proposal — to have a second television station in Victoria — Boyle declined to comment.

"We've only just heard the application."

He noted, however, that even if the second station was licenced tomorrow, it would take two years begore it would be on the air.

Boyle said he came to the broadcaster's convention to warn that unless Canadian stations reflect the Canadian experience, they won't survive.

"No one can expect the situation to correct itself. If the broadcasters don't produce things relative here, there's no hope for them."

TV Violence Censorship?

J. J. Cronin, president of the J. Walter Thompson Co. Ltd. advertising agency, Thursday told the British Columbia Association of Broadcasters that excessive violence in television programming is resulting in a gathering storm of reaction against commercial TV, advertising agencies and their clients.

Cronin quoted from Ontario's Lamarsh Royal Commission on Violence in the communications industry that "there is a relationship between television viewing and an increase in aggressive tendencies. . . ."

He suggested that if the current course of events continues, "there is little doubt that violent programming will virtually be regulated off the air, resulting in continuing restrictions on freedom of action by private broadcasters and some form of censorship over programming in general."

He said some advertisers are already moving towards removing their advertising from violent televison shows. Cronin said this is because advertisers are being labelled as the perpetrators of objectionable programming.

Cronin said it isn't true that viewers are abandoning family shows for sex and violence. When good alternative programming is placed before viewers, they select the alternatives, he said.

Cronin said that when the findings of the Lamarsh commission are made public, the impact will be national, and it will be a safe bet that broadcasters will feel the brunt in the form of some formal censorship of program content.

Cronin said there is a need for broadcasters to begin some positive action on their own to maintain control over the entertainment they offer to viewers.

He said another major issue facing the industry is the inflationary increase in advertising rates and a resulting decline in the productivity of television as an advertising vehicle. He said the cost squeeze of television time is strangling many advertisers, and has continued unimpeded despite the imposition of wage and price controls.

He said television is out of step, out of tune with the realities of supply and demand.

Cronin warned the broadcasters that eventually, advertisers will have to bring excessive rate increases to the attention of the federal anti-inflation board.

Western

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. reports consolidated earnings before extraordinary items for the six months ended Feb. 29 were up over the same period the previous year. Earnings for the latest period amounted to $2,175,198 or 58 cents a share, compared with $1,174,667, or 30 cents a share for the similar period the year earlier. The company says greatly reduced debt permitted a reduction in interest costs to $205,013 from $1,340,135, contributing to the improvement in earnings for the period. Western Broadcasting owns radio station CKNW in New Westminster, B.C., as well as stations in Calgary, Winnipeg and Hamilton, Ont. The company also has controlling interest in Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

Federal Industries Ltd. of Winnipeg has announced more than 90 per cent of the outstanding shares of the White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd. have been deposited under the cash offer dated Dec. 12, 1975. Federal said it will continue to take up and pay for all shares deposited under the offer of $9.50 a share until its expiry April 12.

Brenda

Blaming a 35-per-cent decline in copper prices and increased costs of smelting, refining and transportation, Brenda Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for 1975 of $2 million, or 47 cents a share, compared with $8.4 million, or $1.96 a share in 1974. In an annual report to shareholders, John Hall, company president, said that in spite of increased production in copper and molybdenum, net revenues were $8.2 million lower in 1975. The provision for income taxes, mining taxes and royalties had a serious effect on earnings and accounted for 65 per cent of pre-tax income, he said.

GHI Mortgage Investors has decided to make a 100 to one subdivision of units, reducing the face value of GHI units trading on the Winnipeg Stock Exchange to $10 from $1,000. The move, approved at the annual meeting of the Winnipeg-based mortgage trust, is designed to generate wider interest in the units and to improve their trading potential. Arnold A. Portigal, chairman of GHI, also told the meeting there are plans to list trust units soon with the securities commissions of Alberta and British Columbia.

CPI

Canadian Pacific Investment Ltd. earned a record net income of $142 million for 1975, compared to $130.6 million the previous year, the company reports. Net income per common share was $2.41 compared with $2.29 in 1974. The report attributed the company's record earnings in light of world wide recession and high inflation, to the diverse nature of its interests, which include oil and gas, coal mining, real estate, pulp and paper, hotel and food services and finance.

Olympic Jewelry Firm Bankrupt

MONTREAL (CP) — Opera Diamond, which owns exclusive rights for the distribution of jewelry bearing the Montreal Olympic insignia, has been petitioned into bankruptcy, a spokesman for the trustee, Abraham Nozets, reports.

Arrangements have been made to ensure that sales of the jewelry are uninterrupted, an Olympic organizing committee spokesman said. An announcement concerning a change in distributorship is expected soon.

Opera was petitioned into bankruptcy Feb. 25, the trustee's spokesman said. Details of the failure have not been compiled.

The first meeting of creditors was postponed to April 9 from March 30.

Trust General du Canada, which holds a bond from Opera for about $1.3 million, took possession of Opera's assets on Feb. 23, the spokesman said. An additional bond for $500,000 is said to be held by other interests.

Demers Takes Control Over MSE

He Helped Bring an End to Scandals That Had Rocked Quebec Finance Firms

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Demers, lawyer and government official, returns to the Montreal Stock Exchange on April 15 after an 11-year absence to become its new president.

The appointment of Mr. Demers, currently chairman of the Quebec Securities Commission, was announced Thursday by the exchange.

Mr. Demers, 38, replaces Michel Belanger, who steps down April 1 to become president of the Provincial Bank of Canada.

In a brief interview, Mr. Demers would not comment on his new job except to say he was "looking forward to it."

He suggested it would be improper to discuss his thoughts on running the exchange while still active in the securities commission, the provincial government agency that regulates the securities industry.

Montreal-born Mr. Demers joined the stock exchange in 1962, a year after being admitted to the bar and by 1964 had been promoted assistant secretary.

During the October, 1970, kidnapping crisis, he was named by the provincial government to bargain for the release of James Cross, British trade commissioner. Mr. Cross was released, while Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister, was killed by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

After a stint with the Quebec education department and several years of law practice, Mr. Demers was appointed in 1972 as the securities commission chairman.

That appointment followed several years of scandals that had rocked Montreal's investment community and prompted the Quebec government to appoint Mr. Demers and Mr. Belanger—both capable civil servants—to their respective jobs.

Observers believe the two men helped improve the national and international image of the Montreal investment community and prevented the Montreal exchange from being swallowed up by its larger rival, the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The Montreal exchange handled 23.9 per cent of the value of securities traded in Canada last year, while the Toronto exchange handled 70.6 per cent.

If the Montreal exchange were swallowed up, it would be a blow to the Quebec government in its efforts to strengthen the province's economic power within Confederation.

Relations between the Montreal and Toronto exchanges are not considered ideal and became testy during the recent fruitless negotiations to form one Canadian options market.

Each exchange eventually opted to form its own—to the disappointment of Mr. Belanger who had been largely responsible for introducing options trading to Canada.

Syncrude Over One Hurdle

OTTAWA (CP) — The three private and three government participants in the controversial Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands extraction project have finally agreed on one of the contentious issues which have delayed for almost a year the signing of the final Syncrude agreement.

During the period of the plant construction, that is to about 1978, Syncrude will allow a 15 per cent rate of return for the Alberta government-controlled Alberta Energy Co. on the utility plant and the pipeline to be built and operated by the AEC.

After constructin, the rate of return and, therefore ,the overall charges on the two projects will be renegotiated with AEC, subject to binding arbitration if necessary — a position both Ontario and Ottawa supported.

Just as important, the rate of return even after arbitration could not be lower than 13 per cent or higher than 22 per cent for the utility plant and not lower than 15 per cent nor higher than 22 per cent for the pipe line.

Alberta Energy Minister Donald Getty, who confirmed the general agreement involving the Syncrude partners and the AEC on the AEC's rate of return, said that progress was also being made on a number of other contentious issues during special meetins being held in Calgary.

More Grain

BERLIN (Reuter) — East Germany is buying more grain than usual from the United States this year, with total orders possibly reaching four million tons, U.S. sources said. This has been caused by a combination of a bad Soviet harvest and last summer's drought in East Germany, the sources said.

2. Property taxes are absorbed in full or almost in full by the annual home owner grant.
3. Home owner purchase grant usually applies.
4. Comparatively very low service and maintenance costs.
5. Homes are usually sold fully equipped with appliances, drapes, carpets, etc. often fully furnished.

Manor Faces Tax Debt Suit

Oak Bay is getting ready to take its largest delinquent taxpayer to court to recover $57,532 owing on last year's property tax account.

Finance committee Thursday recommended that council start legal proceedings against Oak Bay Manor, 2251 Cadboro Bay, the only delinquent taxpayer not heard from in the municipality's last attempt to persuade eight property-owners to settle their outstanding bills.

By taking similar action in county court, the city of Victoria has collected nearly $700,000 in overdue taxes from more than 100 owners in recent weeks.

Ald. Norman Pimlott, of the finance committee, said the manor originally owed $86,121 in taxes, plus a penalty for delinquency, but the retirement home had made payments to reduce the bill to $57,532 by paying all that was outstanding for the year 1974.

When the municipality became concerned about unpaid back taxes about 18 owners were involved, including both residential and commercial properties with about $120,000 owing.

The amount outstanding at present is $72,927 including Oak Bay Manor.

Pimlott said all were making efforts to pay up.

In other business, the committee heard representations from residents of King George Terrace, on Gonzales Hill, where Realspan Properties Ltd. has applied for permission to subdivide a piece of property on the rock to build two single family dwellings.

Neighboring property-owners generally favor only one additional house on the site, said Pimlott. He said there was concern about the lack of offstreet parking at that narrow point on the east side of the rock where the street climbs and curves simultaneously.

They also expressed reluctance about the blasting that would be required to prepare foundations.

The committee made no decision.

Aldermen recommended another application, to erect an apartment building on the site of a former store at Cadboro Bay and Eastdowne, be rejected on grounds that the structure would be too high — a total of 55 feet.

Weekend Escaper Nabbed

One of two men missing from William Head prison since last weekend was arrested in Courtenay Thursday.

James Harvey Ouellette has been charged with car theft and impaired driving. There were indications a more serious charge would be laid later.

Still missing is Douglas Eric Ostergard. Both men had been described as dangerous by police.

4 Billion On Earth By Sunday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There should be four billion people on earth by Sunday, according to a new estimate from the Population Reference Bureau (PRB).

That milestone comes a year later than some demographers had predicted, thanks to a slight drop in global population growth rates during the past year or two.

But it still means the world's burgeoning population will have taken only 15 years to add a billion to its numbers. It took 31 years for the world's population to reach the three billion level in 1961 and 80 years to reach two billion in 1930.

Dr. Leon F. Bouvier, vice-president of the private, non-profit organization, said the bureau's revised estimates show the population is growing at the rate of 1.8 per cent a year, down from a 1.9 per cent estimate last year.

Even at the lower rate, the world could find that it has five billion people by 1989, only 13 years away.

The new PRB figures show there were 3,982,815,000 people on earth on Jan. 1, and 3,994,812,000 March 1. The four billion mark is expected to be hit Sunday, with 4,000,824,000 people on April 1.

"I really think the rate of growth is going to start declining ever so slightly because of declining fertility," Bouvier said. "I think there's some evidence of progress — ever so slow, much too slow."

The PRB's estimates are based on data that range from good to crude. Complicating the process is that one-fifth of the world's people live in China. Demographers must make educated guesses as to the number of people in China because the government there does not report population figures.

CRACKDOWN ON MEAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four stores have pleaded guilty to charges of violations of the British Columbia Meat Inspection Act laid in a crackdown by federal consumer affairs officials.

Ernie Bauer, federal district inspector, said Thursday the crackdown involves small meat stores operating in the Fraser Valley from Delta to Chilliwack.

He identified the stores that pleaded guilty to having uninspected meats in stock as Central Meat Market and S and U International Meats and European Sausage Ltd., both of Surrey; Tsawwassen Quality Meats Ltd. of Delta and Kurt Krack of Abbotsford.

Bauer said fines imposed ranged from $75 to the maximum $100.

He said charges have also been laid against five other meat outlets.

The federal department crackdown is being carried out by 12 resident federal inspectors in areas covered by the Provincial Inspection Act. These areas include the lower mainland, the Victoria area and the Peace River region.

Woman Sentenced May 3

A 35-year-old Colwood woman will be sentenced May 3 in Victoria provincial court after pleading guilty Thursday to five charges containing 17 counts of theft or possession of known stolen property and involving goods worth more than $2,000.

Margaret Elizabeth Atkinson, 574 Tena Place, originally faced six charges containing 28 counts of theft and 25 of possession of known stolen property, but all but 17 of the counts were withdrawn or stayed because of duplication and lack of proof of ownership.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang said most of the 11 theft counts involved goods stolen between Sept. 1 and Nov. 8, 1975, and stored at a friend's home for re-sale. The six possession counts mentioned goods recovered by police Nov. 8 or shortly afterward.

The friend, another 35-year-old woman, pleaded guilty last week to five counts of possession of known stolen property and was sentenced this week by another judge to a two-year-term of probation.

Lang said the items in the 17 counts were a marine water pump, a marine compass, a portable radio, a set of stereo receivers, a bottle of cologne, three sweaters, three suits, a dress, a jacket, hockey pads, a socket set, an electric drill, a casette recorder and a meter kit.

Alder asked for a pre-sentence report and a psychiatric assessment and set sentencing for May 3.

Mothers Only by Choice, Pro-Abortionist Pleads

Every mother should be a mother by choice, a church panel on abortion was told Thursday.

Speaking as one of a three-woman forum at the Unitarian Church, co-ordinator Mary Anne Erickson, of the Canadian Association for Repeal of Abortion Law, supported the view that only the pregnant woman can make the moral decision of whether or not to have an abortion.

Restrictive laws, she noted, are made by men more concerned with population growth than women's rights, and the law at present is discriminatory.

Victoria feminist Lynn Greenhough, also believes in freedom of choice for the woman, and argued there is historical data that women have assumed the right to decide, whether that is legal or not.

In Scandinavia and Britain, she said, there is liberal law and strong contraceptive programs. There is also a low abortion rate.

The quality of a woman's life should not be at the mercy of male-controlled governments, she said.

The third panelist Margot Ney, wife of psychiatrist Phillip Ney and co-author of How to Raise a Family for Fun and Profit, took the position that abortion is not a woman's right.

She cited a California study showing that men are responsible for pressuring women into having abortions.

Women who do have abortions suffer mental stress, whereas mothers who keep their babies are not subject to the same psychological upset; furthermore there are few medical reasons for abortion today, and in any case they remain a risky procedure, she said.

There is a weight of scientific evidence to support the conclusion that the foetus is a person at conception, requiring warmth, nurture and civil protection, Ney said, and traditionally a strong taboo against killing the unborn.

An audience of about 50 participated in the discussion, many stating their favor of liberalized abortion law.

Clamps Facing Insurance Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — The government probably will extend its wage and price controls program to cover about 310 extra property and casualty insurance companies as recommended by the anti-inflation board.

The board's recommendation has not yet gone to cabinet but a government source said the cabinet probably would agree to include so-called general insurance companies with less than 500 employees to ensure adequate coverage of the industry.

The recommendation was tabled Thursday in the Commons by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald.

It followed a cabinet request on March 8 that the board inviestigate the advisability of including all property and casualty companies under the program.

Inclusion of the extra companies probably would be retroactive to March 8 rather than Oct. 14, when the controls program was introduced.

The recommendation, signed by board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin, said there are about $3.8 billion in property and insurance premiums issued each year and 75 per cent of these are issued by companies with less than 500 employees.

The federal department of insurance estimated there are about 310 such companies.

The remaining 25 per cent of the premiums are charged by the 13 companies already under controls on the basis of having 500 or more employees.

Pepin said control of only the large companies did not ensure adequate control of the industry because of their small market share.

All general insurance companies should be subject to the controls "in order to best achieve the aims of the anti-inflation program."

The controls currently apply to about 51,000 companies. This includes about 10,000 companies with 500 employees or more and construction companies with 20 or more employees.

On March 8, the government announced the program was being extended, retroactive to Dec. 16, to cover 41,000 additional companies — those involved in associated bargaining with unions in construction, trucking, grain handling, long-shoring and most of the shipping industries.

The cabinet request to consider inclusion of smaller general insurance companies followed announcement by the board that complaints about insurance premium increases — primarily auto insurance — were the second most common area of consumer grievances received by the board. The most common complaint involved food prices.

Pepin said in the recommendation to the cabinet that property and casualty insurance has a high profile with the public.

Consumer complaints resulted in many cases from premium increases announced by companies last July but taking effect as individual policies came up for review.

"In all but a few instances the companies in question do not come under the mandatory compliance requirements," Pepin said.

Pepin said the board had been reviewing premium increases announced by three of these small companies since the program had been introduced.

He said the board had been discussing justification of the increases with the companies, presumably in the hopes of achieving voluntary compliance with the program.

He agreed the board clearly had no authority to insist the premium increases be limited to the amount needed to cover higher costs, as the program generally requires.

But Mr. Pepin also suggested the board was having difficulty getting the companies to submit informatin needed to determine whether the premium increases were justified.

PM Pitch To Castro?

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he will consider joining the United States and Britain in urging Premier Fidel Castro to keep Cuban soldiers out of Rhodesia.

But he expressed doubt in answer to questions from Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore) in the Commons that any expression of his could change the mind of the Cuban.

He noted that he already told Castro during his Cuban visit two months ago that he believes foreign troops should stay out of African affairs.

Crouse had asked the prime minister to urge Castro in the name of world peace to withdraw the 12,000 troops he had in southern Africa.

Board Chops 12 More Pay Pacts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board Thursday published a list of 15 new decisions taken on proposed pay awards, recommending that 12 of the settlements be reduced and approving three.

The board says until it works through a large backlog of wage cases now before it — estimated at around 1,000 — it will release its decisions in groups of 20 to 30 every second week.

Among the three approved pay awards was a 14.4-per-cent increase during one year for 550 non-union employees at the Listowell, Ont., plant of Campbell Soup Co. Ltd. of Toronto.

Also accepted was a 14.7 per cent increase in one year for 132 members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union employed by Fresh-Pak Ltd. of Burnaby.

The board approved a 16.1-per-cent negotiated pay raise for 29 members of Local 29 of the United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers of America in the first year of a two-year contract with Wabco Ltd. of Hamilton.

Among the 12 agreements in which reductions were recommended were three school boards.

A reduction to 22.4 per cent from 27.4 per cent was recommended for 206 secondary school teachers employed by the Haldimand County board of education.

The 524 secondary teachers with the Lambton County board of education was told to trim a negotiated raise of 26.2 per cent to 22.2 per cent.

Both teacher groups were represented by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation and both contracts were for one year.

A reduction to 23.8 per cent from 27.8 per cent was ordered for a one-year pay award negotiated by 350 teachers with the Halton Roman Catholic Separate School Board.

The Globe and Mail also says the board has turned down the salary increase awarded to Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers by an arbitrator.

The newspaper says the 39.2-per-cent increase over two years has been ordered reduced several percentage points.

The reduction might be as much as seven points over two years, the newspaper says.

George Orser of the Anti-Inflation Board compensation branch said the Toronto teachers's award has been discussed but there is nothing to announce.

Ron Johnstone, Anti-Inflation Board executive director, would not comment on the report.

In other cases, the board held 323 members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers union who are employed by Atlantic Sugar, a division of Atlantic Consolidated Foods Ltd. of Sain John, N.B., to 8.3 per cent. They had negotiated a 14 per cent raise in one year.

Sixteen members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers who work for Brockville Chemicals Industries Ltd. were told to reduce to 20 per cent a 25-per-cent raise they had negotiated.

A reduction to 13.3 per cent from 15.5 per cent was recommended for 381 employees of DeHaviland Aircraft of Canada, Toronto, in the first year of a three-year agreement. They are members of the United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Workers of America union.

The board decided that 35 members of the Transport and Allied Workers Union employed by the concrete products division of General Supply of Canada (1973) Ltd. in St. John's, Nfld., should receive only a 24 per cent raise, rather than 54.7 per cent, in the first year of a two-year agreement.

A reduction to 14 per cent from 19.6 per cent was recommended for 135 members of the Hotel and Restaurant and Bartenders Union at Ontario Hydro's Camp Bruce complex.

The reduction applies to the first year of a two-year accord.

A negotiated pay award of 19 per cent in one year for 125 members of the Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers Union of Stanley Structures Ltd. of Belleville, Ont., was ordered reduced to 14 per cent.

The board decided a reduction to 15 per cent from 23.2 per cent was required in the first year of a two-year agreement for 302 members of the Centrale des Syndicates Democratiques employed by Treco In. of St. Romauld, Que.

And 104 members of the office and Professional Employees Union employed by Vachon Inc. of Ste. Marie de Beauce, Que., were told to reduce to 17 per cent from 21.1 per cent a pay raise in the first year of a two-year contract.

Lockheed Tag Hiked?

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government fails to reach an agreement with Lockheed Aircraft Corp. by the end of the month, the estimated $1 billion price for 18 patrol planes could increase.

Government ministers said this week they hope there will be no increase in that event but Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday the government has received no assurances from Lockheed.

The price Lockheed has quoted for the aircraft is good until the end of this month.

The Lockheed proposal already has been extended from January.

Goyer and Defence Minister James Richardson have said they hope the financing difficulties that have delayed signing of a contract will be solved by the end of the month.

And both said failing agreement they hope Lockheed will grant a new extension.

Goyer said talks have been held with Lockheed on the question.

George Kallinber, head of Lockheed Canada, said in an interview later he could not say what would happed after March 31.

But, he added, he is optimistic a financing agreement will be reached before then and the program will go forward.

Chretien Rakes Opposition Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board president Jean Chretien accused opposition parties Thursday of irresponsible and contradictory demands for further cuts in government spending.

"They are not really interested in a more efficient public service or in more effective government programs," he told the Commons.

"What they want is blood on the floor and a knife in the financial gut of every department, even if its operations are vital to the Canadian economy, even if thousands of people are thrown out of work and even if economic and social progress is brought to a halt."

Chretien's attack enraged Progressive Conservatices as the Commons debated a government bill asking for almost $5 billion to pay its bills until the end of June, the first quarter of the 1976-77 fiscal year.

The bill, approved by the Commons, also gives the government authority to borrow up to $6 billion.

Chretien said the opposition engages in shameless double-talk on the question of financial restraint.

"There is not a single question period in which they do not rise to ask for more spending," he said.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the opposition had a bigger say over government expenditures when the spending estimates were considered on the floor of the Commons rather than in committee outside the House.

Under the old system, changed in 1968, there was no time limit on questioning ministers. Those who tried to cover up faced more questions, said Knowles.

Leave Us Alone MDs Urge MPs

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian Medical Association Thursday urged MPs to leave doctors alone in the current campaign to cut costs and to concentrate on areas of health care "where the big bucks are."

The association appeared to get unanimous support from all four Conservative members on the Commons committee before which it was appearing.

They were all doctors too.

But Liberal members of the committee were not impressed by the CMA argument that the bill before Parliament to limit in future the federal share of increased medicare costs will lead to a rationing of physicians' services, a deterioration in the quality of medical care in Canada, or both.

Bob Kaplan (Lib.—York Centre) and Simma Holt (Lib.—Vancouver-Kingsway) accused the doctors of using "scare" tactics and noted that the profession is in one of the highest income groups in the country.

CMA president Dr. L. C. Grisdale of Edmonton argued that the provision to set ceilings on federal medical care expenditures after an initial two years "after consultation with the provinces" will take responsibility from provincial governments where it belongs and place it in the hands of the federal cabinet.

Grisdale said that medicare costs depend on factors which vary from province to province and from year to year and which can't be determined in advance by the central government.

He also stated that the provinces have exercised control over medicare costs "very effectively."

The CMA president produced statistics to show that while Canada spent 2.6 per cent of the gross national product on the hospital insurance program in 1972, and 3.05 per cent in 1975, the percentage spent on medicare during the same period decreased from 1.33 per cent to 1.19 per cent.

Grisdale warned that the failure of the federal government to provide "realistic financial support" for medical care programs in the "have not" provinces — he singled out New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in particular — will have serious effects on the ability of these provinces to fund their medicare programs.

"We believe that the effect of this legislation will result in the rationing of services and-or a deterioration in the quality of medical care," he declared.

Under the bill before Parliament, the maximum per capita increase in federal cost sharing would be 13 per cent in 1976-77, 10.5 per cent in 1977-78 and 8.5 per cent thereafter.

Grisdale argued that because of rising overhead costs, and the willingness of doctors to be responsible in negotiating salary formulas with provincial medicare committees, their taxable income actually decreased on a percentage basis in 1972-73.

He argued that only 16 per cent of total health care costs go toward doctors' fees under medicare.

CMA president-elect Dr. E. W. Barootes of Regina, noted that doctors were one of the first groups in Canada to agree to participate in the government's anti-inflation program because "we felt it was our patriotic, national duty."

But he argued that when the medicare cutbacks are added to the income controls under the anti-inflation guidelines, doctors are placed in "double jeopardy."

He accused the government of picking on doctors because they are the easiest to get at and argued that greater savings could be made by cutting costs in other areas such as hospital insurance "where the big bucks are."

However, under questioning from Kaplan, Grisdale acknowledged that before the anti-inflation program began, doctors were asking for a 35 to 40 per cent increase in fees to bring them up to the comparative income level of five years ago.

He also admitted that the federal cost sharing limits under the bill for 1976-77 and 1977-78 would not damage the quality of medical care.

Kaplan observed that despite the medical profession's warning in the past that legislation would affect the quality of service, the flow of doctors has not diminished.

"You can't fool the people over and over again," he stated.

Poles Sign Fishing Agreement

OTTAWA (CP) — An agreement covering the growing Polish fishing operation off the West Coast and an interim bilateral agreement on Polish fishing when Canada gains 200-mile off-shore jurisdiction has been signed by Poland and Canada, external Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday.

The West Coast agreement covers species to be caught, quotas, closed areas beyond the current 12-mile limit and co-operative measures to ensure compliance with the agreement. No more details were available.

The 200-mile agreement, which still needs approval by both governments, will allow Polish fishing within a 200-mile limit for fish deemed surplus to Canadian needs.

MacEachen said he expected the bilateral agreement to be signed soon. Canada already has similar agreements with Spain and Norway and one with Portugal awaiting ratification by the two governments. Canada also has an arrangement with France covering fishing under a 200-mile limit.

Time Lashed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's bill to take away tax privileges from Canadians who advertise in foreign magazines has a potential for abuse but is worth the risk, Senator Fred Rowe (L—Newfoundland) said Thursday.

He told the Senate there is inherent in the legislation the possibility of undue interference with freedom of the press. But Parliament could guard against it.

The Canadian edition of Time magazine folded after the government announced its intention to take away the right of Canadian advertisers to deduct advertising costs. Progressive Conservatives in the Commons and many senators have opposed the bill.

"I do no believe that Time needs all that sympathy," said Senator Rowe.

"In my opinoin Time has had a very profitable enterprise here in the production of its Canadian edition.

Senior Mandarins Huddle

OTTAWA (CP) — In an effort to reduce government operating costs and increase productivity, or output per worker, a senior committee of deputy ministers has been created, Treasury Board president Jean Chretien said Thursday.

It is to include deputy ministers from seven departments and two agencies, including the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

The vaguely-defined terms of reference for the committee include an instruction to "identify those areas in which improvements can be made in the management and control of administrative inputs."

It is to report every six months to the treasury board and, if necessary, to cabinet on its progress, a treasury board statement says.

POISON DUMPING END URGED

VANCOUVER (CP — The director of Westwater Research Centre says dumping poisonous chemicals into the Fraser River must end, and a serious scientific study of the damage already done must be started.

In the text of a lecture given Thursday, the last in the Westwater lecture series, Irving K. Fox says the way such things could be done is to set up a separate political committee of the Greater Vancouver Regional District dedicated to environmental protection of the river, particularly its mouth.

A study by the Westwater staff indicates such a committee could cost at least $358,000 and at most $695,000 a year. That would include a separate civil service component including scientific staff to make continuing studies of the waters of the Fraser that have been found to contain substances that defy analysis in addition to well-known poisons such as polychlorinated bi-vinyls and mercury.

The environmental protection committee would co-ordinate environmental protection services now being provided by a variety of agencies of provincial, federal and localg overnments, Fox said.

He said the GVRD should also put into efffect a program to prevent industrial firms from dumping toxic chemicals into the sewer systems of the urban area. A program of monitored controls and incentives would include automatic fines for polluters, he added.

This program would cost about $300,000 a year in addition to the committee costs, Fox said.

He said tests of flesh of aquatic creatures had found a number of toxic materials.

BROADBENT CALLS DAVE TO WIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed Broadbent, federal leader of the New Democratic Party, predicted Thursday that provincial NDP leader Dave Barrett would win his Vancouver East byelection.

Broadbent, beginning a four-day informal tour of the Vancouver and Victoria areas, said at a news conference there is no question that the former premier is the best man to lead the NDP in British Columbia.

Barrett was defeated in Coquitlam riding in the provincial election last December. Date for the byelection has not been set.

Ferry Fare Abuses

Vancouver (CP) — A spokesman for British Columbia Ferries says there is nothing the service can do about buses on the Howe Sound-Jervis Inlet ferry runs.

The spokesman, who asked to remain unidentified, said the system is abused by people who claim to be residents of the Sunshine Coast and are issued commuter cards, entitling them to cut-rate fares on the ferry runs.

The card enable use of the ferries at $4 instead of $6 for a car, plus $1 instead of $2 a head for drivers and passengers.

"The way the system is laid out we can't do much about it," said the ferry spokesman. "There's no way we can stop them."

The spokesman suggested that the commuter cards be issued in future by municipal offices in the area, or by the RCMP.

He said that while it is illegal to make a fase declaration of residency, no one has been prosecuted.

Persons who make a false declaration under oath are guilty of an indictable offence and are subject to a maximum of 14 years in prison.

The ferries spokesman said there are about 50,000 commuter cards in circulation. The estimated total population of the entire Powell River area and the Sunshine Coast Regional District, which covers the Sechelt, Gibsons and Pender Harbor areas, is 37,800.

Regulations state that only permanent residents of the regional district and Powell River qualify for the cards. Summer or part-time residents are not eligible.

But as ferry officials agree, anyone who wants a card can obtain one. A person has only to make a sworn declaration at either the Horseshoe Bay or Langdale terminal that he is a fulltime resident. No further proof is required of his actual residency. A form is filed and the card issued.

Don Lockstead, NDP MLA for the riding, said both he and his wife hold commuter cards, which also cover their five children.

Hospital Aid Cut Likely

VANCOUVER (CP) — Funds for a proposed $20 million new emergency centre at the Vancouver General Hospital may be cut in half by Health Minister Bob McClelland, it was revealed at the hospital's board of trustees meeting Thursday.

Ben Wosk, chairman of the hospital building committee, said that during a meeting Tuesday with McClelland in Victoria, the health minister proposed the costs should be no higher than $10 million.

Wosk told the board the committee thinks it advisable to accept this amount in order that something can get started in renovating the hospital.

He said the new centre might be constructed within the sum if the teaching facilities are deleted.

Wosk said McClelland was going to ask Education Minister Pat McGeer if some of the health resources fund — a joint federal-provincial grant for medical educational facilities — could be used on the emergency centre.

Dr. David Bates, dean of the University of British Columbia medical school, said it is probable that hospital would be given autonomy to use its share of the health resources fund as it considers best.

Discussions are not going on between UBC and downtown hospitals about allocations of the fund, which has to be used before 1980.

b.c. briefs

Sprinkler Retreat

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council's housing committee indicated Thursday it may retreat from the idea of strict enforcement of fire bylaw requirements in apartment buildings. The B.C. rental housing council has complained that the fire bylaw requirements, which involve sprinkler systems in most old buildings, are unreasonable and would cost an average of $1,500 a suite in west end apartment buildings.

Jail for Rapist

CRANBROOK (CP) — David Wayne Adams, 28, of Calgary was sentenced Thursday to four years in prison after being found guilty Tuesday of rape. Adams was found guilty in B.C. Supreme Court of the rape of a 27-year-old Cranbrook woman Sept. 7, 1975.

Mall Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A proposed two-storey shopping mall on Robson Street should be rejected, city engineer Bill Curtis said Thursday. Curtis told city council's planning committee he is concerned about the effect the development will have on the rest of Robson Street as well as its effects on traffic patterns and services.

The proposal by N. B. Cook Corp. calls for construction of a two-storey shopping centre with more than 60 shops around a central courtyard. The project would take up about a third of the square block bounded by Robson, Thurlow, Haro and Burrard.

Picket Meeting

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Guy, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said Thursday a further meeting to clear up picket line problems between the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW), United Steelworkers of America and the Federation will be held April 5. CAIMAW is on strike against Canex Placer and Noranda interior mines.

Free Press Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson reserved decision Thursday in British Columbia Supreme Court suits for damages against the British Columbia Federation of Labor and the International Typographical Union, Local 226, by E. W. Bickle Ltd. publishers and 12 printers.

The suits were launched following a 2½-year dispute at Comox Free Press, owned by Bickle, during which the ITU picketed the newspaper.

The court was told the 12 printers were expelled from the union for crossing an ITU picket line which they believed was illegal.

Last September, Mr. Justice Anderson ruled that the ITU picket line was illegal and that the expulsions also were illegal.

The case was adjourned until this week for a hearing on the question of damages to be awarded. The company seeks damages against the ITU and BCFL, the expelled printers against the ITU.

J. E. Welsh of Courtenay, lawyer for the printers, said Thursday that ITU's unlawful expulsions of the 12 amounted to a breach of contract and that as a result they had been deprived of their legal rights with the union.

Michael Hunter, counsel for Bickle, said the firm suffered between $30,000 and $50,000 of lost advertising revenue and other income because of the picketing and an edict issued against it by the BCFL.

Raymond Cocking, counsel for ITU, said Thursday that if damages are to be awarded, they should not exceed $10,000.

He said earlier that Bickle could have mitigated its losses as a result of the picketing by bringing its case to court sooner than it did.

MILK SHORTAGE?

VERNON (CP) — Fluctuating federal dairy policies might result in a milk shortage in British Columbia within two years, says Henry Wiens, manager of Noca Dairies.

Despite a surplus of milk production across the nation because of federal price policy to farmers, new policy changes forcing milk production cutbacks will cause a shortage, he said.

"Undoubtedly we will approach, perhaps even as early as in two years' time, a shortage of some dairy products in Canada," he told the annual meeting of the Shuswap-Okanagan Dairy Industries Co-operative Association Wednesday.

"The environment that appeared to exist two years ago, creating a threatened shortage and lack of interest in the dairy industry, is approaching once more."

Enter Laughing Tries Too Hard to Be Jewish

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Enter Laughing is a funny play along somewhat whimsical lines, based on a number of real, human reactions and sprinkled with a few rejoinders that should be good for belly-laughs.

If the Victoria Theatre Guild production, which opened Thursday at Langham Court Theatre, hadn't tried so hard to be Jewish and hilarious, it might have been very effective. There were some good things about it.

Director John Krish with set designer Graham Thomson, assisted by Giles Hogya's skillful lighting, have resolved the multiple scene problem neatly with a minimum of fuss and delay.

There are some good, clear moments of characterization — everyone appears to understand what he or she is supposed to be in relation to the others and the point of each scene.

The trouble is that the production in general does not seem to have settled on a specific or uniform style. Much of it leans to the grotesque. A couple of scenes — those involving Helen Moulden and Jimmy Dunn as an anxious Jewish mother and father — are played quite well as straight comedy.

So are scenes in which two of the best performances occur with Brian Lenton as the seedy, conning actor and Helen Jarvis as his sexy daughter.

The play by Joseph Stein is about the stage-struck son of hard-working Bronx Jewish parents who want him to be a druggist and his gullible attempt to achieve his ambition through a shoddy theatre hoax.

That's all there is to it, except for a tinge of pathos worked into the strands of absurdity which this production, because of its exaggerations, fails to develop.

Dugald Nasmith as the stage-struck youth, shows momentary glimpses of capability in that direction but most of the time he is playing with forced artificiality in an all-out conscious effort to be funny.

He's like a youngster who does something comical, discovers that people are laughing and redoubles his efforts until the laughter turns into embarrassment.

Another caricature is offered by Michael Bianchin. As an admiring, somewhat retarded friend, he has something that is basically right but is so frenetic and garbled that it smudges into an unclear picture.

Ethnic characterizations are always tricky. The danger of having them turn into caricatures is constantly present. This occurs with Robert Price's performance as the elderly Jewish employer.

It is overdone as to dialect, too fussy, too much the stock idea of an elderly, paternalistic Jewish shopkeeper.

Opening night's over-all tempo could improve as the run of Enter Laughing continus through April 3.

Taxing Worries For Two In Trap

PLACER, The Philippines — Two miners trapped for 22 days in a gold mine were more worried about their income tax returns today than repeated delays in rescuing them.

Speaking into a microphone lowered 116 feet through an air pipe, Geronimo Acot asked his wife Marcelina whether she had filed his income tax return in time for the March 15 deadline.

When told that she had done so, Acot, in obvious good humor, said, "It's a good thing you did it because when I get out of here, I might end up in jail."

Acot's companion, Nilo Chatto, a 22-year-old bachelor, was told not to worry about his tax forms because revenue authorities probably would make an exemption for him, considering he and Acot had been trapped underground since March 4.

Rescuers hope to reach the men by Saturday night or Sunday morning.

SNOWDON: I'LL NOT BE EXILED . . .

LONDON — Lord Snowdon has said his broken marriage to Princess Margaret, sister of the Queen, will not drive him into exile, The Daily Express reports from Australia. Reporter Peter Hardy says he talked with Margaret's 46-year-old photographer husband in Sydney, Australia, on Thursday and Snowdon said: "Let me make it clear that no one is going to make me go into exile. My home is in Britain."

LOS ANGELES — More than 36,000 tickets to Paul McCartney's two concerts here in late April sold out in less than four hours Thursday, even before the concerts had been officially announced. "The old magic is still there," said Larry Solters, a spokesman for McCartney.

VERONA Italy — Italian soprano Maria Rossi, chosen by Giacomo Puccini for the premiere of his Turandot, and who later became a favorite singer of conductor Arturo Toscanini, died at her villa here Thursday. She was 86.

LODSWORTH, England — Ernest Shepard, who drew Winnie-the-Pooh in the classic stories for children by A. A Milne, died Wednesday, his family has announced. He was 96. Shepard, who also illustrated The Wind in the Willows by Kenneth Grahame, had his contribution to art recognized in 1972 when he was awarded the Order of the British Empire.

LOS ANGELES — Shampoo, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Dog Day Afternoon and The Sunshine Boys were honored Thursday as the best written films of 1975 by the Writers Guild of America. Robert Towne and Warren Beatty, authors of the Shampoo screenplay, won in the category of best origioal comedy script, and Neil Simon won for best comedy adaptation with The Sunshine Boys. The original drama award went to Frank Pierson for Dog Day Afternoon and best dramatic adaptation honors went to Laurence Hauben and Bo Goldman for Cuckoo's Nest.

VANCOUVER — John Meier, former adviser to recluse millionaire Howard Hughes, said Thursday that at least 31 top American politicians, including President Ford, have received funding from the Hughes organization on the explicit advice of the Central Intelligence Agency. Meier said in 1969 he acted as middle man between the CIA and Hughes. He said the CIA gave him a list of 31 persons who should receive funding from Hughes and then saw they got it.

KENORA, Ont. — Louis Cameron, the leader of an Indian group that occupied Anicinabe Park in the summer of 1974, was remanded to April 28 for a preliminary hearing after appearing in Ontario provincial court. Cameron, 26, and his sister Mary, are charged jointly with assault with intent to steal in connection with an incident last December.

REGINA — The legislature began action Thursday to provide an increased pension to a former premier who at the age of 89 is trying to cope with large medical bills on a persion of $5,600 a year plus the federal old-age pension. Introducing a bill to increase to $8,400 the special pension paid to William Patterson, Premier Blakeney said even the increased amount "is not overgenerous for a person who has served our province in the way Patterson has." Patterson, who was first elected to the legislature in 1921, was Liberal premier from 1935 to 1944 and also served as lieutenant-governor from 1951 to 1958 under a CCF government.

CHICAGO — Reporter Daniel Schorr, suspended from CBS for giving a secret congressional report on U.S. intelligence operations to a New York city weekly newspaper, says he may have made a mistake 'inn practical terms." But, Schorr says, he would do it again, though he might make some tactical changes. "Everytime I say, 'I better not publish that,' I'm making a decision to suppress something," he said Thursday.

LONDON — Alexander Solzhenitsyn has accused the West of blinding itself to growing Soviet strength and said there seems little hope of avoiding global catastrophe. In a radio talk for the BBC, the exiled Soviet writer reiterated the theme he expressed in a recent interview that the West is enfeebled and nearing collapse. He singled out Britain for special criticism as being today of less importance than Romania or even Uganda.

LONDON — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, will be given a hero's funeral April 1 and buried in a country churchyard. He will be buried in the shade of a 250-year-old yew tree in the cemetery of the 12th century parish church of the Holy Cross in the hamlet of Binstead, near his home. He worshipped there for the past 25 years.

Rick the Rounder Bares His Soul

TORONTO — Rick the Rounder and his Turkey Gang have broken up. Burglary with his bungling gang of misfits was getting too frustrating, and Rick says he is heading for Florida and a respectable job.

Rick's major disappointment came when he went for a bunch of safes which he figures held about $250,000, in the Knob Hill Farms supermarket at nearby Pickering Nov. 12, 1974.

As Rick told The Star:

"They got these great big safes. They got four or five. Gotta figure at least 200 grand.

"You need equipment. You need a truck, hydraulic tailgate, hydraulic lifts, walkie-talkies, field glasses, jackhammers, blowtorches, engine hoists that come apart in seven pieces, cable and chains."

When they got to the site they found an open window, but the safes were all welded together.

Using the supermarket's own lift trucks, the gang worked for seven hours to move them out to the shipping dock.

That's when Rick got angry. He discovered one of his gang had borrowed a friend's truck, instead of renting one as instructed.

The borrowed truck was too small for the job.

"Can you imagine that? We did all that work for seven hours, with maybe a quarter million dollars, and you have to leave it on the shipping dock."

The next time the gang tried, someone tipped off the police, and the law turned up a few feet away from Rick as he manned a walkie-talkie.

He started running, and he didn't stop until he hit the Florida Everglades.

He says he is going straight there now and was recently back in town only to make "a few social calls" to collect some money.

Police have verified the Pickering incident, though all the harrowing details didn't come out until Rick decided to bare his troubles to a reporter.

$55,100 PAY MDs' AVERAGE

REGINA (CP) — The average active Saskatchewan physician received $55,100 from the Saskatchewan Medical Care Insurance commission last year, the commission said in its annual report, presented to the legislature Thursday.

The average payment was up from $50,200 in 1974, an increase of 9.7 per cent.

The commission noted, however, that the average annual increase since 1972 has been 5.51 per cent. The averages for 1972 and 1973 were $46,900 and $49,100 respectively.

U.S. Funds Still Welcome

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has assured the United States that the proposed Saskatchewan takover of some potash companies does not mean foreign investment is no longer welcome.

In a note to the United States embassy releaed Thurday, the government says "it would be unfortunate and incorrect" if foreign governments and companies reached such a conclusion because of the provincial action.

The Saskatchewan government has passed legislation allowing it to expropriate potash companies. The province says it is considering purchase of up to half the industry, much of it owned by U.S. companies.

The province said it took the action after the companies, protesting provincial royalty rates, refused to increase potash production.

"The Canadian government continues to welcome to Canada foreign investment which provides significant benefit to Canada," the external affairs department said in reply to an earlier message of concern from the U.S.

The department told the U.S. that the intentions of Saskatchewan had been spelled out in its legislation and in statements from Premier Allan Blakeney. But it adds it is prepared to discuss "those aspects of this development which affect United States interests."

Federal officials have said previously they disagree with the province's move, but intended no action. They turned down a request from the Canadain Mining Association to take the unusual steps of disallowing provincial legislation.

The department said it is sure the U.S. administration would share concerns in Ottawa about the effect on cross-border relations of any misunderstanding of the potash issue.

Braniff Fined

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board has fined Braniff International Airways $300,000 for juggling its books to hide an illegal contribution made to the 1972 re-election campaign of then President Richard Nixon and to hide rebates the airline paid to travel agents in South America.

Woman Charged

CALGARY (CP) — A young woman charged with murder punishable by death in the March 12 killing of a Calgary policeman heard additional counts Thursday of armed robbery, kidnapping and breaking into a house where a weekend hostage incident took place.

She heard Judge Fred Thurgood charge her with taking $1,600 from a credit union teller and stealing $250 from a restaurant while armed with a handgun; kidnapping restaurant owner Rahim Kassam, his wife, Laila, and Calgary teacher Dianne Perry; stealing a car which belonged to Mrs. Perry's husband and driven by Mrs. Perry; breaking into the residence in northeast Calgary where the 45-hour siege took place; and damaging furniture inside.

Feed Plant Fined

REGINA (CP) — United Feed Ltd. of Regina has been fined $1,178 after pleading guilty in provincial magistrate's court to 19 charges under the Canadian Wheat Board Act.

The company was charged with unlawfully receiving grain last fall from Donald Ironchild, who did not produce a wheat board permit book when making delivery.

Ironchild was recently sentenced in Southey, Sask., to nine months in jail for possession of stolen grain.

Adult Education

REGINA (CP) — A delegation of about 75 persons urged Thursday that the Saskatchewan government expand adult education programs for native people.

The delegation, from the association of Metis and Non-Status Indians of Saskatchewan, was told by Education Minister Ed Tchorzewski that he could make no promises about whether a contract would be renewed for eight native counsellors.

Dispute Layoffs

EDMONTON (CP) — As a dispute between four major city concrete manufacturing firms and their drivers entered its third week Thursday, there were reports of layoffs in the construction industry.

Cana Construction said it had laid off "some men" working on three sections of the city's $50 million rapid transit project and unconfirmed reports said several smaller contractors also had laid off some workers.

The Teamsters Union, which represents the truck drivers, has been without a contract since Dec. 31 and requested a wage increase of $1.50 to $7.80 an hour.

HATCHET-WIELDING JUVENILE

EDMONTON (CP) — A 15-year-old juvenile with a history of liquor-related problems appeared Thursday in Alberta Supreme Court and pleaded guilty to attacking a man with a hatchet.

The case, waived into adult court from juvenile court, was brought to Edmonton from Westaskiwin.

He was initially charged with attempted murder but the charge was reduced to one of wounding with intent. He was sentenced to one year in jail to be followed by two years on probation.

The court recommended that the boy, who has only his Grade 7, be given a chance to take some schooling while in jail.

Uranium Found

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Geological Survey of Canada has found evidence of a possible uranium field in northwestern Manitoba, Mines Minister Sidney Green said Thursday.

PWA Move to Alberta Cuts 200 Jobs in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Hugh Horner, Alberta transport minister, said Thursday less than 200 jobs in the Vancouver area are at stake as the Alberta government seeks to concentrate Pacific Western Airlines activity at Calgary and Edmonton.

Alberta bought the airline in 1974 and has ordered the company to move its headquarters to Calgary from Vanouver.

80% Think In Celsius

Man-on-Street Survey Surprises Metric Conversion Official But 'The Agony' Persists for 20%

By AL FOREST
Times Staff

About 80 per cent of all Canadians are thinking celcius rather than Fahrenheit—according to the results of a man-in-the-street survey, says Ron Wood of Ottawa, manager of media relations for the Canadian Metric Commission.

Wood, who was in Victoria this week to address the B.C. branch of the Canadian Broadcasters Association at The Empress, said in an interview:

"We were surprised and pleased by the results of a survey conducted by a professor of the University of Alberta in Edmonton.

"He and his students interviewed a large number of people on the street and asked them what the temperature was. The result was overwhelming. About 80 per cent gave the temperature in Celsius without hesitation.

"It shows that most people are thinking Celsius."

Wood said it also shows that radio stations are making a mistake if they give temperatures in both Celsius and Fahrenheit.

"If the majority of people are already thinking Celsius it makes no sense to give the Fahrenheit equivalent. It just delays the agony for the other 20 per cent."

The use of Celsius has also started in the United States, which is almost the last country in the world to remain on the Fahrenheit scale.

"Celsius is becoming a bit of a fad, especially in California."

The Americans will eventually move to the metric system but not as quickly as in Canada.

The Celsius system will be one year old in Canada on April 1 and on that date all atmospheric pressures will be given for the first time in kilopascals and wind speeds will be given in kilometres per hour.

Wood said there should be no difficulties with either conversion because the only thing that matters about barometric pressure is whether it is going up or down and wind speeds will be called light, moderate or strong in addition to the new numbering scale.

Wood said Canada is right on schedule for its target of complete conversion to the metric system before 1980.

He said it might ease the mind of Canadians if the following things were known:

—There is no plan to change the time system under the metric conversion plan. Some train and airline companies use a 24-hour clock (in which 2 p.m. becomes 1400) but this has nothing to do with the metric system and is not expected to replace the present 12 hour clock in Canada.

—A dozen is still 12 under the metric system. Eggs may still be sold by the dozen just as at present. The move by an Ottawa baker to sell buns by the metric dozen (10 buns) was just a selling gimmick and had nothing to do with metric conversion.

—The federal department of consumer and corporate affairs is monitoring companies to make sure they do not take advantage of the metric conversion to bring in hidden price increases. The vast majority of companies have been co-operating by referring to unit prices, Wood said.

The main problem the metric commission has encountered is a tendency to "soft conversion" by some companies.

For example, they may change a one-inch screw to a 2.54 centimetre screw. They are both the same length. But this odd-sizing is confusing for European purchasers who use sizes like 2 centimetres or 2.5 centimetres.

Wood said the companies plan to convert in two stages but this doesn't satisfy the purchasers in the Common Market.

"They should go to hard conversion and change the size of the screw to fit the nearest rounded number in metric terms."

Cowboy Image? Not So

Victoria policemen chose their new-style open holster not because they want to act like "cowboys" but because it's safe and efficient to use, police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said today.

He was commenting on a decision by Sidney council to write to the Victoria police board, complaining about the "threatening" appearance of the new Victoria uniform which will include handguns in open holsters on the right hip.

Braiden stressed that practicality and safety were the only considerations in adopting the new open holster, which is the style officially endorsed by the B.C. Police Commission.

The present flap-covered holster worn on the left hip involves reaching across the body to grasp the handgun, and the weapon could be accidentally discharged in the act of drawing it back across the body to the firing position.

However, with the new holster the gun can be withdrawn quickly and easily and brought straight up into a position ready for firing, he said.

Braiden also pointed out that at present the butt of the handgun faces outward, conveniently for a would-be assailant but much less so for the policeman himself as it is on his weaker left side.

"It's not something we flippantly picked because we want to be cowboys," he added.

"The police board was totally convinced that this is not done for show but is just good common sense."

The new holsters come into use when the other uniform changes are put into effect this summer.

When Sidney council agreed on the protest this week Ald. Bob Wallace referred to the uniform policy as "this creeping military show."

Ald. Ross Martin said Thursday the exposed weapon "doesn't create the warm and friendly attitude we want surrounding the police."

12 Deaf Ears Turned To Pay Restraint Plea

A plea by Ald. Ron McKenzie Thursday for Victoria city council to show restraint by foregoing a pay raise this year, fell on 12 deaf ears.

Only McKenzie and Ald. John Hayes voted against final approval of a bylaw increasing council salaries by eight per cent.

Voting in favor of the bylaw, which raises Mayor Mike Young's salary to $21,190 and aldermen's pay to $7,954, were the mayor and aldermen Helen Beirnes, Murray Glazier, Alf Hood, Bill Tindall and Bob Wright.

The ninth member of council, Ald. Bob Ellis, was absent.

McKenzie sad he doesn't consider the pay raise justified in view of the "depressed state of the economy" and the projected sharp increase in property taxes this year.

He said council should follow the example set by the provincial government in reducing MLAs' salaries.

But Ald. Bob Wright pointed out the eight per cent increase is still less than the 9.5 per cent increase in the cost of living over the past year, and claimed "this in itself shows some restraint."

"I believe it is a dangerous policy to fall further behind because this leads to a situation where only the wealthy can afford to run for office," he said.

That would not be in the best interests of the community.

Recommending council continue its recent practice of adjusting salaries annually, Mayor Young recalled that about four years ago, after falling behind somewhat, council had to go through the "trauma" of giving itself a substantial catch-up raise.

He noted that if council foregoes an increase this year and the federal anti-inflation guidelines remain in force for the next two or three years the problem will only be compounded.

HOLDUP SUSPECT 'MENTALLY ILL'

A man arrested moments after a bank robbery in Victoria Thursday was described as mentally ill when he appeared in court this morning and was remanded for a month of psychiatric observation.

Russell Winston Pearce, 38, of 1015 Gillespie Place, had been charged with robbery with threat of violence.

He was arrested in a cafe while counting a stack of bills after a man grabbed $1,260 from teller Eva McLeod in the Bank of Nova Scotia, Yates and Douglas, one block away.

Two bank employees followed the suspect from the bank to Evelyn's Coffee Shop, beside the library. He was arrested by police there four minutes after the bank robber told the teller; "I have a pistol in my pocket. This is a holdup and I want $500."

In court today a doctor told Judge William Ostler that Pearce has a lengthy history of mental illness and has been treated at both the Eric Martin Institute and Riverview Hospital on the Mainland.

Dr. Weichman Billung-Meyer said he believes the accused to be mentally ill and unfit to stand trial.

Pearce, in a lengthy rambling statement, said he has been persecuted for a decade and is responsible for the troubles in Ireland.

Inquiry Starts At Naden

Members of the board, meeting behind closed doors, are Cmdr. G. N. Beveridge, CFB Esquimalt; Lt.-Cmdr. B. E. Derible, Fleet School Esquimalt, and naval Lieut. R. R. Godden, Maritime Staff Pacific Esquimalt.

CFB Esquimalt spokesman Major Denny Ryan said that findings of the board will likely be made public when inquiry is completed.

RCMP, meanwhile, are investigating the suicide Friday of Sgt. David Blue who was questioned last week in connection with the mess' financial situation.

Heart Unit Funds Needed—Jubilee

Royal Jubilee Hospital will soon ask the provincial government for money to expand its open heart surgery unit, subject of a heated exchange in the legislature Thursday.

The unit, only one of its kind on Vancouver Island, handles intricate surgery on major heart cases and has been working at capacity since it opened four years ago.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said today the hospital's submission will probably go to the government next week.

Four operations a week are done in it as well as emergency cases bringing the weekly average to five. The hospital wants to handle six cases a week plus emergencies, an expansion of 40 per cent.

In the legislature Thursday, Health Minister Bob McClelland defended the unit's record and said the hospital had never asked for funds to expand.

McClelland also sharply criticized Tory leader Scott Wallace for what he called his "irresponsibility" in criticizing the heart unit.

McClelland said Wallace had indicated "people were dying on the street" because of inadequate facilities but Wallace angrily shouted back that the minister was distorting his words.

In the legislature on Wednesday Wallace had said some people on the waiting list for heart surgery in Victoria had died and he reiterated his stand after McClelland's speech.

Wallace said there are about 100 people on the waiting list for surgery.

But the minister said the list was not longer than 44 and give figures to show the unit was slowly increasing its capacity.

Last year the unit completed 189 operations compared to nearly 50 already this year, he said.

Five operations are done a week, he said, and the average waiting period is four to five weeks.

In emergency cases, however, said McClelland, operations are done immediately, sometimes at night with overtime bills as high as $2,000.

Hospital officials confirmed McClelland's figures today.

But the minister stressed that Jubilee has not requested funds for expanding the unit and said if a request is made "you can bet we'll act on it as a responsible government."

Escalating health costs are a "national crisis," according to McClelland, and in the last two years hospital costs have gone up 80 per cent.

He agreed health-funding arrangements are out-dated but promised his government will bring in changes.

It took the NDP three years to create "the mess," he said, and it will take his government six or seven months to clean it up.

McClelland also told hospital administrations Thursday the provincial government will pick up two-thirds of operating deficits they incurred last year but warned them once again they must live within this year's budgets.

The boards at both Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals considered their financing problems at meetings Thursday night.

At Victoria General, last year's operating budget is virtually balanced but at Jubilee the two-thirds subsidy still leaves a deficit of about $350,000.

Dr. Pickles said today the possibility of layoffs or reduction in service to patients now turns on the basis of subsidy the government approves for this year.

The board submitted its proposed budget in January and expects to hear from the government next month.

If the province approves a budget for this year based on last year's grant plus additions for wage increases and inflation costs, he said, then another large operating deficit appears inevitable.

The government should base its budget appproval on Jubilee's actual experience last year, which produced a deficit of $1.1 million.

The hospital has achieved economies, in response to McClelland's urging, largely through reducing staff by attrition, and will be able to cut about $600,000 from this year's operating costs, Pickles said.

He praised the staff's cooperation but said any additional economies by government will mean layoffs, leading to a reduction in patient services.

CUPE Local Likely Faces Disciplining

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Canadian Union of public Employees local 951 took "dangerous action" in opting for a no-strike, no-lockout contract clause and will likely face disciplinary action from the local included the clause against his wishes and against the urgings of national CUPE president Grace Hartman.

A telegram from Hartman last week to the local, representing inside office and technical workers at the University of Victoria, warns:

The local will "lose all effective bargaining power" with the inclusion of the no strike clause.

"I urge rejection as the clause is contrary to CUPE policy."

Markides said the national CUPE officials have considered these kinds of clauses and rejected them because they do not believe in compulsory arbitration.

"If that's progressive thinking, I'm afraid the local's lost all it's thinking."'

"Markides said he is sure the action "has shocked" union officials throughout the province.

The only similar clause ever adopted by a union in B.C. he said was rejected after the first agreement.

"As far as I'm aware one local included it in its first agreement but took it out right after," he said.

Markides said he is sure there is some disciplinary action available to the national office to handle "this violation of national policy."

Dennis Burke, president of CUPE local 388 representing 200 inside workers for the city, said he had mixed reactions to the no-strike, no-lockout clause.

"I don't blame them, their business is their own, but I don't think local 388 would go for that clause."

"Only the future will tell," said Burke, adding the move may mean the workers will tend to drop behind their peers in terms of salary, or they may succeed in maintaining the same wages.

Burke did agree, however, it is traditional "not to tie your hands" by a no-strike, no-lockout clause.

Narconon Vancouver to Open Here

Narconon Vancouver, a non-profit organization which claims a success rate of 75 per cent rehabilitating drug addicts who take its program, intends to open a similar operation in Victoria this year.

Lillyean Walle and Jim Whyte, two workers in Vancouver, said Thursday they will meet Ald. Alf Hood next month to acquaint themselves with city regulations and detail their proposals for him.

Narconon Vancouver has won praise from prison, police and court officials since it began three years ago. It claims to have weaned more than 100 drug users from their habit.

The organization offers three communications programs at Oakalla prison in Burnaby and one at the Allouette River unit in Haney which lead addicts to self-confidence and a sense of worth, enabling them to confront their problems rather than running away from them, said Walle.

"You get to the point where you feel good without the use of drugs," said Whyte, a former heroin user who has spent eight of the past 12 years in jail. Most Narconon workers are former drug users.

Whyte recalled that when he was active in drugs, he "pushed" them at a downtown hotel in Victoria and "there was quite a big market."

In Vancouver, Narconon operates a "street program" from a residence which has accommodation for 30 people where they can come for help with drugs before they end up in jail.

It offers intense vitamin therapy to help people through withdrawal as well as a "touch" technique to assist them to relax muscles, tension being a major source of pain during withdrawal.

Narconon began in an Arizona prison in 1966 and has since spread throughout North America and into 14 countries. Its literature says that based on its experience it has found that the average person with a drug abuse problem will overcome it by attending Narconon classes three hours a day for 12 weeks.

It does this by leading students through a progressively more difficult series of communications exercises leading to "wins" or personal successes, thus developing their sense of worth and ability.

Narconon in Vancouver has received some funds from provincial and municipal governments but 70 per cent of its financing comes from canvassing of private companies and individuals.

Walle said that it could likely carry on a similar operation in Victoria but will be suggesting to the provincial Alcohol and Drug Commission that it fund the Victoria program as a "pilot project."

Whyte estimates $35,000 will be needed to launch Narconon in Victoria for a year. The organization says it costs about $50,000 to catch and jail an addict while Narconon could be rehabilitating them at a cost of about $2,000 each.

It wants to operate both a street program from a residence in Victoria as well as a program at Wilkinson Road jail but has yet to discuss the latter with jail officials here.

Handlers of Scorpions Aren't Worried

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

The Canadian senior "A" men's basketball championships open at the McKinnon gym tonight and for two young Victoria coaches it promises to be an exciting experience.

Walt Burrows stopped being a player and became coach of the Victoria Scorpions just over two months ago. Later he said he was sharing his new duties with Rick Mark and that's the way it would be until the end of the season.

Well, the end of this season comes Sunday with the conclusion of the four-team, round-robin tournament, and if the Burrows-Mark combo can do as well in this one as in the past two months, they'll be happy indeed.

Because since that team changeover, the Scorpions, B.C. representatives in the national final, have done better than alright although not always in a classic style.

They won the Dogwood League title in a scramble and in the first game of the final playoff in Vancouver were losers, 80-77. Back home, they turned tiger and took the Vancouver A's rather handily in two straight games.

Then came the challenge from Raymond, and the same pattern occurred in the Mountain zone playoff.

"The first game was a bad one for us," Burrows is the first to admit. "And the fact we had Ratmond in foul trouble is the only reason we won."

As it was the Scorpions scraped through with a last-second shot in overtime by Drek Sankey.

In the next game, however, Burrows feels the Scorpions hit their peak. "We were running, and running's our game." And they blew Raymond off the floor.

And he also feels if any team wants to run with the Scorpions in the Canadian championship, that's just fine. They'll accept the challenge.

"I think we're better," he said. "And Sankey, who came to the Scorpions from Vancouver for the playoffs, has been just great."

Burrows feels that Sankey, because of his great outside shooting, complements Bob Burrows on the inside. "We've changed our offence and have been scoring more effectively. If we can get the ball down low to Bob, he'll get his points," Walt said.

Burrows also plans to substitute freely. "We've got a solid club," he suggested. "We'll run, and when we run people get tired. It's our style."

Sankey, he added, has also helped the club with his knowledge as a national player.

"He knows many of the players on the other clubs, and he's been scouting them for us."

And, as for the other clubs having national or ex-national team players, Burrows isn't disturbed. "I think we've got three or four of our own of national calibre," he said.

He also pointed out that Mike Bishop and Dave Mulcahy had played against Mike Frisby of Windsor when he was at the University of Alberta, so they know what to expect of the big Windsor pivot man. And he thinks that Bishop and Mulcahy can continue their good work on the boards against this new opposition as they did against the taller Raymond team in the zone playoff.

The other starters for Scorpions when they meet Halifax in the second game of the tournament tonight at 9 p.m., will be Bob Burrows, Sankey and Grant Boland.

"Boland picked up our offence a lot in the playoffs," said Burrows, "and just when we needed it."

The club with the exception of outside shooter Gord Hoshal is in good shape. Hoshal has been suffering from the flu but is expected to see much action.

As for a prediction, Burrows was straight to the point. "Yes, if we play our game, I feel wwe are going to win it."

Tonight's first game and the tournament opener has Windsor meeting Winnipeg at 7 p.m. Winnipeg is the defending champion.

Saturday night, Winnipeg will meet Halifax at 7 p.m. with Scorpions playing Windsor at 9 p.m. On Sunday, Halifax will play Windsor at 10 a.m. and the Scorpions will play Winnipeg at 1 p.m.

Staniowski's Style Change Does the Job

By The Canadian Press

Rookie Ed Staniowski of St. Louis Blues is learning that you have to be able to adjust to be a winning goaltender in the National Hockey League.

Staniowski, the victim of a 7-1 loss to the high-scoring Pittsburgh Penguins earlier this season, changed his style Thursday night and sparkled in a 5-2 win over the Penguins.

"With Pittsburgh, you have to expect about anything," said Staniowski, a rookie up from Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League. "The last time we played them I thought they scored on shots I should have stopped."

"Tonight I tried to improvise a little and stayed lower some of the time. You have to use your head a little, depending on who you're playing. What counts is keeping the puck out of the net."

Staniowski, who stopped 35 shots, admitted that sometimes being lucky can be as good as being clever. In the second period he stopped Ron Schock on a breakaway with the Blues nursing a 3-1 lead.

"To tell you the truth I made a mistake on that," he said. "I'd backed up and given him a little too much net.

In Thursday's other NHL games, Boston Bruins defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 and Philadelphia Flyers defeated New York Rangers 4-1.

Jean Pronovost scored his 51st goal with the game only six seconds old to tie an NHL record for the fastest goal at the start of a game. The mark was set by Henry Boucha of Detroit Red Wings in 1973.

The Bruins, already nursing a lengthy injury list, lost captain Johnny Bucyk in the first period when he pulled a muscle in his left arm and was out the rest of the game against Chicago.

Chicago's Pit Martin opened scoring in the second period but Jean Ratelle and Hank Nowak scored a couple of fluke goals later in the period and Wayne Cashman and Terry O'Reilly wrapped up the scoring in the third period.

The Flyers set an NHL record with their 34th win at home this season. They have won 18 games in a row at the Spectrum, two shy of the NHL record for successive home wins.

Dodger Hurlers In Form

By The Associated Press

Veteran right-hander Don Sutton, and left-hander Ron Bryant, hoping to win a spot on the roster, are both off to impressive starts for baseball's Los Angeles Dodgers.

The two made their spring training debuts Thursday afternoon by combining for a 7-0 shutout of Philadelphia Phillies. Sutton, flashing midseason form, fired six innings of two-hit ball, struck out three batters and walked none.

"I wanted to go as long as I could," said Sutton, who has already been named the club's opening-day pitcher for the fifth successive year.

Bryant, trying to hook on with the Dodgers as a free agent, worked the final three innings, gave up two hits and struck out four.

Bryant won 24 games for San Francisco in 1973, but when downhill after that. He injured his back in a swimming pool accident and managed only a 3-15 mark with the Giants in 1974.

He was dealt to St. Louis last season, lost his only decision and then went into temporary retirement.

In Thursday's other games, Kansas City Royals blanked Chicago White Sox 2-0, St. Louis Cardinals shaded New York Mets 1-0, Texas Rangers downed Baltimore Orioles 10-8, Pittsburgh Pirates topped Detroit Tigers 4-2, Montreal Expos edged Houston Astros 5-4, Atlanta Braves edged New York Yankees 2-1 in the afternoon and Cincinnati Reds 7-6 at night, California Angels topped Oakland A's 4-1, Boston Red Sox pounded Minnesota Twins 7-2, San Diego Padres defeated Chicago Cubs 8-5 and Cleveland Indians edged Milwaukee Brewers 8-7.

Flexible Pirate

Wrapped up and grimacing is pitcher Jim Rooker of Pittsburgh Pirates during National League baseball team's training camp in Bradenton, Fla. Holding Rooker's arms in "flexibility exercise," a new addition to the training camp regimen, is Paul Uram, the professor of new program. See Story below. (AP Wirephoto.)

'FLEXIBILITY TRAINING' NEWEST TACTIC IN SPORT

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates have relied on muscle to win their National League division five of the last six years and the World Series in 1971 but now, in a move to dethrone the powerful and agile Cincinnati Reds, they are trying another approach.

"We call it flexibility training," explained Paul Uram of Butler, Pa., the professor of flexibility at the Pirates' National League baseball training camp here.

"If it was good enough for the Steelers, we thought it ought to be good enough for us," said general manager Joe Brown.

The National Football League Pittsburgh Steelers have won the NFL title the last two years. So Pirates borrowed Uram from the Steelers.

The drills almost caused big Willie Stargell to trip as he tried a nifty cross-step on tiptoes like a ballet dancer.

Dave Parker, 6-feet-5 and 220 pounds, looked ill at ease as he tripped the light fantastic with the rest of his teammates — tough, tobacco-spitting ball players suddenly transformed into a Las Vegas chorus line.

Uram, fortyish, a high school gym teacher, previously had tried his techniques on the NFL Baltimore Colts, Los Angeles Lakers in the National Basketball Association and Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League. The Colts won the Super Bowl in 1971 and the Lakers won the NBA title in 1972 after undergoing the treatment. Maybe the Red Wings were't listening.

Uram works with the Pirates before and after each day's drill. Besides dance steps, he equips the players with six-foot poles and guides them through weird push, pull and twist manoeuvres.

"It exercises muscles not normally exercised and strengthens tendons," Uram explained.

Coaching Rivals Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Bert Templeton and Mac MacLean, respective coaches of Hamilton Fincups and Kitchener Rangers, have been suspended for the next two games of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A semi-finals and fined $200 each.

The action was announced jointly in a statement Thursday by league commissioner Clarence "Tubby" Schmalz and OHA president Cliffe Phillips after study of the official report of the first game in the best-of-seven series at Hamilton Tuesday night.

Hamilton won the contest 12-4 with the second game in Kitchener tonight and the third game back in Hamilton Sunday.

The penalty-marred contest was called by referee Jim Lever with less than two minutes remaining in regulation time after a bench-clearing brawl in which Ranger goaltender Warren Skinner and Hamilton defenceman Ron Roscoe received match penalties for stick-swinging violations.

As a result of his participation in the altercation, Skinner has been suspended for the balance of the Hamilton-Kitchener series and Roscoe, because of his previous record, has been suspended for the remainder of the Kitchener playoff round plus the next playoffs series if the Fincups advance.

KANSAS CITY DEFENCEMAN SUSPENDED

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Scouts defenceman Steve Durbano has been suspended by the National Hockey League for two games, the team said Thursday.

Clarence Campbell, league president, found Durbano guilty of gross misconduct in a game which the Scouts lost to Buffalo Sabres 3-1 last Sunday.

Durbano was sent to the penalty box after a fight and then was reported to have waved his stick at a linesman. day's game against the Canadiens at Montreal and Sunday's meeting with the Rangers in New York.

Pats Here Sunday If Cats Hold Spot

If Victoria Cougars hold their present fifth-place position in the Western Canada Hockey League's overall points standing, the team will face Regina Pats in Memorial Arena on Sunday in the first round of the playoffs.

Heading into the final weekend of action, only four positions remain unsettled.

Brandon Wheat Kings, riding in sixth, have a chance of replacing Victoria Cougars as the fifth-place finisher. In addition, Kamloops Chiefs have a slim chance of tying Medicine Hat Tigers for third place.

Calgary Centennials and Flin Flon Bombers failed to qualify for the playoffs.

For both Cougars and Brandon, the determination this week has been to finish fifth and avoid meeting the strong New Westminster Bruins in the first round of the playoffs.

Cougars, winning important games this weeR in Saskatoon and Lethbridge, have a one-point hold on fifth. Cougars play tonight in Lethbridge and then complete their schedule Saturday night against Edmonton Oil Kings in Memorial Arena.

Meanwhile, in Thursday's action, Don Murdoch fired his 85th goal of the season with nine seconds remaining to pull Medicine Hat Tigers into a 3-3 deadlock with Calgary Centennials before 1,379 disappointed Calgary fans.

Brandon Wheat Kings gave 2,114 home fans plenty to cheer about, however, exploding in the final period for five goals to club Winnipeg Clubs, 8-3, and keep the pressure on Victoria.

Murdoch's goal came after the Tigers pulled goaltender Pete Peeters with 52 seconds remaining. Calgary had taken a 3-2 lead at 12:08 of the third period when Chris Dyer fired a long shot off the post with the Centennials playing a man short.

Future Dicy For Deguise

By The Canadian Press

Goaltender Michel Deguise of Quebec Nordiques may be wondering today about his future with the World Hockey Association club.

Deguise was lifted late in the first period Thursday night by Quebec coach Jean-Guy Gendron after allowing Edmonton Oilers three goals and was replaced by Richard Brodeur.

"I don't know if Deguise is going to play any more," said a disgruntled Gendron after the Nordiques outlasted the Oilers 7-5 in one of three WHA games.

In other games, Indianapolis Racers edged Houston Aeros 4-3 while in San Diego, the Mariners blasted Cincinnati Stingers 9-1.

Deguise, making his 14th appearance in Quebec's goal this year, said earlier Thursday he was physically and mentally ready for the game against Edmonton after being beaten 8-7 by Calgary Cowboys last Saturday night.

However, the former star with Sorel Black Hawks of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League did not impress Gendron and was removed after Ken Baird's goal at 17:25 had cut Quebec's lead to 4-3.

Brodeur was beaten on the first shot against him 58 seconds later as Rusty Patenaude got his first of two goals, but was steady the rest of the way.

Marc Tardif popped his 65th and 66th goals of the season for the Nordiques, who scored twice in a 44-second span early in the second period to snap a 4-4 tie.

The loss was a setback to Edmonton's hopes of holding on to the fourth and final playoff spot in the Canadian Division. Edmonton has 57 points with three games to go while fifth-place Toronto Toros have 51 points with seven games to play, including tonight's clash against Edmonton in Toronto.

A bench-clearing brawl in the second period resulted in 80 minutes in penalties assessed by referee Al Glaspell.

The benches emptied at 12:37 after a fight between Jack Carlson of the Oilers and Quebec's Pierre Roy was broken up and then started again near the penalty box. The Oilers bench on the far side of the rink cleared and then the Quebec players jumped on the ice.

The win by the Racers tightened the battle for playoff spots in the WHA's Eastern Division.

Braves' Hot Pair Stymies Cleveland

By The Associated Press

Bob McAdoo and Randy Smith went on a scoring rampage for Buffalo Braves on Thursday night that cost Cleveland Cavaliers a chance to move into first place in the National Basketball Association's Central Division.

McAdoo and Smith combined for 61 points, 40 in a second-half comeback by the Braves, to lead Buffalo to a 109-94 win over the Cavaliers. McAdoo finished with 36 points while Smith and Jim McMillian had 25 each.

A win would have put Cleveland in first place because Washington Bullets lost 108-105 to Portland Trail Blazers.

In Thursday's other games, Houston Rockets trimmed Golden State Warriors 123-104 and Phoenix Suns whipped Atlanta Hawks 107-98.

Lloyd Neal's three-point play with 2:03 remaining erased a Washington rally and handed the Bullets their third consecutive setback, their longest losing streak since November.

Mike Newlin and Calvin Murphy combined for 48 points as Houston broke the Warriors' 10-game home winning string.

Paul Westphal's 27 points paced Phoenix to its fifth consecutive triumph and put the Suns in a third-place deadlock with Los Angeles in the Pacific Division standings.

Skating Coach Wants to Return

By The Canadian Press

Joritt Jorritsma, the Canadian Speed Skating Association's controversial national coach, apparently would like to return next season while there are mixed feelings in the CSSA about such a comeback.

Jorritsma and CSSA officials said during the Winter Olympics last month at Innsbruck, Austria, that he would not be coaching the Canadian national team next season.

But CSSA president John Hurdis of Toronto confirmed reports this week that Jorritsma had approached him about returning.

"He says he would be interested in the position if certain things were changed, but he wasn't specific on what changes he wanted made," said Hurdis.

The association president, however, sounded less than enthusiastic about Jorritsma, saying that the 30-year-old Dutchman has made demands on the CSSA but won't bend to demands made by the association.

Among other things, Hurdis said, Jorritsma insists on working exclusively with eight to 10 skaters and refuses to get involved with other skaters in the association which has about 2,000 competitors.

Doug Gordon of Winnipeg, association second vice-president and chairman of the international competitions committee, said Thursday that about eight or nine persons are being considered for the national coaching job but Jorritsma is not one of them.

Gordon said that Jorritsma has not approached him about re-applying for the job. In any case, Gordon said he would not recommend Jorritsma be rehired.

"I have no argument against his technical abilities, but I don't think he treated all the skaters fairly," said Gordon. "Basically, only two skaters received help after Jan. 1. He was responsible for the whole team."

He said Jorritsma ignored a lot of skaters on the team.

Salmon Catches Dwindle But Steelheading Good

With very few exceptions, extreme windy conditions have kept most salmon fishermen off the water during the past few days but steelheaders are beginning to pick up some good catches from among the fresh runs starting to appear in a number of Vancouver Island streams.

A few limit catches of bluebacks have been taken on bucktails in the Finlayson Arm area of Saanich Inlet but the bite periods have been very variable.

"Not too good" was the word from the middle part of the Inlet, where a few chinooks to 19 pounds have been landed in Tod Inlet and Indian Bay. Blues are biting both on the surface and in deep water off Senanus Island as well as in Indian and Coles Bays. The latter spot is also an excellent area to try for black bass in the three to four-pound bracket.

A few jacks around Wain Rock and an occasional chinook, taken by mooching or trolling in Sansum Narrows, constitutes the main return at Deep Cove.

Nobody has been getting out at Oak Bay, or off the Victoria waterfront.

The only two fishermen venturing out at Pedder Bay recently came back with a catch of ling cod and returns at Becher Bay have tapered off to a smattering of small chinooks.

One lucky soul who managed to get out during an early-morning lull in the wind Sunday boated a 24 pounder at Sooke. But, since then . . . nothing.

Further up-Island, a few blues and small chinooks are being landed in Cowichan Bay, ling cod are grabbing jigged live herring off Nanaimo, and a few chinooks to seven pounds have been hauled in around the mouth of Alberni Inlet.

As for steelheading. . . .

The Nanaimo River has been fantastically productive in the last week. Several limits of nice bright fresh-run steelies to 20 pounds were landed around the Bore Hole and Haslam Run but rain early Thursday could put the water level up.

A few steelhead in the eight to 10-pound bracket have been beached along the Tsolum River and some up to 19 pounds are reported to be providing brisk action along the Bear and Salmon rivers.

The Gold has been too high lately and both the Campbell and Quinsam have tappered off.

With the exception of Dougan's Lake, between Mill Bay and Duncan on the Island Highway, the weather has been too cold for good trout fishing.

NIBBLES: Freshwater anglers, who have to renew their fishing licences prior to midnight next Wednesday, will be able to pick up a copy of the new regulations at the same time . . . Many changes, including adoption of the same management region boundaries which were instituted into the hunting regulations last season, have been made in a number of the regulations and everyone is responsible for ensuring they are familiar with the new rules . . . Ignorance isn't an excuse.

Hunters should note the spring grizzly season in management units 5-1 through 5-9 and 5-12 through 5-15 will open April 1. . . . This season will be open to both resident and non-resident hunters. . . . In management unit 5-10 (the central portion of Tweedsmuir Park) the season is the same but is open to resident hunters only (residents are anyone who has lived in the province for the past six months) . . . Closing date in all areas is May 31.

Roberts Appreciates 'Good' Loss

DULUTH, Minn. (CP) — Bengt Cederwall may have done Bruce Roberts of the United States a favor in the world curling championship Thursday afternoon.

Cederwall skipped his Swedish rink to a 9-3 win over the Hibbing, Minn., foursome in the seventh round to hand the U.S. its first defeat in the 10-country, round-robin championship.

"The loss was good, for us," said Roberts, who has been teaching Grade 5 students in Duluth each morning all week before preparing for the competition.

"I think maybe we were getting a little cocky too, you know. We thought, we'll just show up and that will be it. Maybe it's the best thing that could happen to us."

The U.S. bounced back with an 8-3 win over Giuseppe dal Molin of Italy in the evening's eighth round to increase its record to 7-1 and take sole possession of first place.

Meanwhile, Jack MacDuff's rink from St. John's, Nfld., lost its sixth game in a row Thursday night, dropping a 6-2 decision to William Muirhead of Scotland following a 7-2 loss to Switzerland in the seventh round.

The defeat knocked Canada out of the playoffs for the first time in world curling history.

MacDuff has generally blamed the ice—it's been heavy and tricky compared with the keen ice in Regina—but most followers of world curling attribute his poor showing to lack of experience.

MacDuff, 26, wouldn't accept that explanation.

Alberta Wins Seniors

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Hadie Manley of Alberta ended the three-year domination of British Columbia in the Canadian senior women's curling championship, skipping her rink to a 10-4 win Thursday over Lois Lawrie's Ontario rink in the afternoon draw.

She kept her record clean in the evening by swamping Isabel Jackson's Nova Scotia rink, 11-4.

The two wins gave Alberta a 9-0 record after the week-long competition.

Ontario earned second place at 7-2 by defeating New Brunswick, 12-6.

Manitoba's Isabel Park won a 10-9 decision over Helen O'Donnell's Saskatchewan rink while Newfoundland's Vi Pike caught the host P.E.I. rink of Mary Porter, 11-5.

British Columbia's Ada Calles defeated Peggy Bradshaw's Quebec rink, 10-9 in an extra end, to move into a third-place tie with New Brunswick.

In other eighth-round games, Quebec had a five-ender in its 12-9 win over Prince Edward Island; British Columbia downed Saskatchewan, 10-3; Manitoba took Nova Scotia, 10-3; and New Brunswick defeated Newfoundland, 9-7.

Saanich Braves continue their drive toward the Cyclone Taylor Trophy, emblematic of the B.C. junior "B" hockey championship, by playing host to Seattle Northwest Americans in a semi-final series this weekend at Pearkes Arena.

Braves tackle Seattle in the first game of the best-of-three series at 7:30 tonight. The second game is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday and the third, if necessary, will be played at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The winner of the series will play host to the winner of the series between Peace-Caribou and Kootenay in the B.C. final the following weekend.

Saanich earned the berth by beating Comox 12-5 and 8-5 in a best-of-three series for the Island crown while Seattle moved up with a victory in the West Coast-Okanagan Mainline series.

Braves have thus far posted an impressive 40-3 win-loss record in regular and post-season play.

IMPALA CAMPING WORLD

Introducing a family car with a high-performance engine, 5-speed gearbox and handling to match.

The 131 is Fiat's new family car. In performance it's in the same league as the Volvo 242, BMW 2002, and Audi 100LS. At $5,635* it costs roughly $1,000 less than the basic Volvo, $1,800 less than the BMW, and $2,300 less than the Audi.

The Fiat 131 is one heck of a car! Its heart is a high-performance, double-overhead-cam engine that zips you to 60 in 13.3 secs—aided by a close-ratio 5-speed gear box. Five! Extraordinary in a not-too-expensive family car. Or consider our automatic.‡ Since it's on the floor in 1-2-3 order, you can indulge in a spot of nifty shifting every once in a while.

The 131 also boasts a tachometer, an adjustable steering wheel, rack and pinion steering, disc brakes up front, and radial ply tires. All of which make it pure pleasure to drive on highway or curvy road. (And why shouldn't family men enjoy themselves now and then?)

Of course, Fiat knows full well that there's more to a family car than fun. That's why the 131 has lots of room inside and a spacious trunk. And why it's built with an immensely strong, steel-beam-reinforced passenger cage cushioned between impact-absorbing crush zones. It's also easy on the gas.

Finally, there's the matter of Canada's winters. The 131's rust protection includes plastic inner fenders, five coats of paint, a thick PVC undercoating, and a wax-base anti-rust substance injected into nooks and crannies. Beat that!

As we said, the 131 is a heck of a family car. And, in our less-than-humble opinion, at $5,635 it's the best value in town. Period. See the 131 soon. And don't miss taking a test drive; it's pure pleasure.

Okay, dad, take it easy! The 131 has room for all the bodies, all the gear . . .

The Fiat 128 – the biggest little sport in town.

One of the world's few remaining genuine sports cars. Fast. Roomy. Comfortable. And open to sun, wind and admiration.

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price, excluding provincial taxes, transportation costs, dealer preparation and registration. ‡Optional at extra cost. E.P.A. figures: 34.8 m.p.g. highway, 21.6 city. Overseas delivery arranged through your dealer.

Canadians Eliminated

LONDON (Reuter) — A string of Canadian victories in women's singles suddenly ended Thursday at the all-England badminton championships when Jane Youngberg and Wendy Clarkson were eliminated in the quarter-finals.

Mrs. Youngberg, from White Rock, lost to Lene Koppen of Denmark 11-1, 11-5 after she had upset seeded Indonesian Theresia Widiastuty to reach the quarter-finals.

Miss Clarkson, from Edmonton, lost to Margaret Lockwood of Britain 11-1, 11-1 in another quarter-final match lasting barely 15 minutes. The 20-year-old Miss Clarkson had upset Heather Nielson of England, 11-6, 11-5, in the third round.

Andruff's Goal Stops Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ron Andruff's goal for Nova Scotia five minutes from the end broke open a tight American Hockey League game Thursday night and the Voyageurs defeated Richmond Robins 6-4.

Andruff, a native of Chemainus, B.C., and the league's leading scorer, scored his 42nd goal, a 20-foot wrist shot, to decide the issue in a game that was tied four times.

Alouettes Sign Quarterback

MONTREAL (CP) — Joe Barnes a five-foot, 11-inch quarterback from Texas Tech, has signed a contract for Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Barnes, 24, was a 13th-round draft choice of Chicago Bears of the National Football League and played there briefly before being released. In 1973.

Short Twins Stand Tall For B.C. Rink

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Elizabeth and Eleanor Short, twin sisters from Glasgow, Scotland, are playing a big role in British Columbia's successful performance in the Candian mixed curling championships.

Elizabeth, at third, and Eleanor at lead, are both excellent sweepers and shooters and have been the darlings of the crowd since the competition began Sunday.

The B.C. rink, skipped by Tony Eberts of Williams Lake, and Garnet Campbell's foursome from Avonlea, Sask., are tied for first place with 8-2 records, opening the possiblity of a playoff following final round play today.

Should a playoff result, it would be the first since 1970 and the second since the competiton began 13 years ago.

The twins came to the competition almost by accident as Eberts and his second Scott Glanville hadn't planned to enter the event.

But when they were dropped out of the provincial men's championships, they decided to give the mixed a try and phoned the twins, both nurses, just three days before they had to begin mixed competition.

Eberts won against Metro Penziwol of Northern Ontario 6-4 in the 10th round Thursday while Campbell defeated Newfoundland 10-3.

Ted Brown of Kingston enters today's play alone in second place with a 7-3 record after a 10-3 win over the Northwest Territories rink, skipped by Heinz Burki of Yellowknife. Burki has managed only one win.

The Bridgewater, N.S., team skipped by Brian Rafuse dumped their New Brunswick opponents, skipped by Roscoe Wilson of Moncton 16-4. The winners made four points in each of the third, seventh and eighth ends to take the victory.

Manitoba and Alberta, both well back, ended their game with a 8-6 victory for Manitoba. Prince Edward Island edged Andre Emond of Montreal 5 4.

The ninth round Thursday saw B.C. beat N.W.T. 4-2 as Burki missed a 10th end takeout. Campbell edged Hal Tanasichuk 5-4 with a takeout that rolled to cut off two Manitoba stones.

Murphy Hums After Overhaul

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bob Murphy figured he needed a major overhaul in his golf game coming into the $215,000 Sea Pines Heritage tournament.

"I called some friends and told 'em 'I know I can't take this machine to the Heritage,'" he said Thursday. "That course will kill me'."

So, from last week's Jacksonville Open, he hustled home to Delray Beach, Fla., got the overhaul needed on his game and responded with a brilliant, five-under-par 66 that provided him with the first-round lead Thursday.

"I'd been hitting everything to the left," Murphy said. "It had cost me an absoute fortune and two, maybe three golf tournaments."

Lanny Wadkins	35-34—69

After hitting balls for five hours, the three jointly discovered two things: Murphy had a problem with his grip and he had the ball out of position at address.

The overhaul was completed.

It was the tune-up needed. The Murphy machine didn't make a bogey on the tight little layout here that features tiny greens shored up by railroad ties, narrow fairways winding through the moss-hung cypress, oak and pine, bunkers up to 120 yards in length and seaside marsh.

He missed only three greens and almost made a birdie on one of those holes. His explosion shot on the second hole blew the ball into the cup on the fly, but it spun out.

He saved par from five feet on the last hole for the clear lead over Don January, the 46-year-old veteran who was alone in second with a four-under-par 67.

Hubert Green, winner of the last two tour events, had a 68 that tied him for third—just two shots out—with a large group that included Gibby Gilbert, Dave Stockton, John Schroeder, Butch Baird, Peter Oosterhuis, Marty Fleckman and Danny Edwards.

Gary Player, Hale Irwin and Tom Weiskopf were in a batch of about a dozen at 69, but some of the game's other great stars had their difficulties in the cool, cloudy, windless, sometimes drizzly weather.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus was one over par at 72. So was Ben Crenshaw, a two-time winner this year, and Tom Watson. Lee Trevino was at par 71 but Johnny Miller took a fat 75.

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the tournament, had a 40 on the front nine and finished with 76.

Moorhead Rates Himself as 'Best'

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League announced Thursday the signing of Mike Ernst, 25, a quarterback who played last year with Southern California Sun of the World Football League, to a two-year contract.

Lions head coach Cal Murphy said the Western Football Conference club and a number of National Football League teams have been bidding for Ernst since the World Football League folded last fall.

Murphy described the six-foot, one-inch, 188-pound Ernst as "a super passer, with very quick feet. He is not known as a runner but can run enough to get out of trouble."

Before joining the Sun, Ernst was with Cincinnati Bengals of the NFL for two years. Before that, he was with Denver Broncos. He played college football at California State, Fullerton and Cerritos Junior College.

Don Moorhead, the Lions' quarterback for the last five seasons, said in a telephone interview from his home at Kalamazoo, Mich., that "there's no way I'm not better than he (Ernst) is.

"No disrespect to Ernst, but where's he been?" said Moorhead.

"A couple of NFL taxi squads and the World Football League. I've been with the Lions for five years. On experience alone I'm the best they'll have . . ."

Vancouver took a 1-0 lead in the first inning but Australia tied the score 1-1 in the second. Vancouver tied the score in the fourth when pinch-hitter Heather Cranston's triple to centre field scored Liz Wood.

Bainas Supplies Spark As Braves Take Third

Belmont Braves took over sole possession of third place in the East Division of the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League by trampling host Mt. Douglas Mountainmen 22-9 in the lone match played Thursday.

The win moved Braves two points ahead of Mountainmen, who get a chance to move back into a tie for third spot while facing Spectrum in the next league match at 8 tonight in Royal Athletic Park.

Meanwhile, players from the league who were chosen to the Selects will be preparing themselves both mentally and physically for the international exhibition match against Durham of England at 2:15 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic.

Blunders by White Man

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Many northern natives have left little doubt of their misgivings about development of the north by insensitive white people.

During two weeks of community hearings earlier this month before Mr. Justice Thomas Berger's Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry, stories about white man's blunders were provided in settlement after settlement.

David Nasagoluak of Sachs Harbor said it was not difficult to pick up dropped seismic wires and "if they can't even do that little bit of a thing . . . how are they going to be more careful if they have to be working in the ocean and oil happens to spill?"

Charlie Gruben of Tuktoyaktuk said that in 1974 he saw a snowbank "just yellow with (goose) eggs on account of the helicopters trying to tag one grizzly bear."

Garret Rueben of Poulatuk said if an Eskimo treated animals as the scientists had left 300 seals, "we know where we're going to end up — in prison."

As a result, he said, northern natives "got a little more background on how the white people treat other people."

Chief Fred Greenland of Aklavik remembered one exploration firm promising to hold up work until Caribou moved out of the Richardson Mountains, then moved in with tracked vehicles to "work right among the caribou herd."

Edward Rueben of Poulatuk said many natives are finding it difficult to sleep these days.

"It's hard . . . when you're worrying about what's going to come up to you, and especially today, like so many changes, it's hard to understand," he said.

"When we start hearing about pipeline, oil companies, that makes it hard for us. What can we do? You can't say no . . . because it doesn't matter what we say, we can't stop anybody — what they're doing to this world."

The Eskimos and Indians frequently referred to the Mackenzie Delta and the Beaufort Sea as their "bank book" from which they earned their living by hunting and trapping. They expressed fears of becoming impoverished if development kills or disperses the animals.

Several witnesses told Mr. Justice Berger they wanted a land settlement from Ottawa to protect their natural heritage before permission is given for a pipeline or offshore drilling.

Mary Husky of Aklavik, through an interpreter, said: "All we want is our land."

"We don't intend to give up our land and the quicker we get the land settlement, that will protect our future children and ourselves."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One would imagine that, in top-echelon play, the acknowledged experts never arrive at horrendous slam contracts. That such is not the case can be observed in today's deal, which was played in the 1953 World Team-of-Four Championships, between the United States and Sweden.

NORTH
♠ K Q 10 7 4
♡ 10 6 5 3

WEST	EAST
♠ 9 5	♠ A 8 3 2
♡ 8 4 2	♡ 9
◇ 8 5 4 2	◇ 10 9 7 3
♣ A 9 7 3	♣ 10 6 5 4

SOUTH
◇ A K Q J 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♡.

The above was the bidding when the United States held the North-South cards. South's opening two-club bid was artificial and forcing. It denoted a game-going hand. The rest of the bidding was normal, with a slam being reached with two aces missing. But things turned out well for the U.S. when the Swedish West player elected to lead a trump.

Declarer won the trump lead and then played two more trumps, picking up the outstanding pieces. Then came four diamond leads, with dummy's four clubs being discarded. Thus the club loser was avoided.

It now became a routine matter to concede a spade trick to East's ace, and to claim the contract. And so a poor slam contract received an undeserved reward.

When the deal was replayed with sweden holding the North-South cards, the identical six-heart contract was arrived at, although via a different sequence of bidding! But the American West defender came up with the winning opening lead of the club ace. Upon seeing the dummy, he promptly shifted to a spade, and East's ace took the setting trick.

For those who might tend to criticize West's opening lead of a trump against the United States' slam contract, I would like to make these comments in justification of this lead. First, from his position, it was highly unlikely that the defenders could make two club tricks, since their making would require that North and South had two clubs apiece and that East had the club king. And certainly it was impossible to visualize that all of dummy's clubs would subsequently be discarded on South's diamonds.

Finally, sitting South and North, respectively, were Howard Schenken and Sam Stayman. Most assuredly, poor West couldn't assume that his world-famous opponents had voluntarily bid a small slam when the defenders possessed two cashable aces.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Today we have a Magic Square.

That's a sequence of consecutive positive numbers in checker-board style formation, arranged so that each column, each row, and each of the two diagonals adds up to the same magic total.

Furthermore, our magic total is to be three times the greatest number in the sequence.

Two different sequences meet all these requirements. What are they?

Before You Buy at the Door . . .

CAVEAT EMPTOR

By LYNNE GORDON

Door-to-door salesmen can't escape the image of the fast-buck operator, thanks to a handful of unethical companies and sellers. Although only a minority deserve the treatment, many consumers slam the door before they can hear the pitch.

Every province in Canada has legislation to regulate door-to-door selling. But that hasn't cleaned up the whole industry any more than the Criminal Code has relieved us of all criminals. The law doesn't mean much to those who consider anything fair game — provided they can get away with it.

FOUL PLAY

The most recent example of unethical sales practices by a fire alarm company was brought to heel with a government order to stop using scare tactics.

Their sales presentation included a film showing in grotesque living color the ravages of a house fire. The film also included a mother who did not see her children in a fire, appealing to consumers to buy a fire alarm that could prevent a disastrous fire in their homes.

Another company was ordered recently to stop selling "free" encyclopedias that ended up costing consumers $399 over 10 years.

Consumers who filled in a questionnaire, were given a "free" gift — a set of encyclopedias. Consumers were then asked to pay 77 cents a week for "marketing costs"; over a 10-year period, the 77 cents would snowball to $399.

I could describe a dozen examples of such foul play but it would only prove one thing: There's still trouble at the door. And it's hindering the reputable companies engaged in this form of marketing.

INDUSTRY SELF DEFENCE

A group of companies has banded together to fight the image of the industry and clean it up through ethical practices. They've formed a self-regulating association, the Direct Sellers Association (DSA), now representing 17 companies or about one-third of the industry. They're trying to grow and bring to the fold other companies using the direct sales approach and willing to conform to the associations code of ethics.

CONSUMER SELF-DEFENCE

Your chances may be better when you're dealing with a company that belongs to the DSA. But no one can guarantee that every representative is going to live up to the strict code of ethics set down. At least you'll know that the sales representative hasn't been trained by the company to use an unethical pitch and if he does, your complaint will be heard and redress will be provided.

Before you buy or sign anything at the door, do a little checking.

Ask for a complete identification of the sales representative: Make sure he or she has selling licences required by your province and municipality. You'll have to check these requirements with your local authorities, because they vary from province to province and municipality to municipality.

Ask about the company: How long has it been in business? Check the reputation with the local Better Business Bureau, Chamber of Commerce or the provincial consumer protection bureau.

Examine the quality of the product: Is it durable? Is it likely to become defective? Are replacement parts available and for how long? What service can you expect under a warranty? Find out where you'll have to send the product for repairs: It could be time-consuming if the plant is thousands of miles away.

Check to find out if you can cancel the order. Some provinces require that cancellation rights be clearly spelled out in the contract but it isn't required in all provinces. Are there limits, conditions or penalties involved if you do cancel?

COOLING OFF PERIOD

Because the inherent problems with unethical salesmen are clearly recognized, legislation has been provided by all provinces giving consumers a second chance to say "no". This is important, since some salesmen are effective in making sales simply by talking until the customer says "yes" just to get rid of them.

During the "cooling-off period" you can cancel a contract signed in your home. It has to be done in writing, hand-delivered or sent by registered mail. Make sure it's done within the time period provided by provincial legislation: 10 days in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia; seven days days in Quebec and New Brunswick; four days in Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and the Northwest Territories; three days in British Columbia and two days in Ontario.

In Ontario and British Columbia the cooling off period applies only if an "executory contract" has been signed: That is, if you haven't paid in full or the goods haven't been delivered. (The cooling off period is further limited to contracts over $50.

Watch out for companies that deliberately delay delivery until after the cooling-off period has expired, so that consumers can't take advantage of his cancellation rights. If you can't get prompt delivery of a product, cancel the order.

COMPARISON SHOPPING

A major criticism of buying door-to-door or through the "party plan" is the inability to compare the price and quality of similar products by different manufacturers. The products sold by the top direct selling companies are usually very good quality — but expensive. Do you need all that quality? And do you need all the personal service and convenience that is offered? Those are questions you have to decide for yourself.

You also have to decide whether you're willing to accept the subtle pressure of shopping through the "party plan": You know when you are invited to such a party that the hostess who is likely your friend, will receive a gift from the company demonstrating its products in her home. The size of the gift depends on the amount sold that evening. If you don't buy, you may feel that you're not doing your part.

There's nothing wrong with this method of marketing provided it's done honestly and ethically. But questionable sales practices continue to crop up — and it's up to you to protect yourself.

INDOOR GARDEN

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I have a problem with my Pothos plant. Its leaves are turning yellow, one by one, and some of them near the base of the stems are falling off. Help, please! I don't want to lose it as "Peter" and I have become very attached.

I have him hanging in front of an east window and water him every third day with about one-half Dixie cup of water. Maybe fertilizing will help, but I have no idea what kind of food to use or how often to serve it up. Please offer any advice you think might save Peter Pothos from an untimely demise.—L.S.

DEAR L.D.:

First of all, what's a "timely" death? Any time any living thing expires it must be considered untimely, so we'll do our best to help you resuscitate Peter. We've said it in previous columns, but it's such a common problem it bears repeating.

Yellowing leaves are usually the result of one of three conditions: lack of iron, corrected by adding an Iron Chelate (available at nurseries) to the soil; lack of light; and improper watering, usually overwatering as opposed to under. If it's not too late — and if most of the leaves have turned or are turning yellow it probably is — we'd suggest you cut down on the watering as a first try at remedy. Let Peter dry out thoroughly and then establish a pattern of watering him thoroughly only after his soil is completely dry to the touch.

If you want to try adding a little Iron Chelate to the soil, go ahead, but never fertilize Peter or any other sick plant for that matter. No matter how organic the food you choose, it can only harm, not help, the weakened root system. If all fails, cut him all the way back and perhaps he'll grow again.

family

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thousands of British Columbia shoppers are finding it cheaper to buy their groceries in the United States.

They find, for example, that a one-pound package of a popular cookie which sells for $1.13 in Vancouver sells for 88 cents in Bellingham, Wash., 40 miles away. The cookies in both cities are made and packaged in the Vancouver area.

The increasing flow of Canadians to U.S. supermarkets is starting to tax facilities at border-crossing points—long lines of duty-paying shoppers are the weekend rule at customs—and there is resentment building among Americans.

Americans, squeezed from their favorite supermarket parking space by Canadian vehicles, tend to blame the influx of Canadians for driving up food prices. Canadians also are blamed for pushing up real estate values in Washington State.

However, that's not the way Jack Brownrigg, 44-year-old manager of Mark-It Foods in Bellingham, sees it.

"If it weren't for Canadians, Whatcom County would be in trouble," he said.

"Sure, our people who usually shop on Saturday complain about the Canadians, but heavy buying by Canadians pushes up our volume and lets us buy at lower prices. The saving is passed to everyone."

Although Mr. Brownrigg declined to give sales figures, an independent survey showed Canadians account for almost one-third of the supermarket's Saturday business.

With almost half of B.C.'s population within a one-hour drive of Bellingham stores, it took a long strike of Vancouver supermarkets last summer before Canadians began to take a serious look at U.S. grocery prices.

The object of Canadian shoppers used to be paper products, soaps and cooking oils, Mr. Brownrigg said. Now they buy just about everything.

Turkey, which can range up to 35 and 40 cents a pound cheaper than the Canadian price with no duty, is a big seller. So are the Canadian-made cookies, but Mr. Brownrigg was unable to explain the big price spread.

He said he pays 75 cents a package for the cookies. The manager of a Vancouver supermarket which sells the same brand for $1.13 said his wholesale cost was 94 cents a package.

Shelf price of groceries purchased last week in Bellingham for a family of six totalled $87.69 compared with $109.18 in a Vancouver supermarket, a difference of $21.49. But sales taxes and import duty cut the net difference to $8.31.

Canadians must take into account a five-per-cent sales tax on food in Washington State. Food is exempt from sales tax in B.C. Import duty is a flat 17½ per cent on the total purchase unless the shopper divides purchases into food categories which carry lower tariffs.

For example, margarine and bacon, both considerably cheaper in the U.S., have a duty rate of one cent and 1¾ cents a pound, respectively. Each person is allowed one duty-free turkey up to 20 pounds.

A comparison of Vancouver-Bellingham shelf prices last week showed the following commodities were lower in Bellingham: Grade A large eggs, by 26 cents a dozen; butter, by 17 cents a pound; 32-ounce dishwasher soap, by $1.06; margarine, by 23 cents a pound; canned corn, by seven cents; corn flakes, by 12 cents; self-basting turkey, 29 cents a pound cheaper; ketchup 32 cents cheaper; three pounds of coffee for $3.93 compared with two pounds of the same brand in Vancouver for $3.35.

The shopping list of groceries purchased last week was made up without any advance knowledge of specials in Canada or the U.S., but shoppers such as Mrs. Jack Morris of Port Moody, B.C., plan their trips carefully.

Shopping for a family of four, Mrs. Morris collects Vancouver grocery ads before setting out for the 50-minute drive to Bellingham every two weeks.

Usually there are four women in the car to share mileage costs. She fills the family car with U.S. gas to save a few cents a gallon.

"By comparing prices and watching for the specials I figure we can save up to $10 a week on the basics," she said.

"However, sometimes I feel badly when I go to my local supermarket for fresh vegetables. They are nice people and I feel I should support them."

Weekly Soaking

TORONTO (CP) — The American Association of Nurserymen says that normal garden requirements for water are the equivalent of one inch of rainfall each week. If there is no rain the garden should receive a good soaking once a week. A thorough soaking weekly is preferable to several light waterings, the association says.

DISEASES IN ELDERLY OFTEN UNRECOGNIZED

CALGARY (CP) — Dr. David Wooldridge, medical director at Glenmore Auxiliary Hospital, told a geriatrics seminar some elderly patients have as many as five separate diseases.

In fact, he added, for every physical disorder doctors recognize in the elderly, there is an average of three more disorders that go unrecognized, and for every mental disorder diagnosed, eight others will not be discovered.

"Treating the elderly is not hard but you have to look to see if they have a disease you can treat," said Dr. Wooldridge.

"The elderly population is getting older in our nursing homes. Their families often don't visit them and some living at home are just existing.

"This is not the answer to the kind of care they need."

Learn How to Become a Real Scrounger

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

How many times have you been frustrated by a craft magazine article which called for "scraps you have around your shop"? It's tough enough to buy building materials for your main projects, let alone have all the scraps you need for those one-evening projects.

Well, you can become wealthy with 2x4s, odd sheets of plywood, lengths of molding and other lumber and hardware if you learn to scrounge.

No, that doesn't mean "steal." Scrounging is recycling — using materials that others don't want and are glad to get rid of.

Not only can it be financially advantageous to you, it's sound ecological practice for the planet. This country throws away, burns or otherwise destroys hundreds of millions of board feet of usable lumber every year. Scrounging simultaneously lessens our disposal problem and cuts demand for new materials.

Good sources of materials are all around you, most often in buildings awaiting demolition. Wrecking contractors seldom have time to do anything other than level the homes, offices, apartments or whatever and cart all the material away as quickly as possible.

That's wasteful. Just keep your eyes peeled for signs of urban renewal, redevelopment or house wrecking. Locate the supervisor on the job and ask his permission to haul old materials away. He might charge you a fee, but more often than not, he'll tell you to go right ahead — for nothing.

Kent McKeithan of Pittsburgh did just that. He paid $3 for unlimited rights to salvage anything he chose from a two-storey frame house. He went in with a claw hammer and came out with 40 feet of 1x12 pine shelving, a large semi-circular oak stairway, and assorted 1x2s, 2x4s and 1x6s.

From the pine he made custom shelves for himself and a friend. He plans to transform the stairs into a coffee table, and the remaining wood will become the formerly hard-to-find "scraps around the shop."

Just try purchasing that much lumber down at your local yard for $3! No, the salvaged lumber isn't brand new or cabinet quality. But if you're looking for material for shelving or furniture, that's a pretty good deal.

Advertising display houses in some larger cities are another good source for scrounging. These firms build booths and signs for trade shows, fairs and permanent exhibits which are installed in airports, hotels and convention halls. The businesses are listed in the Yellow Pages under "Advertising, Display," and they can be good sources of new plywood, fiberglass, plastics and other such materials.

These advertising signs and exhibits are all made from absolutely first-class, brand new materials. This means that the leftovers and scraps from such work are — likewise — new and of superior grade. You may not get a lot of what you'd call "large pieces," but they'll be plenty big enough for framing pictures, making small desk cubicles and turning into planter boxes.

McKeithan's last junket to a display shop netted him several pieces of birch and mahogany plywood, a few 1x2s and 2x2s, assorted pine boards and a couple of plastic signs and painted sections of hardboard from old and junked booths.

Disposal of these odds and ends are generally handled by a janitor who's only too happy to get them off his hands. Another dividend offered by these display shops is the sizable amount of sawdust they produce along with their scraps. The dust makes excellent mulch and compost since it comes almost entirely from hardwoods instead of resinous pines and other softwoods.

But a real scrounger doesn't have to hang around demolition sites or display shops looking for old and new lumber. Cruise the streets immediately ahead of the annual municipal pickup of articles too large for the regular daily or weekly refuse collection.

What a boggling amount and variety of goods gets thrown out as "junk" during this yearly event! If you're not too proud to search and if you look long enough, you can find most anything you want. Refrigerators (convertible to meat and fish smokers), stoves (burners for home kilns), and washing machines (with their motors and wonderful spare parts) are just some of the items you might be able to pick and choose from.

There's one final grand source of lumber which you might be able to tap from time to time: the disposal areas of companies dealing in electronic equipment, small machinery or any other product that requires protective wooden crating.

These shipping containers, while unfinished, are both strong and light. When painted (but left unsanded), they can be used as prefabbed stackable modular shelving or cabinets with an antique touch. With a little imagination, you can fashion such scraps into, say, a housing for your TV, bar, books and bric-a-brac. Any time you want, you can rearrange the units as you desire. Perhaps even more importantly, the entire "wall" can be painlessly given away or reconsigned to the trash when you move or find better replacements.

The above recycling ideas, of course, by no means exhaust the possibilities that await you in every city, town and rural area of the country. No matter where you live, you probably have at least one good source of usable materials, tools and equipment right in your own back yard.

So look around. There's a lot of valuable stuff just waiting to be picked up, and a lot of money to be saved. And you'll be doing your bit to solve the nation's disposal problem. Get your permission when necessary, but get out there and start your grassroots recycling program.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: About that Protestant mother who was upset because her son married a Catholic girl:

I also came from a strict Catholic family. The girl I fell in love with was the daughter of a Methodist minister. When we made plans to marry, my folks and all the relatives made an awful fuss. Added to their objections was the fact my lady love had a Jewish ancestor way back in her family.

Regardless of all their objections, we went ahead and get married. None of my people came to the wedding. They also cut me out of their wills. I could not have cared less.

My wife and I are both in our 80s and have celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary.

We have wonderful sons, daughters and grandchildren and have always made them feel free to marry whomever they wanted, regardless of reglion.

The Lord must have approved of our marriage or He wouldn't have blessed us with such a long and happy one.

BROAD-MINDED IN MPLS.

DEAR BROAD-MINDED: Three cheers for an interfaith marriage that let love overcome reigious nitpicking.

DEAR ABBY: Pease print your answer so my husband will see it.

What do you think of a 28-year-old man who has been married for seven years and who tells all his friends at work EXACTLY what happened in his bedroom the night before?

We have always had a wonderful sex life, which keeps getting better every year. But since I caught wind of this, I feel cheap.

When I questioneed my husband about it, he denied saying anything, but from the things that have come back to me, I know that he has been talking plenty. (The wife of one of his buddies gets all the details from her husband, and she tells me.)

If my husband doesn't get over these high school habits, I'm afraid it will be the end of our sex life. Help me.

OPEN BOOK IN MICHIGAN

DEAR OPEN: Tell your husband that you KNOW he has been blabbing at work about your intimate relations, and if he doesn't keep his big mouth shut, he's not going to have anything to talk about!

DEAR ABBY: I have a backyard neighbor who has been watching me for the last two years. I thought perhaps he wanted to be friendly, but when I see him on the street, he turns his head.

He has a 9 to 5 job and is home on weekends. Every time I look out of my back window I see him in his backyard, staring at my back door, waiting for me to appear.

He has driven past my home several times, slowing up to look. Even the neighbors have mentioned it.

He is married, but I seldom see his wife. We have never spoken to each other, either, but I'm sure she knows that I am her neighbor. My husband and I don't want to cause any trouble as we plan on living in this neighborhood for a long time, but this man gives me the creeps.

Do you think I should go to the police? He really hasn't done anything except stare at my back door and drive around my house.

Should I initiate a conversation with this man or perhaps talk to his wife? Please help me.

FRIGHTENED

DEAR FRIGHTENED: You may be unjustifiably suspicious, or you may have a point. While with your husband, initiate a friendly conversation with this neighbor. His reaction should tell you something.

Liver Tumors Increasing

BUFFALO (AP) — Women who use certain birth control pills face an increased risk of developing liver tumors, the director of Roswell Park Memorial Institute here warned Wednesday.

Dr. Gerald P. Murphy said doctors at the cancer research centre "began to see a of women with tumors of the small but increasing number liver" in recent years.

"Most of their medical histories revealed a common characteristic: the use of oral contraceptives.

"It is not our intent to frighten anyone unduly, but it is our responsibility to alert the public on possible adverse effects resulting from prolonged use of certain oral contraceptives," he said.

Dr. Murphy said contraceptives containing high steroid or menstrual dosages were most frequently linked to tumors.

Welch Medical Report

By Dr. William J. Welch

In the past decade, thanks to painstaking and often brilliant medical investigation, great advances have been made in the understanding of viral hepatitis. As a result of this work, the prospect of immunization against some forms of hepatitis is now substantially in view.

Until recently, it was believed that there were two distinct types of hepatitis: type A contracted by oral exposure to contaminated food or water with an incubation of from two to six weeks following infection, and type B (serum hepatitis) caused principally by transfusions of contaminated blood or blood products, often taking as long as six months after exposure for the disease to appear.

Now it has been learned that both types A and B may be transmitted by either the oral or needle route and may in some instances be transmitted by intimate personal contact as well.

In addition, there are cases of hepatitis, especially following transfusions, in which no trace of A or B virus can be found, and it has led to the proposal that there is probably a third specific hepatitis virus, which has been tentatively labeled hepatitis virus "C".

Hepatitis A, the familiar infectious variety which appears sporadically or in epidemic form, appears to occur much more than we knew, but in most cases does not appear as the full-blown disease. Indeed, its victims may never be aware of it.

When an active case is developing, the infectious agent is discoverable in the blood, but only before the patient comes down with jaundice, at which point the infectious agent disappears from the blood.

Protective antibodies that arise in response to hepatitis infection are present in the blood of a large proportion of the adult population, presumably as a result of unnoticed infection.

The demonstration that such antibodies exist, and the recently discovered ability to infect experimental animals such as marmosets and chimpanzees, raises very real hope that an effective vaccine can be developed.

Among the many advances in the understanding of hepatitis B (the type commonly occuring after transfusions) is that when blood serum containing the hepatitis infectious agent is heated, the serum loses its capacity to cause the disease when injected into a susceptible host but retains its ability to stimulate the appearance of antibodies.

Much of the understanding of this complex of diseases, which is such a serious threat to the well-being of man, has been made possible by investigation in volunteers in prisons, military populations and children in mental institutions, although no deaths occurred and there was no serious illness in the course of the studies.

Animals susceptible to infection with hepatitis are now available for further study, but ultimately methods for the prevention of hepatitis will again have to be tested in human beings.

Jury Decides Stabbing Was Case of Assault

A 20-year-old Maple Ridge man was found guilty by a county court jury Thursday night of assault causing bodily harm on a Victoria man.

Glenn Scott Kelly was originally charged with the more serious offence of wounding with intent against Frank Ross Ogilvie in a stabbing incident in the parking lot of the Wilson Motor Inn June 19.

Kelly will be sentenced by Judge E. J. C. Stewart April 23 following receipt of a pre-sentence report.

The jury deliberated four hours and 45 minutes before delivering its verdict.

Judge Stewart, in his charge to the jury, described the incident as "starting in a joke and ending in a sort of tragedy."

Court was told Kelly and some friends, who had been drinking, put one of them in a hotel elevator without his trousers. When they checked later, he was gone.

Kelly found his friend on the street accompanied by two hotel employees and a manager gave him five minutes to get his friend dressed and off the premises.

A little later, when Kelly was attempting to drive away from the parking lot, he was grabbed by Ogilvie a hotel employee. The Crown alleged that during the ensuing scuffle Ogilvie was stabbed in the stomach. Kelly, who admitted having a knife, denied any intention to injure anyone.

Judge Stewart told the jury that if it found no intent to wound, then it must find Kelly not guilty. But there was a lesser offence of assault causing bodily harm.

He said a person may, in self defence, use force against an assault but it must be no more force than necessary to prevent the assault or a repitition of it.

The jury returned once to the courtroom during its deliberation to obtain direction on the meaning of intent.

Judge Stewart said it was a state of mind of the accused accompanying an act found to have been committed "if you do" find it was committed.

On the lesser charge of assault causing bodily harm, he said the jury would have no problem in convicting Kelly if it found he assaulted Ogilvie and that he caused him bodily harm.

The Crown's case was presented by Ted Pollard, assisted by Scott Marshall. Kelly was represented by Bob Johnston.

Tunisians Expelled

TUNIS (Reuter) — More than 5,000 Tunisians have been expelled from Libya in the last three weeks. The Tripoli government has begun a campaign to repatriate non-Libyan Arabs — mainly Egyptians and Tunisians — since the Libyan news agency Arna said March 11 that thousands of people, many "barefooted and half-naked," had infiltrated the country from other Arab lands.

A 21-year-old Victoria man was sentenced Thursday to six months in jail for what Victoria provincial court Judge William Ostler called "a highly sophisticated, carefully planned operation with very serious overtones."

Ostler ruled Kevin Angus Payne, 525 Frances, must also undergo a two-year term of probation to start after Payne leaves jail.

Payne pleaded guilty March 8 to a Victoria charge of a break-in with intent Feb. 29 at Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside, and Ostler said the overtones were an apparent plan to steal 22 rifles and shotguns — as well as the presence of a police radio receiver and a loaded shotgun by an exit door.

Defence lawyer William McCallum said Payne had mixed alcohol and tranquillizers because of failure to get a job. He said Payne was "a follower" and Ostler agreed but said jail time was needed.

Another person charged in the case has chosen higher-court trial and will face a preliminary hearing.

"I find it very difficult to believe that a young man of 20 who is involved in the drug world . . . did not appreciate the seriousness of selling marijuana," Ostler said in the case of David Ernest Milliken, 20, of 1145 Bay.

Milliken pleaded guilty March 9 to a charge of trafficking in marijuana by selling one ounce for $20 early that day to an undercover policeman in the 800 block Fisgard.

Defence lawyer Malcolm McMicken said Milliken was "gullible" and merely held the marijuana for another person, making no profit. Ostler agreed Milliken might be "easily led" but said the sentence would be three months in jail followed by two years of probation.

Ostler praised defence lawyer Sheryl Dunn for "obviously considering her client's interest carefully" in the case of Robert Alexander Landrin, 33, no fixed address.

Landrin pleaded guilty March 8 to a Victoria charge of taking a $50.99 sweater Feb. 20 from the T. Eaton Co. and a second charge of a March 6 break-in at Rose's Jewellers, 1317 Douglas, and theft of three watches worth a total of $790.

Dunn said Landrin admitted he needed treatment for alcoholism. She said she had explained he could get a short sentence in a regular jail or a six-month term at a treatment centre for alcoholics, and he had supported her recommendation of the latter.

Ostler's decision was six months followed by one year of probation.

Steven Forrest Ramage, 20, address not known, was charged with trafficking Sept. 25, 1975, in Saanich in methamphetamine, commonly known as speed. He was remanded one week by Ostler for further hearing and released on his own recognizance in the sum of $750.

Ten persons were fined a total of $3,660 by Judge F. S. Green for drink-and-drive offences.

Biggest loser was Kenneth Boyd Hall, 32, of 202 Montreal, fined a total of $600 after pleading guilty to a charge of impaired driving in Esquimalt and refusing to take a breath-analysis test in Oak Bay, with both dated July 28, 1975.

Other larger than usual fines were $400 for Clint Allan Martin, 44, of 1265 Cloak Hill Road, for impaired driving Feb. 27 in Sidney; $385 for Terry Donald Ward, 26, of Shawnigan Lake, for impaired driving March 13 in Saanich, and $375 for Harold Frank Visscher, 18, of 1750 Albert, for impaired driving Sunday in Saanich.

Fined $350 each for impaired driving were:

Greg Allen Barnes, 25, of 572 Paradise, stopped March 18 in Saanich; Philip Marlton Carey, 21, of 3161 Campion, March 9 in Sidney, and Michael Cora Gardner, 27, of 959 Inverness, March 19 in Saanich.

Other fines were $350 for Frank Graydon Smith, 64, of 5151 Beckton, stopped March 18 in Saanich for being impaired while in care or control of a vehicle; Edwin Wilkinson, 57, of 3931 Cedar Hill, $250 for impaired driving March 8 in Saanich, and Leslie Brian Spence, 32, of 2035 Melville,, $250 for driving March 7 in Sidney with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Gardening Fun for Tads . . .

With time off school coming up, parents have a chance this weekend to introduce a youngster or two to the idea of gardening in a small plot of ground.

In some cases this may be as small as six by 12 feet, or 2 by 4 meters for those whose school work has already accustomed them to metric figures.

Most two-storey-type homes have small plots of ground such as this for the use of occupants of each floor if requested. Dooryard gardens they are called in some areas; garden apartments in others.

The first work is the hardest — that of preparing the soil after it has been neglected perhaps for years, but the later caring for the plants and gathering of vegetables will be the real thrill.

Preparation needs the arm strength and staying power of an interested adult, for there must be a broken-up depth to the soil of at least 15 inches. This a child cannot know or do.

So small a garden plot will take little time but it will likely open up new interests to the enquiring minds of not only the young gardener but of friends who come around to see why Derry or Diane hasn't come over to play.

Arguments about how plants grow, about the reason why onions look something like chives while they grow, and how long it takes for corn seeds to sprout and to produce corn-on-the-cob — all these mysteries will have to be solved by getting books from the library, or by consulting older people nearby who show an interest in the project.

Some children refer to an encyclopedia at home, and are proud to pass on the information to others.

For these simple beginnings could even develop study sessions of a half hour twice a week of a group of youngsters six to 12 years of age.

In no time, you have a Junior Garden Club, the first in Greater Victoria I'll wager.

From now until early October the practical study sessions are possible outdoors working with the various plots the children are cultivating. This serves a two-fold purpose: urging the owner to get to work to make it look attractive, and showing the group that many plants can be grown in different ways.

The need for such work is apparent by the way youngsters gather in groups as soon as school is out for even half a day.

So often there is "nothing to do" when in fact there is so much just begging to be done.

Our future gardeners, the future producers of fresh home grown vegetables and fruits and of colorful and sweet smelling flowers, these are the children who are today wanting "something to do," something to hold their interest from day to day, something for which they can be praised by others as being of a community benefit because it helps others besides the family.

Youngsters need help to get started. But they need also to be led into this interest of growing plants, not driven.

The leading in some cases will be the rewards of having certain desirable foods such as tomatoes, green garden peas, golden sweet corn, or crisp bright green lettuce such as can seldom be bought in the local store — these delights growing for the first time day by day as the child watches and tends the plants — this will be incentive enough for some.

Others will find their interest perhaps in the artistic form of common everyday plants never before seen at close range and changing noticeably in appearance from week to week.

They will begin sketching and coloring and who knows what may develop from this activity?

Miracles have happened from such small suggestions as are put forth here. If even one small plot of ground gets spaded up this weekend for a youngster's garden project this spring, it would be reward enough for the writing.

But most likely I would never know about it even though the miracle produced a bumper crop in the fall, preceded by mass interest among a dozen schoolagers who had formed that history-making first Junior Garden Club.

The world's weary trouble and trials are past
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more."

McKinnon To Back Noose

Victoria MP Allan McKinnon told the annual meeting of the federal Progressive Conservative Association in Victoria Thursday night he will vote for retention of capital punishment.

Early returns from a questionnaire to constituents show they favor such a move by a margin of 74 to 14, he said. Later he said the free vote coming up in Parliament on the matter will likely be close and the abolitionists might win by a margin of about 10 votes.

Discussing the current controversy in the Commons on the government's $1 billion plan to purchase long-range Orion patrol planes from Lockheed, the Tory defence critic said today he would prefer to see the government buy the similar P3C aircraft and have them equipped with a Canadian electronics system. He estimated such a move would save $20 to $25 million per plane.

B.C. Cable Renewals

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission Thursday announced the renewal of five B.C. cable television licences but told cable operators to drop the transmission of radio services from FM stations in the U.S.

Cablevision Ltd., Abbotsford and Clearbrook; Lake Video Service Ltd., Lake Cowichan, Mesachie Lake and Honeymoon Bay; L. and C. Cablevision Ltd., Ladysmith, and Western Cablevision Ltd., New Westminster and Surrey.

Four men were killed when a U.S.-made S-2 Gruman, modified for anti-submarine warfare, flew into a hillside near here shortly before it was to land at Capodichino airbase on a flight from Sicily, a military spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the pilot of an F-104 Starfighter was killed when his plane crashed near Ravenna, 300 miles north of Naples, the spokesman said.

Argentine: 3 Years Of Rule by a Myth

By JOANNE OMANG
The Washington Post

BUENOS AIRES — The fall of President Isabel Peron of Argentina has ended three years in which a vivid myth, rather than a real person, was effectively head of the Argentine state.

The myth was the 30-year-old memory of the early days of Juan Domingo Peron.

The myth was brought back from 18 years in exile to the presidency in 1973, but neither the real 72-year-old man nor, a year later, his frail young widow, Isabel, could measure up to it.

Elected vice-president in 1973 because Peron insisted on it, the former Maria Estela Martinez willingly remained in Peron's shadow.

As he rallied around him the disparate elements of Argentina's 24 million persons, propounding his doctrine of class collaboration under a strong central executive, she was widely ignored.

She was only vice-president, it was generally believed, as a stopgap until the various factions had sorted out which of them was strongest and in line to succeed Peron.

Educated no further than the Sixth grade, the blonde former dancer had captivated the aging Peron during his exile.

He had married her, the stories said, so as not to embarrass Gen. Francisco Franco, his host during his 18 years in Spain.

Meanwhile, Peron's broad coalition began to fray.

His health failing, he lacked the buoyant presence of his second wife, Evita, who had always rallied the common people in his behalf.

Though Isabel imitated Evita in hairstyle and function, her nervous, high-pitched public appearances never came close to rousing the delirious mass love "Eva" had evoked.

Young people, who had been small children during Peron's previous government, had believed in the myth of Peron the populist.

Peron's radical social programs had helped the country's poor, and his labor reforms beginning in 1946 all but created Argentina's trade union movement.

In alliance with the union, the strongest in Latin America and devoutly Peronist, youthful agitators had helped create the demonstrations that convinced the armed forces Argentina could not be governed without Peronist support.

Once re-elected president in 1973 by an awesome 7 million votes, Peron began to demonstrate that it was not his conservative policies that were mere tactics designed to win support for social reforms, as the young leftists had thought, but the other way around.

Soldiers ward off coup

The left marched out of his movement on May 1, 1974, two months before he died.

Later, as Isabel moved even further to the right, the far leftist Montenero guerrilla organization went underground and declared war on her. The violence that had shocked Argentines when it began in the hills of Tucuman in 1969 quickly escalated into a numbing daily bloodbath.

In the nearly two years of her government, at least 2,000 persons were killed in battles between the extreme left and the extreme right-wing death squads that materialized in response.

Mrs. Peron inherited the presidency because her husband had never been able to bring himself to designate an heir apparent.

He had always cut down his rivals as they blossomed, preferring a field of squabbling second lieutenants eager for his favor.

As they had vied to be the most slavish in their devotion to Peron during his lifetime, the various faction leaders at first rivaled noisily after his death July 1, 1974, over who was the most loyal to his widow. The honeymoon lasted about six months.

During that time, Argentina coasted.

Isabel Peron, thrust into a job she always said she never wanted, turned for help to the next nearest strong man — Jose Lopez Rega, Peron's former private secretary, astrologer, personal adviser and house philosopher. Under his influence and encouragement, Mrs. Peron adopted an imperial manner.

She ordered friends about as though they were servants, scorned any contact with the press and left high labor officials cooling their heels awaiting audiences.

She closed more publications, came seldom to the cavernous presidential offices in the Casa Rosada, the government pink house, and virtually stopped talking to anyone but Lopez Rega and his entourage.

Lopez Rega's influence grew to the point where he controlled all access to the president.

Amid general pronouncements of nationwide prosperity, the economic deterioration that preceded Peron's first ouster in 1955 began to repeat itself.

A believer like most Argentines in a bottomless cornucopia of wealth from the vast fertile pampas, Peron had made his legend of distributing some of that vision to the nation's workers.

When he took power this time, inflation was already at more than 40 per cent. Peron financed his full employment policy with the printing press.

A much-vaunted "social pact" between business and labor to hold down prices and wages instead only disguised inflation under a black market, smuggling and shortages. Private and foreign investment dwindled.

When the European Common Market closed its doors to Argentine beef, foreign income fell to new lows.

Economic hard times shattered the illusion of Peronist coalition unity, and the alliances Peron had woven began to disintegrate in earnest.

In June, 1975, a new economic minister, hand-picked by Lopez Rega, tripled the price of gasoline, halved the value of the peso and set a wage ceiling.

Outraged labor union leaders went right through the ceiling, massing 50,000 persons outside the Casa Rosada to howl for Lopez Rega's head and demand salary raises of up to 160 per cent.

They followed that with a general strike, the first ever against a Peronist government, and Mrs. Peron capitulated.

Under fire from every side, Lopez Rega, 56, left the country July 19.

The coup rumors then began in earnest. Mrs. Peron retreated into illness and the jockeying for positions close to her reached new intensity.

Still, the myth remained alive. Labor leaders talked of "a return to true Peronism" as a solution to the economic situation.

Mrs. Peron survived as long as she did on the strength of her name, the Peron myth that even today would probably win at least 30 per cent of the vote in a free election.

And although warring congressional factions railed against her and offered measure after measure to get her out, no one was willing to be the one who actually toppled the vision.

"If the army doesn't take the final step itself, nobody will take it," said a minority party leader a few days before the coup.

"The myth is too strong for anyone else to kill."

Bail Denied Drover

CALGARY (CP) — Provincial Judge John Gorman has denied bail for a Victoria man who faces three charges of attempted murder.

Judge Gorman granted a crown request that Garth Duke Drover, 38, be detained in custody for the protection of the public and because of the seriousness of the charges.

Leader of the Coup A Popular Moralist

Videla

BUENOS AIRES (WP) — Gen. Jorge Rafael Videla, the leader of Argentina's new ruling junta, is the sort of military figure around whom few anecdotes grow. The word most often applied to him is "moral."

A long-time teacher and director of the military College, Argentina's Royal Military College Videla has supporters among offices of all levels.

As director of the college, Videla was known as a moderate conservative, a devout Catholic with seven children, and a critic of any military role in politics.

"The army, the strong arm of the nation . . ." he said during these years, "ought to resemble a lion, ready to fight but confined in a golden cage of discipline, whose ears are the law and the regulations."

Videla was never known as an opponent of either Juan Peron or his widow.

Instead, he has been viewed as primarily anti-Communist. Videla was named in May 1975 to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and as army representative, he automatically became its head. Videla's first speech made it clear that he was not Peron's follower, either.

"Subordination is not submission nor blind obedience to the caprice of whoever rules," he said at his installation ceremony.

"It is obedience with conscience to the will of the superior. Thus is obedience ennobling."

Paronism at that time was in the first serious stage of crisis over rising inflation and the growing influence of Mrs. Peron's mysterious adviser, Jose Lopez Rega.

After Lopez Rega's ouster last July, Videla was among the military men who strongly protested the naming of an active colonel, linked to Lopez Rega, to the post of interior minister.

"The most pernicious option is any political alignment formed with partisan criteria, whether it be because of direct or indirect participation of the armed forces in partisan political affairs," he said.

The rest of the army supported this view of noninvolvement in politics and especially with the rapidly sinking Peron government.

After a tense period, she agreed reluctantly to remove both the minister in question and the army commander who had supported him.

Videla was installed as commander-in-chief of the army on Aug. 29. He quickly sought and got carte blanch for a campaign against leftist guerrillas operating in the northern province of Tucuman. In a much-admired gesture that won him wide support, he spent Christmas Eve in fatigues with the troops there.

Just Let Me Pack Some Clothes . . .

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — When told she was no longer president of Argentina, Isabel Peron turned pale and made only one request — for a suitcase of her clothes and personal effects, air force sources reported today.

Mrs. Peron must have known of the rumors of an imminent coup Tuesday, and she met with close advisers and cabinet members until after midnight. She left the cabinet meeting, however, with a sense of relief that another long day was over.

On the roof of the elegant rose-colored presidential palace, the helicopter was waiting. It was slightly larger than the helicopter she had used during the past few days but she didn't notice.

She climbed into the large comfortable seat behind the pilot. Her chief bodyguard, her private secretary, and the navy aide-de-camp on duty took seats behind her.

The chopper's propellers roared and Mrs. Peron did not notice that the air force officers in the back had turned their guns on the bodyguard and the secretary.

As they flew toward the presidential residence north of Buenos Aires, the pilot managed to make the helicopter tremble slightly and he turned to the president.

"We'll have to land at the metropolitan airport," he told her. "We're having engine trouble."

The helicopter landed in the military section of the airport. Mrs. Peron was helped down, still unaware what was happening. She was conducted to a waiting room.

There, an army general, a navy rear admiral, an air force general and an air force doctor were waiting.

They told Mrs. Peron she was under arrest and would be sent to a remote house in the resort region of the Andes.

The doctor was ready with tranquillizers. They were not needed.

Mrs. Peron turned pale, but made only one request. "May I have some of my clothes and personal things?" she asked.

The officers agreed and a maid was brought from the presidential residence with a suitcase for the former president.

She boarded the waiting air force plane and was flown to Bariloche, 1,010 miles southwest of Buenos Aires. By dawn Wednesday, she was in a car driving up the mountain road to El Messidor, a mansion owned by the province government of Nenquen and often used by presidents and visiting dignitaries.

The armed forces have not said what they intend to do with Mrs. Peron but they have said her personal safety is guaranteed.

Crime-Free Subway Opens

WASHINGTON (CP) — Special police will ride every train when Washington's Metrorail subway system opens its first 4.6-mile leg in the centre of the capital Saturday.

Claiming to be the first mass transit system in the world specifically designed to deter crime and violence, the system will also have special police patrolling all five stations once regular service begins.

Every station will be monitored by closed-circuit television. Extra care has been taken in the construction to ensure there are no columns or dark corners where muggers can lurk.

Every train will have an emergency call box. There will be no public toilets in the stations. Fare attendants will be able to observe all exits and entrances. And police will be patrolling sidewalks outside the stations.

The full 100-mile, 86-station system will not be operational until 1982, Metro officials say. They predict it will cost at least $4.65 billion. The combined annual fidership of Metrorail and its auxiliary Metrobus system is predicted to be 460 million riders that year.

But there have been 10 delays in the opening date and with 4.6 miles operational and 40.7 miles under construction, Metro so far has spent $2.762 billion.

Metro officials predict the subway will lose $11.3 million during its first 15 months of operation.

OIL PORT FEELERS

WASHINGTON (FP) — Amid growing U.S. interest in the idea of a deepwater oil port at Prince Rupert, Senator Hubert Humphrey has asked a government agency to sound out opinion in British Columbia.

Humphrey wrote Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb asking for a report "by the end of March" on whether the provincial and local governments would be willing to consider the scheme, involving building a Prince Rupert terminal for tankers carrying oil from Valdez.

San Juan Whale Base

SEATTLE (AP) — As soon as they begin feeding themselves, two killer whales now at Seattle's Pier 56 will be rewarded with a sheltered home in the San Juan Islands.

Dr. Al Erickson, who inherited the whales from Sea World, Inc., said Thursday the move may be as early as next week, but he wants the mammals to be feeding themselves before the transfer.

They now are being forcefed through tubes every two days.

Sea World agreed to release the whales earlier in the week after the state brought suit against the commercial marine aquarium. The suit alleged the firm had violated terms of a federal whale-capture permit and asked that the whales be released.

Sea World has a U.S. commerce department permit to capture four killer whales, but has agreed to search outside Puget Sound waters in the future. Six whales were captured in south Puget Sound March 7, but three escaped and a fourth was released.

Meanwhile, a bill by Democratic Senator Warren Magnuson to "revoke all permits now existing" for capturing killer whales, goes to the floor of the Senate on Monday.

Sea World has launched a lobbying effort against the bill through George Steele, a Washington, D.C., attorney who represents oceanarium and zoo operators nationwide.

Senate Backs Concorde

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Senate soundly defeated a ban-the-Concorde amendment Thursday and gave the Anglo-French supersonic jet transport a major U.S. legislative victory.

The margin of the vote, 50 to 31, was far greater than had been expected by observers on both sides of the issue, although supporters of the Concorde had predicted victory in recent days.

Sen. Lowell Weicher (Rep.-Conn.), sponsor of the amendment, said after the vote that there is now no chance Congress will block the plans to provide commercial passengers with Concorde flights across the Atlantic at twice the speed of sound.

After defeating the Weicker amendment, the Senate turned back by similar votes two other anti-Concorde proposals.

The Senate votes were also a victory for Transportation Secretary William Coleman who had ruled Feb. 5 that the Concorde could meke two passenger flights a day to Dulles International Airport here and four a day to John F. Kennedy airport in New York for a test of 16 months.

The house has passed a six-month ban against the Concorde that would not apply to Dulles. So regardless of what happens to that proposal in conference with the Senate, the effort to stop British Airways and Air France for instituting Concorde service to Dulles here May 24 now rests solely in the courts.

Briefs are to be filed in the U.S. court of appeals here by the Environmental Defence Fund, which is seeking a review of Coleman's decision.

No Stomach As Cocaine Smuggler

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Harold Casale didn't have the stomach to be a dope smuggler.

Looking for a way to smuggle four grams of cocaine across the Mexican border, Casale wrapped the drug in a condom and swallowed it, figuring he would get it back.

He waited for 10 days but nothing happened. Panic-stricken, he called Dr. Melvin Berezin, who suggested an operation, noting stomach juices would dissolve the prophylactic and turn loose enough cocaine to kill him.

Casale said he would die before allowing an operation. The doctor then suggested a gastroscope be slipped down Casale's throat to pull the condom up. The man agreed.

The procedure was performed in Hahnemann hospital with detective chief William Cole and detective Albert Ambron watching.

Ford Fights For Mideast Arms Deal

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Ford set the stage for a major foreign policy fight with Congress by announcing Thursday that his administration is going ahead with plans to sell C-130 transports to Egypt.

The six planes and related equipment and services will be sold to Egypt for $65 million, unless Congress disapproves the deal within the next 20 days.

Congressional opponents of the sale have contended that it would heighten tensions in the Mideast and escalate the arms race between Egypt and Israel.

Also, these opponents have asserted that the C-130s would turn out to be just the start of deliveries to Egypt and further entangle the U.S. government in the Mideast.

Only Enough Vaccine For 1% of Canadians

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada will have enough vaccine to treat just over one per cent of the population next winter when the expected epidemic of swine flu strikes.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the Commons Thursday that Canada has no vaccine on hand at present and has the capacity to produce only 300,000 doses by next fall.

He stated the government has been in touch with foreign authorities to see whether enough can be imported to immunize the rest of Canadians who might require it.

Dr. I. A. D. Todd, member of the board of directors of the Canadian Medical Association, however, says CMA officials will not react to the possibility of an epidemic of swine flu virus in the emotional manner shown by United States officials in the last few days.

Todd, a Toronto surgeon and vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association, said there is always the threat of an outbreak of a new flu virus because strains develop every few years.

However, until the last few weeks there has not been much information to suggest that even the threat of a swine-flu epidemic is imminent, he said.

The U.S. often reacts with more emotion than necessary in health matters and if an epidemic occurs at all it will not be for some time, he claimed.

A Calgary doctor said Thursday, that health officials in the United States are creating a national panic by recommending a campaign to inoculate every citizen.

Dr. Ken Buchan, a virologist at Foothills Hospital, said there has been one outbreak and occasional individual cases "but there is no epidemic yet."

Alberta, meanwhile, moved

APOLOGY ORDERED

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed told a government backbencher Thursday to apologize after he made a disparaging remark about Quebec.

The incident occurred during the legislative question period when A. L. Fluker (PC — St. Paul) asked Recreation Minister Al Adair if he was aware of a "new seating capacity Mr. Drapeau has come up with for the Olympics.

"I understand that they are removing every other seat and now replacing them with lily pads for frogs, and I wonder if the minister was aware of it," he said.

The remark instantly drew goans and a few chuckles from the Conservative-dominated assembly.

Later, Fluker apologized in the house for the remarks, which he said were meant "as a joke."

He said no slur was intended.

Premier Lougheed recommended that the apology be accepted, stating that he was certain Quebec "would accept the apology in the way in which it was made here."

Gunmen Sentenced

ASSEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — Seven South Moluccans were sentenced today to 14 years imprisonment each for their roles in a 12-day drama last December in which more than 20 hostages were held aboard a train and three men killed. The charges ranged from murder to illegal arms possession.

Justice Threatened By 'Too Much Law'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada Thursday recommended that Parliament carefully reconsider whether abortion, indecency, bigamy, incest, obscenity and gambling should remain offences under the Criminal Code.

"In the light of present social attitudes, inquiry should be made whether they should be abolished or redefined or whether the law needs strengthening," the commission said in a report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Ron Basford.

The commission's report on criminal law says the 760-section Criminal Code is a document "wedded to a Victorian philosophy which now is inadequate."

The code should be pruned so that only offences that are serious and harmful are included.

"Too much law, too many offences and too many cases — they threaten the whole criminal justice system with collapse," the report said.

Besides the 700 Criminal Code sections, there are 20,000 federal offences and 20,000 under provincial law.

"No one can possibly know all these sections and offences. Yet since ignorance of the law is no excuse, the citizen can never be sure he is not breaking the law.

"Worse still, 70 per cent of federal offences are offences of strict liability and need no proof of fault: prove the act and conviction follows automatically."

The criminal justice system's theoretical aim was to promote humanity but in reality it was inhuman.

"Canada . . . is one of the harshest western countries when it comes to use of prison sentences," said the Commission.

"Many of the terms imposed are far too long, half the people in prison should never be there, and so many are in jail that those few needing real care and attention cannot get it.

"The whole system resembles a vast machine sucking people in one end, spewing

Budget Data Leaked More Than Week Ago?

Did confidential provincial budget material fall into the wrong hands before its official release today?

The Times has learned that a young man was asked by an aide of Premier Bennett about 10 days ago to put a folder of papers in a hotel safe overnight.

The curious young man took a look at the papers and saw at the top of the pile a press release concerning the Alberta budget.

Next came a page with a paragraph concerning federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements and their relation to the constitution. Under that was a stack of xeroxed pages which mixed written copy with graphs, tables and other provincial financial data.

A friend of the young man, it has been learned, was writing a university essay on the topic of the constitution and the paragraph he had seen nicely fitted in with her essay.

So he gave her a call and they decided they could "scoop" everybody if they used the paragraph in the essay.

One problem was that the paragraph had handwritten brackets around it with the word "omit" and a question mark in the margin, but the young man copied the words down anyway and they were used in the essay, handed in earlier this week.

His curiousity continued to get the better of him, and the young man leafed through the remaining pages.

Being rather intelligent and somewhat politically aware, he quickly assumed they pertained to the upcoming budget.

The importance of the documents and their potential value flashed through his mind and he decided he didn't want to be burdened with that knowledge. He carefully put the material away.

No one might have known about the incident, but as newspaper people know, when you've got a "scoop" it's hard to keep quiet about it.

Word got out through the university and eventually the Times confronted the young man, who related the details of his encounter with the confidential documents.

He now regrets that little "peak" and says he didn't think through the full consequences of it.

The Bennett aide was asked today about leaving the confidential material overnight and the question was met with a long silence.

Asked if he was still on the phone, he replied: "Yes, but I'm sure not going to say anything." Then he hung up.

Loss of Korbin Decried by Lauk

Suspended Pair Foolish —Curtis

Two employees of the B.C. Housing Management Commission were suspended Thursday in the wake of allegations of conflict of interest.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis announced the move to the legislature Thursday but would not name the officials or the strata title management firm they alledgedly set up.

He stressed that he believes their actions were merely foolish rather than an attempt to misuse the corporation.

The allegations, which surfaced in the house Wednesday, are that the two men set up the management firm while they were still working for the public corporation.

Curtis said the men were told by their solicitor in February, when they set up the company, that they might be in a conflict of interest.

He said he understands one or both of the men subsequently divested themselves of their share in the firm.

The suspensions, without pay, are pending completion of the investigation.

The B.C. Development Corporation may be headed for "pork barrel" politics, former NDP Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk said the departure of BCDC president David Korbin means the corporation has lost a highly qualified, non-partisan head, who kept the government agency non-political.

Korbin was appointed by the NDP when the BCDC was founded in early 1974. He resigned Thursday saying he felt Economic Development and BCDC chairman Minister Don Phillips did not have confidence in him.

"In order for the corporation to be effective in assisting the industrial development of B.C., it is imperative that the government have confidence in me," Korbin said.

Korbin said he regrets the situation as he believes "the corporation has performed well in its initial experimental phase of operation."

Lauk said the new Socred government fired former BCDC chairman Peter Stanley and now, in effect, has fired Korbin by expressing lack of confidence in him.

He described Korbin as a "good British Columbian and a devoted British Columbian" and said he believes Phillips did not have confidence in him because he is a friend of Lauk's.

Korbin is a Vancouver chartered accountant.

Times News Services

BEIRUT (AP) — Moslem leaders threatened today to shell from land and sea the Christian stronghold in which Lebanese President Suleiman Franjieh has taken refuge.

The Christian-Moslem civil war raged with full fury in Beirut and the surrounding hills. The estimated death toll since last April passed the 13,000 mark. Statements from both sides indicated that Syrian plans for a political compromise are doomed and that the war will only be settled by a military showdown.

Police reported 146 persons killed and more than 200 wounded after midnight, raising the toll to 1,172 dead since the last Syrian-sponsored ceasefire began collapsing on March 11. But the police figures were incomplete.

Artillery shells and mortar rounds crashed down on most of the city. Much shelling from both sides was directed into residential quarters at random, apparently to terrorize noncombatants. Many of the casualties were civilians.

Franjieh, Lebanon's 65-year-old Christian president, fled early Thursday with his family and top aides to seaside Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut, when heavy Moslem shelling made a shambles of the hilltop presidential palace four miles east of Beirut.

"We have warships that are going to visit Jounieh," Lebanon's leading Moslem leftist, Kamal Junblatt, told a Beirut newspaper. "I am sorry for Jounieh, because that town, where we have a lot of friends, is going to be subjected to shelling from the sea."

How Jumblat could shell Franjieh into submission remained to be seen. The Lebanese navy consists only of a few gunboats and they are in the port of Jounieh under Franjieh's control.

Teamster Talks Stalled

Attempts to end a three-day-old strike of some 2,000 B.C. Teamsters continued in Labor Minister Allan Williams' office at the legislature today without sign of progress by late morning.

Representatives of the Teamsters Union and Transport Labor Relations Association which bargains for 90 companies handling 80 per cent of truck freight business in the province, were brought to Victoria by Williams in an effort to bring speedy settlement to the dispute.

Bargaining is hung up on the issue of wages, with Teamsters asking for $1.40 an hour increase on a typical $6.50 an hour rate for semi-trailer drivers employed by cartage firms.

Employers, about 15 of whom have indicated agreement to the demand and remained operating, offered a two-year pact based on $1.05 and 90 cents hourly in the period, plus 5 cents an hour vacation pay.

When the strike was called Tuesday, said Teamsters' leader Sen. Ed Lawson, many employers had already started paying the increased wage and offered improved working conditions.

Boozy Binges, Suicide Talk Finished Nixon

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Richard Nixon, in the final phase of his days as president of the United States, was portrayed in newspaper and magazine accounts today as a man who drank to excess and was obsessed with suicide.

The former president's suicide talk so disturbed his aides that they removed all medication from his medicine chest.

The revelations appear in a book, The Final Days, by Watergate reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post. Time magazine and The Daily News say it has been closely guarded prior to its publication next month by Simon and Schuster and serialization of excerpts beginning Monday in Newsweek.

A report in Time, as amplified by columnist Liz Smith of The Daily News, says the book relates that in the days before his resignation Nixon spent much of his time drinking in a small office in the Executive Office Building, either alone or with press secretary Ron Ziegler.

The News says that Nixon's son-in-law, David Eisenhower, expressed concern for Nixon's mental condition, reporting to an aide that he had seen the president, intoxicated, talking to the portraits of former presidents.

Time says that as the end neared, Nixon asked State Secretary Henry Kissinger to kneel and pray with him, saying:

"You are not a very othodox Jew and I am not an orthodox Quaker, but we need to pray."

The News says that after the prayer Nixon began crying, screaming and beating his fists on the floor.

Even though Ziegler was one of the former president's few confidants in the final days, Time says, the press secretary sometimes became the object of Nixon's temper and that Nixon was heard on one occasion screaming at Ziegler: "Get out! Get out!"

When Nixon summoned his family, wife, daughters and sons-in-law, for a final White House photograph, says Time, White House photographer Ollie Atkins had to shoot for some time to get a picture which did not show tears on any of their faces.

Nixon's wife, Pat, also was reported to have sought solace in alcohol and began slipping down to the servants' quarters at night and returning to her private bedroom with glasses full of bourbon.

The former president also sought seclusion on the presidential yacht Sequoia to get away from the "goddam press" and those he considered his enemies.

Time reported that Nixon cried as Kissinger tried to reassure him that his foreign policy accomplishements would survive the tragedy of Watergate.

"Kissinger . . . often sneered at Nixon behind his back," Time said, "and sometimes concealed his loathing only with difficulty when they were together." Privately, Kissinger referred to Nixon as "our meatball president," the magazine said.

80% Think In Celsius

Man-on Street Survey Surprises Metric Conversion Plan But 'The Agony' Persists for 20%

By AL FOREST
Times Staff

About 80 per cent of all Ca-Canadian Metric Commission. rather than Fahrenheit according to the results of a man-in-the-street survey, says Ron Wood of Ottawa, manager of media relations for the Canadian Metriic Commission.

Wood, who was in Victoria this week to address the B.C. branch of the Canadian Broadcasters Association at The Empress, said in an interview.

"We were surprised and pleased by the results of a survey conducted by a professor of the University of Alberta in Edmonton.

"He and his students interviewed a large number of people on the street and asked them what the temperature was. The result was overwhelming. About 80 per cent gave the temperature in Celsius without hesitation.

"It shows that most people are thinking Celsius."

Wood said it also shows that radio stations are making a mistake if they give temperatures in both Celsius and Fahrenheit.

"If the majority of people are already thinking Celsius it makes no sense to give the Fahrenheit equivalent. It just delays the agony for the other 20 per cent."

The use of Celsius has also started in the United States, which is almost the last country in the world to remain on the Fahrenheit scale.

"Celsius is becoming a bit of a fad, especially in California."

The Americans will eventually move to the metric system but not as quickly as in Canada.

The Celsius system will be one year old in Canada on April 1 and on that date all atmospheric pressures will be given for the first time in kilopascals and wind speeds will be given in kilometres per hour.

Wood said there should be no difficulties with either conversion because the only thing that matters about barometric pressure is whether it is going up or down and wind speeds will be called light, moderate or strong in addition to the new numbering scale.

Wood said Canada is right on schedule for its target of complete conversion to the metric system before 1980.

He said it might ease the mind of Canadians if the following things were known:

—There is no plan to change the time system under the metric conversion plan. Some train and airline companies use a 24-hour clock (in which 2 p.m. becomes 1400) but this has nothing to do with the metric system and is not expected to replace the present 12 hour clock in Canada.

—A dozen is still 12 under the metric system. Eggs may still be sold by the dozen just as at present. The move by an Ottawa baker to sell buns by the metric dozen (10 buns) was just a selling gimmick and had nothing to do with metric conversion.

—The federal department of consumer and corporate affairs is monitoring companies to make sure they do not take advantage of the metric conversion to bring in hidden price increases. The vast majority of companies have been co-operating be referring to unit prices, Wood said.

The main problem the metric commission has encountered is a tendency to "soft conversion" by some companies.

For example, they may change a one-inch screw to a 2.54 centimetre screw. They are both the same length. But this odd-sizing is confusing for European purchasers who use sizes like 2 centimetres or 2.5 centimetres.

Wood said the companies plan to convert in two stages but this doesn't satisfy the purchasers in the Common Market.

Cowboy Image? Not So

Victoria policemen chose their new-style open holster not because they want to act like "cowboys" but because it's safe and efficient to use, police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said today.

He was commenting on a decision by Sidney council to write to the Victoria police board, complaining about the "threatening" appearance of the new Victoria uniform which will include handguns in open holsters on the right hip.

Braiden stressed that practicality and safety were the only considerations in adopting the new open holster, which is the style officially endorsed by the B.C. Police Commission.

The present flap-covered holster worn on the left hip involves reaching across the body to grasp the handgun, and the weapon could be accidentally discharged in the act of drawing it back across the body to the firing position.

However, with the new holster the gun can be withdrawn quickly and easily and brought straight up into a position ready for firing, he said.

Braiden also pointed out that at present the butt of the handgun faces outward, conveniently for a would-be assailant but much less so for the policeman himself as it is on his weaker left side.

"It's not something we flippantly picked because we want to be cowboys," he added.

"The police board was totally convinced that this is not done for show but is just good common sense."

The new holsters come into use when the other uniform changes are put into effect this summer.

When Sidney council agreed on the protest this week Ald. Bob Wallace referred to the uniform policy as "this creeping military show."

Ald. Ross Martin said Thursday the exposed weapon "doesn't create the warm and friendly attitude we want surrounding the police."

12 Deaf Ears Turned To Pay Restraint Plea

A plea by Ald. Ron McKenzie Thursday, for Victoria city council to show restraint by foregoing a pay raise this year, fell on 12 deaf ears.

Only McKenzie and Ald. John Hayes voted against final approval of a bylaw increasing council salaries by eight per cent.

Voting in favor of the bylaw, which raises Mayor Mike Young's salary to $21,190 and aldermen's pay to $7,954, were the mayor and aldermen Helen Biernes, Murray Glazier, Alf Hood, Bill Tindall and Bob Wright.

The ninth member of council, Ald. Bob Ellis, was absent.

McKenzie sad he doesn't consider the pay raise justified in view of the "depressed state of the economy" and the projected sharp increase in property taxes this year.

He said council should follow the example set by the provincial government in reducing MLAs' salaries.

But Ald. Bob Wright pointed out the eight per cent increase is still less than the 9.5 per cent increase in the cost of living over the past year, and claimed "this in itself shows some restraint."

"I believe it is a dangerous policy to fall further behind because this leads to a situation where only the wealthy can afford to run for office," he said.

That would not be in the best interests of the community.

Recommending council continue its recent practice of adjusting salaries annually, Mayor Young recalled that about four years ago, after falling behind somewhat, council had to go through the "trauma" of giving itself a substantial catch-up raise.

He noted that if council foregoes an increase this year and the federal anti-inflation guidelines remain in force for the next two or three years the problem will only be compounded.

HOLDUP SUSPECT 'MENTALLY ILL'

A man arrested moments after a bank robbery in Victoria Thursday was described as mentally ill when he appeared in court this morning and was remanded for a month of psychiatric observation.

Russell Winston Pearce, 38, of 1015 Gillespie Place, had been charged with robbery with threat of violence.

He was arrested in a cafe while counting a stack of bills after a man grabbed $1,260 from teller Eva McLeod in the Bank of Nova Scotia, Yates and Douglas, one block away.

Two bank employees followed the suspect from the bank to Evelyn's Coffee Shop, beside the library. He was arrested by police there four minutes after the bank robber told the teller: "I have a pistol in my pocket. This is a holdup and I want $500."

In court today a doctor told Judge William Ostler that Pearce has a lengthy history of mental illness and has been treated at both the Eric Martin Institute and Riverview Hospital on the Mainland.

Dr. Weichman Billung-Meyer said he believes the accused to be mentally ill and unfit to stand trial.

Pearce, in a lengthy rambling statement, said he has been persecuted for a decade and is responsible for the troubles in Ireland.

Inquiry Starts At Naden

Members of the board, meeting behind closed doors, are Cmdr. G. N. Beveridge, CFB Esquimalt; Lt.-Cmdr. B. E. Deribie, Fleet School Esquimalt, and naval Lieut. R. R. Godden, Maritime Staff Pacific Esquimalt.

CFB Esquimalt spokesman Major Denny Ryan said that findings of the board will likely be made public when inquiry is completed.

RCMP, meanwhile, are investigating the suicide Friday of Sgt. David Blue who was questioned last week in connection with the mess' financial situation.

Heart Unit Funds Needed—Jubilee

Royal Jubilee Hospital will soon ask the provincial government for money to expand its open heart surgery unit, subject of a heated exchange in the legislature Thursday.

The unit, only one of its kind on Vancouver Island, handles intricate surgery on major heart cases and has been working at capacity since it opened four years ago.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director, said today the hospital's submission will probably go to the government next week.

Four operations a week are done in it as well as emergency cases bringing the weekly average to five. The hospital wants to handle six cases a week plus emergencies, an expansion of 40 per cent.

In the legislature Thursday, Health Minister Bob McClelland defended the unit's record and said the hospital had never asked for funds to expand.

McClelland also sharply criticized Tory leader Scott Wallace for what he called his "irresponsibility" in criticizing the heart unit.

McClelland said Wallace had indicated "people were dying on the street" because of inadequate facilities but Wallace angrily shouted back that the minister was distorting his words.

In the legislature on Wednesday Wallace had said some people on the waiting list for heart surgery in Victoria had died and he reiterated his stand after McClelland's speech.

Wallace said there are about 100 people on the waiting list fo surgery.

But the minister said the list was not longer than 44 and give figures to show the unit was slowly increasing its capacity.

Last year the unit completed 199 operations compared to nearly 50 already this year, he said.

Five operations are done a week, he said, and the average waiting period is four to five weeks.

In emergency cases, however, said McClelland, operations are done immediately, sometimes at night with overtime bills as high as $2,000.

Hospital officials confirmed McClelland's figures today.

But the minister stressed that Jubilee has not requested funds for expanding the unit and said if a request is made "you can bet we'll act on it as a responsible government."

Escalating health costs are a "national crisis," according to McClelland, and in the last two years hospital costs have gone up 80 per cent.

He agreed health-funding arrangements are out-dated but promised his government will bring in changes.

It took the NDP three years to create "the mess," he said, and it will take his governnet six or seven months to clean it up.

McClelland also told hospital administrations Thursday the provincial government will pick up two-thirds of operating deficits they incurred last year but warned them once again they must live within this year's budgets.

The boards at both Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals considered their financing problems at meetings Thursday night.

At Victoria General, last year's operating budget is virtually balanced but at Jubilee the two-thirds subsidy still leaves a deficit of about $250,000.

Dr. Pickles said today the possibility of layoffs or reduction in service to patients now turns on the basis of subsidy the government approves for this year.

The board submitted its proposed budget in January and expects to hear from the government next month.

If the province approves a budget for this year based on last year's grant plus additions for wage increases and inflation costs, he said, then another large operating deficit appears inevitable.

The government should base its budget appproval on Jubilee's actual experience last year, which produced a deficit of $1.1 million.

The hospital has achieved economies, in response to McClelland's urging, largely through reducing staff by attrition, and will be able to cut about $600,000 from this year's operating costs, Pickles said.

He praised the staff's co-operation but said any additional economies by government will mean layoffs, leading to a reduction in patient services.

CUPE Local Likely Faces Disciplining

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Canadian Union of public Employees local 951 took "dangerous action" in opting for a no-strike, no-lockout contract clause and will lilely face disciplinary action from the union's national office.

The statement came today from CUPE field representative Alex Markides who said the local included the clause against his wishes and against the urgings of national CUPE president Grace Hartman.

A telegram from Hartman last week to the local, representing inside office and technical workers at the University of Victoria, warns:

The local will "lose all effective bargaining power" with the inclusion of the no strike clause.

"I urge rejection as the clause is contrary to CUPE policy."

Markides said the national CUPE officials have considered these kinds of clauses and rejected them because they do not believe in compulsory arbitration.

"If that's progressive thinking, I'm afraid the local's lost all it's thinking.'"

Markides said he is sure the action "has shocked" union officials throughout the province.

The only similar clause ever adopted by a union in B.C. he said was rejected after the first agreement.

"As far as I'm aware one local included it in its first agreement but took it out right after," he said.

Markides said he is sure there is some disciplinary action available to the national office to handle "this violation of national policy."

Dennis Burke, president of CUPE local 388 representing 200 inside workers for the city, said he had mixed reactions to the no-strike, no-lockout clause.

"I don't blame them, their business is their own, but I don't think local 388 would go for that clause."

"Only the future will tell," said Burke, adding the move may mean the workers will tend to drop behind their peers in terms of salary, or they may succeed in maintaining the same wages.

Burke did agree, however, it is traditional "not to tie your hands" by a no-strike, no-lockout clause.

Narconon Vancouver to Open Here

Narconon Vancouver, a non-profit organization which claims a success rate of 75 per cent rehabilitating drug addicts who take its program, intend to open a similar operation in Victoria this year.

Lillyean Walle and Jim Whyte, two workers in Vancouver, said Thursday they will meet Ald. Alf Hood next month to acquaint themselves with city regulations and detail their proposals for him.

Narconon Vancouver has won praise from prison, police and court officials since it began three years ago. It claims to have weened more than 100 drug users from their habit.

The organization offers three communications programs at Oakalla prison in Burnaby and one at the Allouette River unit in Haney which lead addicts to self-confidence and a sense of worth, enabling them to confront their problems rather than running away from them, said Walle.

"You get to the point where you feel good without the use of drugs," said Whyte, a former heroin user who has spent eight of the past 12 years in jail. Most Narconon workers are former drug users.

Whyte recalled that when he was active in drugs, he "pushed" them at a downtown hotel in Victoria and "there was quite a big market."

In Vancouver, Narconon operates a "street program" from a residence which has accommodation for 30 people where they can come for help with drugs before they end up in jail.

It offers intense vitamin therapy to help people through withdrawal as well as a "touch" technique to assist them to relax muscles, tension being a major source of pain during withdrawal.

Narconon began in an Arizona prison in 1966 and has since spread throughout North America and into 14 countries. Its literature says that based on its experience it has found that the average person with a drug abuse problem will overcome it by attending Narconon classes three hours a day for 12 weeks.

It does this by leading students through a progressively more difficult series of communications exercises leading to "wins" or personal successes, thus developing their sense of worth and ability.

Narconon in Vancouver has received some funds from provincial and municipal governments but 70 per cent of its financing comes from canvassing of private companies and individuals.

Walle said that it could likely carry on a similar operation in Victoria but will be suggesting to the provincial Alcohol and Drug Commission that it found the Victoria program as a "pilot project."

Whyte estimates $35,000 will be needed to launch Narconon in Victoria for a year. The organization says it costs about $50,000 to catch and jail an addict while Narconon could be rehabilitating them at a cost of about $2,000 each.

It wants to operate both a street program from a residence in Victoria as well as a program at Wilkinson Road jail but has yet to discuss the latter with jail officials here.

IT WAS A BUM WRAP BUT IT SAVED HIM

SEATTLE (AP) — Coast Guard crews are used to seeing the people they rescue in various states of dress or undress, but a Port Angeles air station helicopter crew saw a new one Thursday morning.

In answer to a request from the Seattle rescue co-ordination centre, the helicopter was conducting a shoreline search for a missing sports fisherman along the northwest side of Blake Island in Puget Sound.

Gene Lajoie of Port Orchard, Wash., had gone fishing in an eight-foot pram. When it sank off the island, he swam ashore. Lajoie found an outhouse, stripped off his wet clothing and wrapped himself with the toilet paper to stop hypothermia.

The startled coastguardmen agreed the action was a bit unorthodox, but highly effective.

Lajoie was in good shape, despite his dip in the chilly waters. The coast guard flew him to Port Orchard — toilet paper and all.

Binge By Wine Buyers

LONDON (UPI) — The greatest sale of vintage Bordeaux wines of this century netted almost $2 million at its close Friday with 360,000 bottles changing hands in two days.

Christies, the London fine art auctioneers, said the wine — including some of the most famous of French wines such as Chateau Margaux, Chateau Lafite and Chateau Latour — was bought almost exclusively by international wine merchants, with Americans bidding "as though prohibition was just about to be reimposed."

The top price of $580 was uncorked for a 12-bottle case of Chateau Haut-Brion 1955.

The mountain of 30,000 cases was sold for a total of $1.8 million, Christies said.

Arab Riots Spreading

Times News Services

Arab rioting spread within Israel on Thursday as hundreds of youths in this Israeli Arab village near Haifa threw stones at police and passing cars.

Meanwhile, a second Palestinian rioter was reported killed in a clash with Israeli troops in occupied West Jordan.

The riot erupted outside the Shfar'am town hall where mayors of Arab villages in Israel were meeting to discuss a one-day general strike called to protest a government plan to purchase 1,500 acres of Arab-owned land in the Galilee district.

The youths went on a rampage, stoning police and cars, after 35 of the 50 mayors announce they had voted to postpone the Communist-inspired strike, planned for Wednesday, until after a meeting next month with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Twenty teenagers were arrested.

The military command, meanwhile, annouced the second fatality in a month of anti-Israeli rioting in the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

It said a 34-year-old Palestinian man died Wednesday after he was beaten during a riot in Hebron.

The United States has vetoed a Security Council resolution criticizing Israel's administration of occupied Arab territory, prompting Arab charges the vote was motivated by election-year politics.

The council's other 14 members, including the Soviet Union, voted for the resolution sponsored by five non-aligned nations.

Scranton vetoed the measure despite a speech Tuesday in which he said Israel's annexation of Arab areas of Jerusalem and its establishment of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories were an "obstacle" to Middle East peace.

Several delegates speculated the state department decided to veto the resolution because of President Ford's defeat in the North Carolina Republisan primary Tuesday.

Although this was not voiced officially, Marsur Rashid Kikhia of Libya and Zehdi Labib Terzi of the Palestine Liberation Organization said on the council floor they believed the veto was cast because the Jewish vote is important this election year.

Scranton said the resolution would have damaged Middle East peacemaking efforts.

Flu Vaccine For Only 1%

quickly Thursday to purchase nearly $750,000 worth of the vaccine.

Alberta Social Services Minister Helen Hunley said the vaccine could be in short supply "unless we order now."

"Everybody won't need it," she said, noting that certain target age groups would be most affected by the outbreak.

No cases of the disease — called swine influenza — have been reported in Canada, but "concern is increasing greatly" that it could spread and that it could develop here by fall, Miss Hunley said.

Stressing that the move was a "preventive measure," the minister said she expected vaccinations would be done through local health units. Administrative details and information on the purchase volume have not been worked out, she said.

Alberta was the third province to order the vaccine, following Manitoba and Ontario.

In Vancouver, Tony Larsen, director of the British Columbia health department's epidemiology division, said Thursday he should know by the end of the week how his division will respond to the possible flu threat.

Although the problem is being discussed nationally, he said, the final decision for B.C. will be made here because health is a provincial responsibility.

The Armand Frappier Institute of the University of Quebec is ready to start producing 300,000 doses of swine influenza vaccine for distribution to Canadians by next fall, institute director Aurele Beaulnes said.

The institute, formerly the Institute of Hygiene and Microbiology, is the only one in Canada capable of developing such a vaccine in the desired time, he added.

"Even for us, it will be a real challenge to make from scratch a new, effective and safe vaccine and to produce 300,000 doses before fall," he said.

Simpler Laws Urged

them out the other and then sucking them back in again — a self-generating mechanism, certainly not a human process."

The report said a general section should be placed in the Criminal Code obliging the prosecution to find "intent of recklessness" on the part of the offender unless this was specifically excluded.

If it was the defence of due diligence — allowing a defendant to explain himself and show that he used all reasonable care to avoid the offence — should be allowed.

The first test of criminality should be whether the offence results in serious harm to others.

The second should be whether it seriously contravened fundamental values to the point where society was harmed. The third should be whether enforement measures themselves might do more harm than the proposed offence.

Legislators should then consider whether making something a crime would make a significant contribution to dealing with the problem.

The report said that offences which most people don't consider to be wrong — booking bets, pretending to practice witchcraft — should be deleted from the Code.

A hard look should be taken at offences "whose wrongfulness and seriousness today is controversial." These included the drug laws and those governing abortion, for example.

There should be a "fundamental reappraisal" not only of criminal law on property offences but of the role of property in Canadian society.

Theft, the most prevalent property offence and mentioned in about 60 sections of the Code, indicated the value placed on private ownership.

"Our paradigm of crime is theft," the report said. "Sometimes, however, paradigms need changing.

Pollution, depletion of resources, poverty, unemployment, inflation, race conflicts, terrorism, alienation — all these throw doubts on the adequacy of our older criminal law paradigm."

The commission said it will propose simpler property offence law.

POISON DUMPING END URGED

VANCOUVER (CP — The director of Westwater Research Centre says dumping poisonous chemicals into the Fraser River must end, and a serious scientific study of the damage already done must be started.

In the text of a lecture given Thursday, the last in the Westwater lecture series, Irving K. Fox says the way such things could be done is to set up a separate political committee of the Greater Vancouver Regional District dedicated to environmental protection of the river, particularly its mouth.

A study by the Westwater staff indicates such a committee could cost at least $358,000 and at most $695,000 a year. That would include a separate civil service component including scientific staff to make continuing studies of the waters of the Fraser that have been found to contain substances that defy analysis in addition to well-known poisons such as polychlorinated bi-vinyls and mercury.

The environmental protection committee would co-ordinate environmental protection services now being provided by a variety of agencies of provincial, federal and localg overnments, Fox said.

He said the GVRD should also put into efffect a program to prevent industrial firms from dumping toxic chemicals into the sewer systems of the urban area. A program of monitored controls and incentives would include automatic fines for polluters, he added.

This program would cost about $300,000 a year in addition to the committee costs, Fox said.

He said tests of flesh of aquatic creatures had found a number of toxic materials.

BROADBENT CALLS DAVE TO WIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed Broadbent, federal leader of the New Democratic Party, predicted Thursday that provincial NDP leader Dave Barrett would win his Vancouver East byelection.

Broadbent, beginning a four-day informal tour of the Vancouver and Victoria areas, said at a news conference there is no question that the former premier is the best man to lead the NDP in British Columbia.

Barrett was defeated in Coquitlam riding in the provincial election last December. Date for the byelection has not been set.

Ferry Fare Abuses

Vancouver (CP) — A spokesman for British Columbia Ferries says there is nothing the service can do about buses on the Howe Sound-Jervis Inlet ferry runs.

The spokesman, who asked to remain unidentified, said the system is abused by people who claim to be residents of the Sunshine Coast and are issued commuter cards, entitling them to cut-rate fares on the ferry runs.

The card enable use of the ferries at $4 instead of $6 for a car, plus $1 instead of $2 a head for drivers and passengers.

"The way the system is laid out we can't do much about it," said the ferry spokesman. "There's no way we can stop them."

The spokesman suggested that the commuter cards be issued in future by municipal offices in the area, or by the RCMP.

He said that while it is illegal to make a fase declaration of residency, no one has been prosecuted.

Persons who make a false declaration under oath are guilty of an indictable offence and are subject to a maximum of 14 years in prison.

The ferries spokesman said there are about 50,000 commuter cards in circulation. The estimated total population of the entire Powell River area and the Sunshine Coast Regional District, which covers the Sechelt, Gibsons and Pender Harbor areas, is 37,800.

Regulations state that only permanent residents of the regional district and Powell River qualify for the cards. Summer or part-time residents are not eligible.

But as ferry officials agree, anyone who wants a card can obtain one. A person has only to make a sworn declaration at either the Horseshoe Bay or Langdale terminal that he is a fulltime resident. No further proof is required of his actual residency. A form is filed and the card issued.

Don Lockstead, NDP MLA for the riding, said both he and his wife hold commuter cards, which also cover their five children.

Hospital Aid Cut Likely

VANCOUVER (CP) — Funds for a proposed $20 million new emergency centre at the Vancouver General Hospital may be cut in half by Health Minister Bob McClelland, it was revealed at the hospital's board of trustees meeting Thursday.

Ben Wosk, chairman of the hospital building committee, said that during a meeting Tuesday with McClelland in Victoria, the health minister proposed the costs should be no higher than $10 million.

Wosk told the board the committee thinks it advisable to accept this amount in order that something can get started in renovating the hospital.

He said the new centre might be constructed within the sum if the teaching facilities are deleted.

Wosk said McClelland was going to ask Education Minister Pat McGeer if some of the health resources fund — a joint federal-provincial grant for medical educational facilities — could be used on the emergency centre.

Dr. David Bates, dean of the University of British Columbia medical school, said it is probable that hospital would be given autonomy to use its share of the health resources fund as it considers best.

Discussions are not going on between UBC and downtown hospitals about allocations of the fund, which has to be used before 1980.

Sprinkler Retreat

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council's housing committee indicated Thursday it may retreat from the idea of strict enforcement of fire bylaw requirements in apartment buildings. The B.C. rental housing council has complained that the fire bylaw requirements, which involve sprinkler systems in most old buildings, are unreasonable and would cost an average of $1,500 a suite in west end apartment buildings.

Jail for Rapist

CRANBROOK (CP) — David Wayne Adams, 28, of Calgary was sentenced Thursday to four years in prison after being found guilty Tuesday of rape. Adams was found guilty in B.C. Supreme Court of the rape of a 27-year-old Cranbrook woman Sept. 7, 1975.

Mall Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A proposed two-storey shopping mall on Robson Street should be rejected, city engineer Bill Curtis said Thursday. Curtis told city council's planning committee he is concerned about the effect the development will have on the rest of Robson Street as well as its effects on traffic patterns and services.

The proposal by N. B. Cook Corp. calls for construction of a two-storey shopping centre with more than 60 shops around a central courtyard. The project would take up about a third of the square block bounded by Robson, Thurlow, Haro and Burrard.

Picket Meeting

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Guy, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said Thursday a further meeting to clear up picket line problems between the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW), United Steelworkers of America and the Federation will be held April 5. CAIMAW is on strike against Canex Placer and Noranda interior mines.

Free Press Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson reserved decision Thursday in British Columbia Supreme Court suits for damages against the British Columbia Federation of Labor and the International Typographical Union, Local 226, by E. W. Bickle Ltd. publishers and 12 printers.

The suits were launched following a 2½-year dispute at Comox Free Press, owned by Bickle, during which the ITU picketed the newspaper.

The court was told the 12 printers were expelled from the union for crossing an ITU picket line which they believed was illegal.

Last September, Mr. Justice Anderson ruled that the ITU picket line was illegal and that the expulsions also were illegal.

The case was adjourned until this week for a hearing on the question of damages to be awarded. The company seeks damages against the ITU and BCFL, the expelled printers against the ITU.

J. E. Welsh of Courtenay, lawyer for the printers, said Thursday that ITU's unlawful expulsions of the 12 amounted to a breach of contract and that as a result they had been deprived of their legal rights with the union.

Michael Hunter, counsel for Bickle, said the firm suffered between $30,000 and $50,000 of lost advertising revenue and other income because of the picketing and an edict issued against it by the BCFL.

Raymond Cocking, counsel for ITU, said Thursday that if damages are to be awarded, they should not exceed $10,000.

He said earlier that Bickle could have mitigated its losses as a result of the picketing by bringing its case to court sooner than it did.

MILK SHORTAGE?

VERNON (CP) — Fluctuating federal dairy policies might result in a milk shortage in British Columbia within two years, says Henry Wiens, manager of Noca Dairies.

Despite a surplus of milk production across the nation because of federal price policy to farmers, new policy changes forcing milk production cutbacks will cause a shortage, he said.

"Undoubtedly we will approach, perhaps even as early as in two years' time, a shortage of some dairy products in Canada," he told the annual meeting of the Shuswap-Okanagan Dairy Industries Co-operative Association Wednesday.

"The environment that appeared to exist two years ago, creating a threatened shortage and lack of interest in the dairy industry, is approaching once more."

Argentine: 3 Years Of Rule by a Myth

By JOANNE OMANG
The Washington Post

BUENOS AIRES — The fall of President Isabel Peron of Argentina has ended three years in which a vivid myth, rather than a real person, was effectively head of the Argentine state.

The myth was the 30-year-old memory of the early days of Juan Domingo Peron.

The myth was brought back from 18 years in exile to the presidency in 1973, but neither the real 72-year-old man nor, a year later, his frail young widow, Isabel, could measure up to it.

Elected vice-president in 1973 because Peron insisted on it, the former Maria Estela Martinez willingly remained in Peron's shadow.

As he rallied around him the disparate elements of Argentina's 24 million persons, propounding his doctrine of class collaboration under a strong central executive, she was widely ignored.

She was only vice-president, it was generally believed, as a stopgap until the various factions had sorted out which of them was strongest and in line to succeed Peron.

Educated no further than the Sixth grade, the blonde former dancer had captivated the aging Peron during his exile.

He had married her, the stories said, so as not to embarrass Gen. Francisco Franco, his host during his 18 years in Spain.

Meanwhile, Peron's broad coalition began to fray.

His health failing, he lacked the buoyant presence of his second wife, Evita, who had always rallied the common people in his behalf.

Though Isabel imitated Evita in hairstyle and function, her nervous, high-pitched public appearances never came close to rousing the delirious mass love "Eva" had evoked.

Young people, who had been small children during Peron's previous government, had believed in the myth of Peron the populist.

Peron's radical social programs had helped the country's poor, and his labor reforms beginning in 1946 all but created Argentina's trade union movement.

In alliance with the union, the strongest in Latin America and devoutly Peronist, youthful agitators had helped create the demonstrations that convinced the armed forces Argentina could not be governed without Peronist support.

Once re-elected president in 1973 by an awesome 7 million votes, Peron began to demonstrate that it was not his conservative policies that were mere tactics designed to win support for social reforms, as the young leftists had thought, but the other way around.

Soldiers read of coup

The left marched out of his movement on May 1, 1974, two months before he died.

Later, as Isabel moved even further to the right, the far leftist Montenero guerrilla organization went underground and declared war on her. The violence that had shocked Argentines when it began in the hills of Tucuman in 1969 quickly escalated into a numbing daily bloodbath.

In the nearly two years of her government, at least 2,000 persons were killed in battles between the extreme left and the extreme right-wing death squads that materialized in response.

Mrs. Peron inherited the presidency because her husband had never been able to bring himself to designate an heir apparent.

He had always cut down his rivals as they blossomed, preferring a field of squabbling second lieutenants eager for his favor.

As they had vied to be the most slavish in their devotion to Peron during his lifetime, the various faction leaders at first rivaled noisily after his death July 1, 1974, over who was the most loyal to his widow. The honeymoon lasted about six months.

During that time, Argentina coasted.

Isabel Peron, thrust into a job she always said she never wanted, turned for help to the next nearest strong man — Jose Lopez Rega, Peron's former private secretary, astrologer, personal adviser and house philosopher. Under his influence and encouragement, Mrs. Peron adopted an imperial manner.

She ordered friends about as though they were servants, scorned any contact with the press and left high labor officials cooling their heels awaiting audiences.

She closed more publications, came seldom to the cavernous presidential offices in the Casa Rosada, the government pink house, and virtually stopped talking to anyone but Lopez Rega and his entourage.

Lopez Rega's influence grew to the point where he controlled all access to the president.

Amid general pronouncements of nationwide prosperity, the economic deterioration that preceded Peron's first ouster in 1955 began to repeat itself.

A believer like most Argentines in a bottomless cornucopia of wealth from the vast fertile pampas, Peron had made his legend of distributing some of that vision to the nation's workers.

When he took power this time, inflation was already at more than 40 percent. Peron financed his full employment policy with the printing press.

A much-vaunted "social pact" between business and labor to hold down prices and wages instead only disguised inflation under a black market, smuggling and shortages. Private and foreign investment dwindled.

Isabel continued her husband's approach, gravitating in every choice toward popular policies of cheap food, jobs and pay raises for all instead of taking a harder line.

When the European Common Market closed its doors to Argentine beef, foreign income fell to new lows.

Economic hard times shattered the illusion of Peronist coalition unity, and the alliances Peron had woven began to disintegrate in earnest.

In June, 1975, a new economic minister, hand-picked by Lopez Rega, tripled the price of gasoline, halved the value of the peso and set a wage ceiling.

Outraged labor union leaders went right through the ceiling, massing 50,000 persons outside the Casa Rosada to howl for Lopez Rega's head and demand salary raises of up to 160 per cent.

They followed that with a general strike, the first ever against a Peronist government, and Mrs. Peron capitulated.

Under fire from every side, Lopez Rega, 56, left the country July 19.

The coup rumors then began in earnest. Mrs. Peron retreated into illness and the jockeying for positions close to her reached new intensity.

Still, the myth remained alive. Labor leaders talked of "a return to true Peronism" as a solution to the economic situation.

Mrs. Peron survived as long as she did on the strength of her name, the Peron myth that even today would probably win at least 30 per cent of the vote in a free election.

And although warring congressional factions railed against her and offered measure after measure to get her out, no one was willing to be the one who actually toppled the vision.

"If the army doesn't take the final step itself, nobody will take it," said a minority party leader a few days before the coup.

"The myth is too strong for anyone else to kill."

Bail Denied Drover

CALGARY (CP) — Provincial Judge John Gorman has denied bail for a Victoria man who faces three charges of attempted murder.

Judge Gorman granted a crown request that Garth Duke Drover, 38, be detained in custody for the protection of the public and because of the seriousness of the charges.

Leader of the Coup A Popular Moralist

Videla

BUENOS AIRES (WP) — Gen. Jorge Rafael Videla, the leader of Argentina's new ruling junta, is the sort of military figure around whom few anecdotes grow. The word most often applied to him is "moral."

A long-time teacher and director of the military College, Argentina's Royal Military College Videla has supporters among offices of all levels.

As director of the college, Videla was known as a moderate conservative, a devout Catholic with seven children, and a critic of any military role in politics.

"The army, the strong arm of the nation . . ." he said during these years, "ought to resemble a lion, ready to fight but confined in a golden cage of discipline, whose ears are the law and the regulations."

Videla was never known as an opponent of either Juan Peron or his widow.

Instead, he has been viewed as primarily anti-Communist. Videla was named in May 1975 to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and as army representative, he automatically became its head. Videla's first speech made it clear that he was not Peron's follower, either.

"Subordination is not submission nor blind obedience to the caprice of whoever rules," he said at his installation ceremony.

"It is obedience with conscience to the will of the superior. Thus is obedience ennobling."

Paronism at that time was in the first serious stage of crisis over rising inflation and the growing influence of Mrs. Peron's mysterious adviser, Jose Lopez Rega.

After Lopez Rega's ouster last July, Videla was among the military men who strongly protested the naming of an active colonel, linked to Lopez Rega, to the post of interior minister.

"The most pernicious option is any political alignment formed with partisan criteria, whether it be because of direct or indirect participation of the armed forces in partisan political affairs," he said.

The rest of the army supported this view of noninvolvement in politics and especially with the rapidly sinking Peron government.

After a tense period, she agreed reluctantly to remove both the minister in question and the army commander who had supported him.

Videla was installed as commander-in-chief of the army on Aug. 29. He quickly sought and got carte blanche for a campaign against leftist guerrillas operating in the northern province of Tucuman. In a much-admired gesture that won him wide support, he spent Christmas Eve in fatigues with the troops there.

Just Let Me Pack Some Clothes . . .

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — When told she was no longer president of Argentina, Isabel Peron turned pale and made only one request — for a suitcase of her clothes and personal effects, air force sources reported today.

Mrs. Peron must have known of the rumors of an imminent coup Tuesday, and she met with close advisers and cabinet members until after midnight. She left the cabinet meeting, however, with a sense of relief that another long day was over.

On the roof of the elegant rose-colored presidential palace, the helicopter was waiting. It was slightly larger than the helicopter she had used during the past few days but she didn't notice.

She climbed into the large comfortable seat behind the pilot. Her chief bodyguard, her private secretary, and the navy aide-de-camp on duty took seats behind her.

The chopper's propellers roared and Mrs. Peron did not notice that the air force officers in the back had turned their guns on the bodyguard and the secretary.

As they flew toward the presidential residence north of Buenos Aires, the pilot managed to make the helicopter tremble slightly and he turned to the president.

"We'll have to land at the metropolitan airport," he told her. "We're having engine trouble."

The helicopter landed in the military section of the airport. Mrs. Peron was helped down, still unaware what was happening. She was conducted to a waiting room.

There, an army general, a navy rear admiral, an air force general and an air force doctor were waiting.

They told Mrs. Peron she was under arrest and would be sent to a remote house in the resort region of the Andes.

The doctor was ready with tranquillizers. They were not needed.

Mrs. Peron turned pale, but made only one request. "May I have some of my clothes and personal things?" she asked.

The officers agreed and a maid was brought from the presidential residence with a suitcase for the former president.

She boarded the waiting air force plane and was flown to Bariloche, 1,010 miles southwest of Buenos Aires. By dawn Wednesday, she was in a car driving up the mountain road to El Messidor, a mansion owned by the province government of Nenquen and often used by presidents and visiting dignitaries.

The armed forces have not said what they intend to do with Mrs. Peron but they have said her personal safety is guaranteed.

BUDGET SPECIAL

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Increases in sales, personal income and corporation income taxes were included in Premier Bill Bennett's first budget brought down this afternoon.

The balanced budget of $3.615 billion presented by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe is about a five per cent increase over the current year's expenditures and about 12 per cent more than the NDP expected to spend this year.

The tax increases brought in by Bennett to pay for those increased expenditures, include an additional four-cent tax on a package of cigarettes.

The co-insurance charge for patients in hospitals will also increase.

Effective midnight tonight the sales tax increases from five to seven per cent and effective July 1 of this year the provincial income taxes increase two per centage points to 32.5 per cent.

The per diem charge for patients in acute care hospitals will increase from $1 to $4 a day, while patients in extended care hospitals will face charges of $7, up from $1.

Medicare premiums will also increase July 1, 1976 to $7.50 a month, up from $5 a month for a single person earning taxable income above $1,000 a year.

For an average income family of three or more the Medicare rate will increase to $18.75 a month, up from $12.50.

Corporation income taxes will increase two percentage points to 15, per cent, effective Jan. 1, 1976. The small business rate of tax will be 12 per cent.

On the positive side, homeowner grants to those over 65 will be increased $50, bringing the total available to those senior citizens to $380 for the 1976 property tax year.

Highlights

- Extended care charge up to $7 a day.
- Acute care charge up to $4 a day.
- Sales tax up to 7 per cent.
- Income tax rises to 32.5 per cent.
- Cigarettes boosted 4 cents a pack.
- Corporation tax jumps to 15 per cent.
- Balanced budget of $3.615 Billion.
- Senior citizen homeowner grants up $50.

The Social Credit government plans to integrate the homeowner grant and the school tax removal grant into one $280 grant fully available for total property taxes.

The expenditure of $3.615 billion campares with planned expenditures of $$3.222 billion this current year and revised actual expenditures of $3,430 billion.

Wolfe said existing taxes and revenues, with an expectation of a 14 per cent growth in the economy, would earn the province about $3,319 billion, leaving a shortfall of $295.5 million to balance the budget.

The new tax increases which include an increase in liquor licence fees would yield $267.5 million leaving still $28 million short for a balanced budget.

That $28 million will be made up by what Wolfe called "recapturing" special purpose funds and returning them to general revenue.

The funds affected include the provincial major disaster fund, the Greenbelt Protection Fund, the Agriculture Aid to Developing Countries and World Disaster Areas Fund and the now-defunct Economic Policy Analysis Institute.

While expenditures for most departments will increase budget cuts are forecast in highways, public works, housing, recreation and travel industry and transport and communications.

Wolfe said total expenditures for health, education and human resources will be up $339 million.

The Provincial Home Acquisition Fund will increase $16 million for second mortgages and the provincial revenue sharing with municipalities is increased from $20 to $30 million.

Wolfe described the budget as a "recovery budget" and said it is "a start on the road back, moving in a positive direction to restore confidence in B.C. as a good place to invest, to work and to live."

Budget Data Leaked?

Did confidential provincial budget material fall into the wrong hands before its official release today?

The Times has learned that a young man was asked by an aide of Premier Bennett about 10 days ago to put a folder of papers in a hotel safe overnight.

The curious young man took a look at the papers and saw at the top of the pile a press release concerning the Alberta budget.

Next came a page with a paragraph concerning federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements and their relation to the constitution. Under that was a stack of xeroxed pages which mixed written copy with graphs, tables and other provincial financial data.

A friend of the young man, it has been learned, was writing a university essay on the topic of the constitution and the paragraph he had seen nicely fitted in with her essay.

So he gave her a call and they decided they could "scoop" everybody if they used the paragraph in the essay.

One problem was that the paragraph had handwritten brackets around it with the word "omit" and a question mark in the margin, but the young man copied the words down anyway and they were used in the essay, handed in earlier this week.

His curiousity continued to get the better of him, and the young man leafed through the remaining pages.

Being rather intelligent and somewhat politically aware, he quickly assumed they pertained to the upcoming budget.

The importance of the documents and their potential value flashed through his mind and he decided he didn't want to be burdened with that knowledge. He carefully put the material away.

No one might have known about the incident, but as newspaper people know, when you've got a "scoop" it's hard to keep quiet about it.

Word got out through the university and eventually the Times confronted the young man.

He now regrets that little "peak" and says he didn't think through the full consequences of it.

The Bennett aide was asked today about leaving the confidential material overnight and the question was met with a long silence.

Asked if he was still on the phone, he replied: "Yes, but I'm sure not going to say anything." Then he hung up.

Enough Vaccine For 1 Pct. Only

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada will have enough vaccine to treat just over one per cent of the population next winter when the expected epidemic of swine flu strikes.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the Commons Thursday that Canada has no vaccine on hand at present and has the capacity to produce only 300,000 doses by next fall.

He stated the government has been in touch with foreign authorities to see whether enough can be imported to immunize the rest of Canadians who might require it.

Dr. I. A. D. Todd, member of the board of directors of the Canadian Medical Association, however, says CMA officials will not react to the possibility of an epidemic of swine flu virus in the emotional manner shown by United States officials in the last few days.

Todd, a Toronto surgeon and vice-president of the Ontario Medical Association, said there is always the threat of an outbreak of a new flu virus because strains develop every few years.

However, until the last few weeks there has not been much information to suggest that even the threat of a swine-flu epidemic is imminent, he said.

The U.S. often reacts with more emotion than necessary in health matters and if an epidemic occurs at all it will not be for some time, he claimed.

A Calgary doctor said Thursday, that health officials in the United States are creating a national panic by recommending a campaign to inoculate every citizen.

Dr. Ken Buchan, a virologist at Foothills Hospital, said there has been one outbreak and occasional individual cases "but there is no epidemic yet."

APOLOGY ORDERED

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed told a government backbencher Thursday to apologize after he made a disparaging remark about Quebec.

The incident occurred during the legislative question period when A. L. Fluker (PC — St. Paul) asked Recreation Minister Al Adair if he was aware of a "new seating capacity Mr. Drapeau has come up with for the Olympics.

"I understand that they are removing every other seat and now replacing them with lily pads for frogs, and I wonder if the minister was aware of it," he said.

The remark instantly drew groans and a few chuckles from the Conservative-dominated assembly.

Later, Fluker apologized in the house for the remarks, which he said were meant "as a joke."

He said no slur was intended.

Premier Lougheed recommended that the apology be accepted, stating that he was certain Quebec "would accept the apology in the way in which it was made here."

Justice Threatened By 'Too Much Law'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada Thursday recommended that Parliament carefully reconsider whether abortion, indecency, bigamy, incest, obscenity and gambling should remain offences under the Criminal Code.

"In the light of present social attitudes, inquiry should be made whether they should be abolished or redefined or whether the law needs strengthening," the commission said in a report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Ron Basford.

The commission's report on criminal law says the 700-section Criminal Code is a document "wedded to a Victorian philosophy which now is inadequate."

The code should be pruned so that only offences that are serious and harmful are included.

"Too much law, too many offences and too many cases — they threaten the whole criminal justice system with collapse," the report said.

Besides the 700 Criminal Code sections, there are 20,000 federal offences and 20,000 under provincial law.

"No one can possibly know all these sections and offences. Yet since ignorance of the law is no excuse, the citizen can never be sure he is not breaking the law.

"Worse still, 70 per cent of federal offences are offences of strict liability and need no proof of fault: prove the act and conviction follows automatically."

The criminal justice system's theoretical aim was to promote humanity but in reality it was inhuman.

"Canada . . . is one of the harshest western countries when it comes to use of prison sentences," said the Commission.

"Many of the terms imposed are far too long, half the people in prison should never be there, and so many are in jail that those few

Suspended Pair Foolish —Curtis

Two employees of the B.C. Housing Management Commission were suspended Thursday in the wake of allegations of conflict of interest.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis announced the move to the legislature Thursday but would not name the officials or the strata title management firm they alledgedly set up.

He stressed that he believes their actions were merely foolish rather than an attempt to misuse the corporation.

The allegations, which surfaced in the house Wednesday, are that the two men set up the management firm while they were still working for the public corporation.

Curtis said the men were told by their solicitor in February, when they set up the company, that they might be in a conflict of interest.

He said he understands one or both of the men subsequently divested themselves of their share in the firm.

The suspensions, without pay, are pending completion of the investigation and Curtis said it is possible they may be returned to their positions with the corporation.

Loss of Korbin Decried by Lauk

The B.C. Development Corporation may be headed for "pork barrel" politics, former NDP Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Thursday.

Lauk said the departure of BCDC president David Korbin means the corporation has lost a highly qualified, non-partisan head, who kept the government agency non-political.

Korbin was appointed by the NDP when the BCDC was founded in early 1974. He resigned Thursday saying he felt Economic Development and BCDC chairman Minister Don Phillips did not have confidence in him.

"In order for the corporation to be effective in assisting the industrial devglopment of B.C., it is imperative that the government have confidence in me," Korbin said.

Korbin said he regrets the situation as he believes "the corporation has performed well in its initial experimental phase of operation."

Lauk said the new Socred government fired former BCDC chairman Peter Stanley and now, in effect, has fired Korbin by expressing lack of confidence in him.

He described Korbin as a "good British Columbian and a devoted British Columbian" and said he believes Phillips did not have confidence in him because he is a friend of Lauk's.

Korbin is a Vancouver chartered accountant.

Boozy Binges, Suicide Talk Finished Nixon

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Richard Nixon, in the final phase of his days as president of the United States, was portrayed in newspaper and magazine accounts today as a man who drank to excess and was obsessed with suicide.

The former president's suicide talk so disturbed his aides that they removed all medication from his medicine chest.

The revelations appear in a book, The Final Days, by Watergate reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post. Time magazine and The Daily News say it has been closely guarded prior to its publication next month by Simon and Schuster and serialization of excerpts beginning Monday in Newsweek.

A report in Time, as amplified by columnist Liz Smith of The Daily News, says the book relates that in the days before his resignation Nixon spent much of his time drinking in a small office in the Executive Office Building, either alone or with press secretary Ron Ziegler.

The News says that Nixon's son-in-law, David Eisenhower, expressed concern for Nixon's mental condition, reporting to an aide that he had seen the president, intoxicated, talking to the portraits of former presidents.

Time says that as the end neared, Nixon asked State Secretary Henry Kissinger to kneel and pray with him, saying:

"You are not a very orthodox Jew and I am not an orthodox Quaker, but we need to pray."

The News says that after the prayer Nixon began crying, screaming and beating his fists on the floor.

Even though Ziegler was one of the former president's few confidants in the final days, Time says, the press secretary sometimes became the object of Nixon's temper and that Nixon was heard on one occasion screaming at Ziegler: "Get out! Get out!"

When Nixon summoned his family, wife, daughters and sons-in-law, for a final White House photograph, says Time, White House photographer Ollie Atkins had to shoot for some time to get a picture which did not show tears on any of their faces.

Nixon's wife, Pat, also was reported to have sought solace in alcohol and began slipping down to the servants' quarters at night and returning to her private bedroom with glasses full of bourbon.

The former president also sought seclusion on the presidential yacht Sequoia to get away from the "goddam press" and those he considered his enemies.

Time reported that Nixon cried as Kissinger tried to reassure him that his foreign policy accomplishments would survive the tragedy of Watergate.

"Kissinger . . . often sneered at Nixon behind his back," Time said, "and sometimes concealed his loathing only with difficulty when they were together." Privately, Kissinger referred to Nixon as "our meatball president," the magazine said.

The Pigeon That Took Rome (xx), on 2 at 2 p.m. Charlton Heston tries his hand at comedy in this lightweight 1963 movie about an infantry captain behind Italian lines, who uses pigeons for communication with the Allies.

Bright Eyes (xx), on 11 at 2. Shirley Temple sings, The Good Ship Lollipop, in this 1934 drama about an orphan who worships a daredevil pilot.

The Yellow Rolls-Royce (xxx) on 5 at 3. An all-star cast (Rex Harrison, Jeanne Moreau, Omar Sharif, Shirley MacLaine, Ingrid Bergman, George C. Scott) highlights this entertaining 1964 British-made comedy-drama about the continental love lives of various owners of the same elegant car. Recommended.

Smoky (x), on 7 at 3:30. Fess Parker stars in this 1966 remake of the sentimental Will James classic novel about a cowboy and his horse.

Hickey and Boggs (xxx), on 5 at 9. A 1972 crime-drama reuniting television's I Spy team of Robert Culp and Bill Cosby in a violent story of two detectives on the trail of $400,000 in stolen bank loot. This movie was directed by Culp.

Rage (xx), on 6 at 9. George C. Scott directed and stars in this 1972 drama about a rancher seeking revenge when his son is killed by the accidental release of an experimental Army nerve gas.

Slaughterhouse-Five (xxxx), on 8 at 9. An ambitious 1972 film adaptation of Kurt Vonnegut's complex novel — a parable about Billy Pilgrim, an American Everyman. Director George Roy Hill and screenwriter Stephen Geller have a good feel for the fantasy in Vonnegut's work, mixing Second World War experiences with mental illness, as does the cast which includes newcomer Michael Sacks, Valerie Perrine and Ron Leibman. Recommended, but not for the whole family.

Sally of the Sawdust, on 9 at 9. A 1925 silent comedy classic, directed by D. W. Griffith, and based on the stage hit Poppy, starring W. C. Fields.

Today's Movies

Dead End (xxxx), on 7 at 11. William Wyler directed a choice cast in this 1937 classic movie based on the Sidney Kingsley Broadway play about the slums and a group of people fighting for survival against their environment. Slaughterhouse Five (xxxx), on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier this evening for details.)

The Ceremony (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A good cast (Laurence Harvey, Sarah Miles and Robert Walker) is wasted in this grim and muddled 1964 melodrama about two brothers and a girl involved in a web of jealousy, robbery and murder in Tangier's underworld.

The Defiant Ones (xxx), on 5 at 1 a.m. Sidney Poitier and Tony Curtis are superb in this powerful 1958 drama about two chain-gang prisoners who make a desperate break for freedom while chained together. Poitier and Curtis' performances are enhanced by an Oscar-winning screenplay, and fine direction by Stanley Kramer.

Whatever Happened to Aunt Alice?, on 6 at 1:20 a.m. A well-done 1969 thriller featuring veteran actresses Ruth Gordon, Mildred Dunnock and Geraldine Page, about a dotty widow who hires — and then murders — a succession of housekeepers.

The Detective (xxx), on 8 at 2 a.m. A realistic, well-written and well-produced 1968 crime-drama about a hard-bitten New York City police detective investigating the messy murder of a young homosexual, starring Frank Sinatra, Jack Klugman and Lee Remick.

New TV Musical Of Children's Classic

By TOM SHALES

Classics can be so satisfying — especially to the people who make them. The people who made Pinocchio — a new musical version of the fairy tale to be seen at 8 p.m., Saturday on CBS — are hoping it will become one of those family-viewing perennials that can be replayed year after year and profit after profit.

Jack Wohl, high-powered independent producer and former Laugh-In writer, is certainly bubbling over with great expectations for Pinocchio, put together by the Rothman-Wohl production company he and partner Bernard Rothman founded four years ago.

Wohl and Rothman got the idea two years ago of casting Sandy Duncan in the role of the marionette who becomes a little boy, after they produced her Sandy Duncan at Disneyland special. The team had also worked with Danny Kaye, producing Danny Kaye's Look-In at the Metropolitan Opera, a CBS children's special, late last year, and they decided Kaye was a natural for the role of Gepetto, the woodcarver who puts Pinocchio together.

Kaye, infrequent on television in recent years, immediately took to the idea. "I'm crazy about anything that lets me put on a mustache and some wigs," he said recently.

Rothman and Wohl added some cameo guest stars — Flip Wilson as a fox, Liz Torres (of Phyllis) as a cat — and put the package together with financial help from Procter and Gamble, a company that likes to be associated with sweet and wholesome family entertainments. After three weeks of rehearsal, the special was taped during the first seven days of March.

Because he wanted this to be "a rather special special project," Wohl says he got additional production funding and equipment from Viotronics, a subsidiary of the Technicolor company. As a result, so much money was spent, he says, that the show won't make a profit unless it plays again next year, and, Wohl hopes, the year after that and the year after that and . . .

A few TV fantasy specials have achieved this kind of endurance. NBC's Peter Pan first produced live in 1955 when there was no videotape, was taped later and re-shown several times. Pinocchio obviously isn't the first show to star a woman as a little boy: Mary Martin played Pan. Rodgers and Hammerstein's Cinderella was also live — with Julie Andrews in the title role — when first aired in 1957. In the 60's the show was redone on tape with Lesley Ann Warren as the heroine. CBS got lots of mileage out of the old pumpkin coach in the years that followed.

Of course the family classic that has them all beat is a motion picture: MGM's 1939 fantasy The Wizard of Oz. When CBS showed the film March 14, it was Dorothy's 16th annual televised trip over the rainbow.

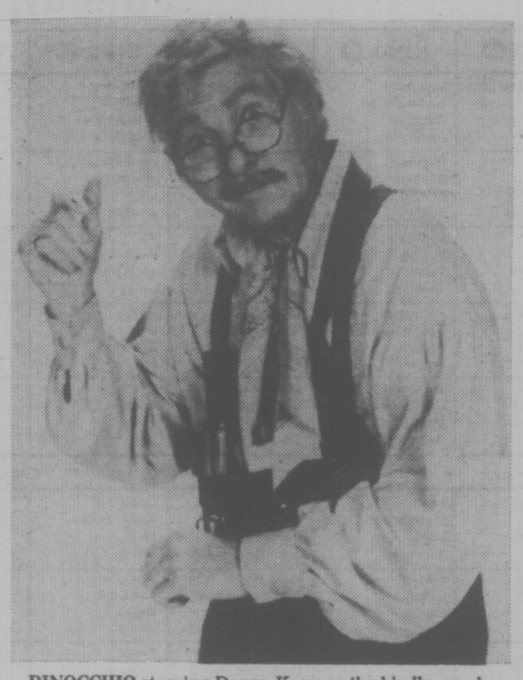
Carlo Collodi, who wrote the tale in 1880, could never have known what a "property" his Pinocchio would become. "It may very well be on the air for many, many years," Wohl says. "That's where we hope to get out money back. And there are other possibilities. There's talk of doing this production theatrically in Europe — maybe at the London Palladium. We may tour it to four or five cities in this country. There may be recordings, a book published — who knows?"

Billy Barnes, who has written special musical material for many TV variety shows — including Sonny and Cher's — wrote the score for Pinocchio, and Wohl says the songs are just dandy.

Wohl is aware that this new production will hardly be the first treatment of Pinocchio to attempt entrancement of the public. Walt Disney didn't do badly with it in 1940 as an animated feature.

"I know we're competing with Mr. Disney," said Wohl. "But I think we've given Pinocchio a new dimension. I think our Pinocchio has a greater sense of drama, a greater sense of production. I don't look to be compared to the cartoon. I just hope people will think of us as 'another' Pinocchio. There'll be a Disney and there'll be ours.

Whether any of the new Barnes songs can equal the ones in the Disney version remains to be heard. Of course, the number to beat is the one that got the 1940 Academy Award as best song, When You Wish Upon a Star. Wohl and associates are banking on a classic, and on Saturday, viewers can see how true their dreams have come.



PINOCCHIO starring Danny Kaye as the kindly woodcarver Gepetto, and Sandy Duncan as the puppet who comes to life, will premiere in a new special musical version on Saturday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7 and 12.

CANADIAN SINGER Debbie Lori Kaye hosts her own CBC-TV variety special on Saturday at 9 p.m. on Channel 2. Miss Kaye, who has been singing in clubs since leaving the Tommy Hunter Show, welcomes among her guests David Clayton-Thomas and dancer Jeff Hyslop.

Classic Odets Drama Premieres on CBC-TV

"It is my hope that when people see Paradise Lost, they are going to be glad they're alive." — Clifford Odets.

Paradise Lost, Clifford Odets' passionate plea for love and understanding at a time in American history when a people's philosophy was the American Dream, while their reality was economic collapse, will be presented Wednesday, March 31 at 9-11 p.m. on CBC-TV.

Paradise Lost was Odets' favorite play; he called it "velvety." It was first performed by New York's Group Theatre. Harold Clurman, artistic director of Group Theatre, wrote recently on the play in the New York Times, "Much happens, yet there is lit tle formal plot. Its people . . . are lost in the disarray of the times, a world falling to pieces. The financial crash with its attendant moral panic, is swiftly destroying the comfort and confidence which was their paradise . . . They wander about their home in feverish disquiet: they seem to be groping in a dimlight, like shades of a previous existence . . . The troubled home they live in might be America itself."

"Odets speaks passionately of the false human motives that support the American Dream," says director George Bloomfield, "And his writing today reads as prophetic and indeed as relevant as it could possible have beren in the thirties.

"Paradise Lost is an American classic intended to be released at a time when America celebrates its Bicentennial year. Odets loved his country and as a dramatist was one of the most powerful critics of its political system."

Paradise Lost was produced by Eoin Sprott. Executive producer was Robert Allen.

PARADISE LOST— Clifford Odets' classic play about the American dream crumbling into a nightmare will be presented on Wednesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. In the cast are Nehemiah Persoff (foreground), Helen Burns, Michael Strong and Sandy Webster (background).

NOVA PROBES BODY CLOCKS

Nova considers What Time Is Your Body, in an encore program, March 28 at 8:00 p.m. (rebroadcast April 4 at 1:00 p.m.) on Public TV 9. According to this study, human beings possess an internal biological clock which regulates a wide variety of activities.

The clock runs on a circadian rhythm, with roughly a twenty four-hour period. Work efficiency, sex drives, and alcoholic tolerance all vary within this time period — meaning there are best and worst times for performance.

Disturbances in the clock — such as "jet lag" — can often have serious consequences: in fact, flies whose clocks are continually reset as if they were changing time zones die young.

Nova examines people who have spent weeks and months in total isolation — with no external clocks to rule their bodies. Under those conditions, humans tend to "free run," averaging 25½ hours instead of 24 hours in a "day."

This intriguing program was produced by Dominic Flessati for WGBH-Boston. Presentation of NOVA on Public TV 9 is paid for in part by Members of Nine.

Creativity— We All Have It

The latest episode in CTV's "The Human Journey" series, titled The Creative Spirit, Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channel 8, provides an hour-long look at the elusive creative impulse in people — through children at play and artists at work.

"What creativity consists of," says director Les Rose, "is a way of seeing and making sense of the world in a fresh, spontaneous and imaginative manner. On any given day, any individual may satisfy the dictionary meaning of the word because creativity is not necessarily linked to artistic talent.

"However, the greatest dimension of creativity," he continues, "is the courage and drive to make use of our perceptions while applying them to new results."

To uncover more information on creativity, both its spirit and process, director Rose examines the facts and myths on the subject as he focuses on the work of selected artists and draws comparisons with children at play.

"Our intention," declares Rose, "is not an evaluation of the final product but of the actual dynamic process."

In our society, it is now recognized that children are one of the most creative, spontaneous and imaginative groups. Unfettered by the structured perceptions of adult life, children possess a boundless inquisitiveness and unlimited access to the creative reservoir of daydream and fantasy.

In The Creative Spirit, Rose examines creativity and childhood through the use of a docu-drama setting in which two children are filmed at play in an old attic. Surrounded by desks, drawers, dust, mirrors and junk, accumulated through the years, we see how children are predisposed to a special view of the world.

"Too many people," says Rose, "accept the premise that creativity is something we all lose as we grow older. Yet children continually put the universe together with their own senses. They fantasize, daydream and have fun with it."

Artists have this same ability to remove the blocks from their minds and revert to a child-like capacity to use their imaginations fruitfully.

Rose found a number of artists and performers who enthusiastically join him in an exploration of the creative process.

Others filmed at their work include comedienne Valerie Bromfield, a Toronto-born actress considered by critics as one of the brightest in her field; Newfoundland artist Gerald Squires; John Wyre, a percussionist and composer with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, who has one of the largest collections of percussion instruments in North America; and Dan Hill, a rapidly rising Canadian singing star and song writer.

"We concentrate," says Rose, "on the professionals who are making a living through their creativity. They have so much faith in what they do, have made such a commitment that they are willing to gamble their daily bread and butter as the stakes."

Audrey Hepburn is excellent in this suspenseful 1967 thriller about a blind housewife terrorized by dope smugglers trying to get hold of a heroin-filled doll unwittingly given to the woman as a present from her husband. A fine supporting cast includes Alan Arkin, Richard Crenna and Efrem Zimbalist Jr. Recommended.

Famed Actress Awarded Special Oscar

By ROBERT LINDSEY

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif (NYT) — The voice is old, but strong. Her thoughts seem to waver at times, but then crystallize on a point, and Mary Pickford, who once ruled Hollywood in a way that no one has since, becomes articulate and wistful.

"Those days were fun, she said, "and hard work. I miss them very much."

"I've had a beautiful career. I could still be on the screen, you know. I'm far from being elderly. And I'm sturdy. I'm ready to go back to work, yes I am," she said.

The actress, who will be 83 years old next month, has lived as a virtual recluse for almost a decade, sharing with her third husband, Charles (Buddy) Rogers, and six servants an opulent estate called Pickfair where she and her second husband, the late Douglas Fairbanks, reigned as virtual monarchs of the silent screen for 15 years.

She has been selected to receive a special honorary award from the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and sciences March 29 "in recognition of her unique contribution to the film industry and the development of film as an artistic medium."

It will be her second Oscar. She received another in 1928, almost 20 years after she began her film career, for Coquette, in the second year of the Academy Awards.

"I'm overcome," Miss Pickford said of the award, and added that she planned to attend the televised awards, and said she was already thinking about what dress she would wear for the presentation. But her husband says that it is doubtful she will attend because he feared "the sheer excitement of it would be too much for her."

Thus, Miss Pickford may continue to remain in seclusion, which has been broken recently only by short rides, often in the evening, around Hollywood and Beverly Hills. Nevertheless, she did consent to be interviewed over the telephone and talked about her past, her present life, and her thoughts on a variety of topics.

From her comments, and those of her husband and friends, a picture emerged of a woman who shows some of the erosive effects of old age, who misses her past, and avoids all but her closest friends and relatives, but who still leads an active life at her home, even to the point of insisting upon making the final decisions on all matters regarding her ample business investments.

Miss Pickford rarely leaves Pickfair, and then only for short drives. She prefers, she has told her husband and friends, for the public to remember her as she looked 50 or 60 years ago, when, in more than 200 films between 1909 and 1933, she invariably portrayed a sweet, spunky, innocent and wholesome young girl with golden treasses.

She was called "America's Sweetheart," and earned more than $1 million a year in her prime and achieved a level of popularity probably never matched by any single star since then. Hidden beneath her golden curls, all agreed, was a business brain as sharp as any on Wall Street.

A poor girl from a broken home, she recognized her value to the early movie makers, and pioneered the practice of stars producing and distributing their own films to tap the huge profits of stardom.

And, with Charles Chaplin, D. W. Griffith and Fairbanks, she formed United Artists, the distribution company that she sold in 1958. She also invested extensively in California real estate and elsewhere.

She is now one of the richest women in America. Estimates of her wealth range from $30 million to more than $50 million.

Her unique role in the history of American entertainment, her years of seclusion, and her failure to appear in public for close to a decade have created an air of mystery about her.

Rogers and friends say that she now weighs about 97 pounds, about 15 pounds less than she did 20 years ago, that she must use a cane to get around, and, according to one person who knows her, "has some good days, and some bad days." Periodically, she suffers from periods of depression, but is said to be in good spirits most of the time.

Miss Pickford said that perhaps her favorite pastime was watching television — particularly old movies starring old friends. Occasionally, recent movies are brought to Pickfair to show on one of its two studio-quality projection systems. She rarely asks to see her own films.

"Mary's not as active as she used to be, but that's natural," said Rogers, the one-time band leader who married Miss Pickford in 1937 and is 11 years younger than she is.

"We go out, we take drives to the beach; she spends some time around the pool, and she sees all of her friends," he said. "She doesn't see people she doesn't like. She just sees those she loves."

Asked why she kept to herself at her six-acre estate on a mountain-top overlooking Los Angeles, Miss Pickford replied:

"Because I'm so happy here."

"Oh, I'm busy," she continued. "I keep in touch with quite a few of my friends. Lillian Gish comes to Pickfair, and Colleen Moore — they all come to see me."

Often during such meetings, she said, the talk turns to the past. Asked whether she missed the days of her filmmaking and stardom, she paused only briefly, then said with emphasis: "Of course I miss them."

MARY PICKFORD the reclusive 82-year-old actress, shown here in a rare photograph taken at her home recently, will be given a special Oscar at the Academy Award ceremonies tonight at 7 p.m. on Channel 2, 4 and 6. If her fragile health permits, Miss Pickford may appear in person to accept the award.

Brock's Last Case (xx), on 8 at 12:45 p.m. A better-than-average 1973 made-for-TV crime-drama starring Richard Widmark as a retired New York City detective living on an orange farm in California, who tries to clear a young Indian accused of murder.

The Young Lawyers (xx), on 5 on 3:30. A well-produced 1969 pilot for a now-defunct TV series about a corporation lawyer who helps a group of law students open a neighbourhood legal centre. Filmed on location in Boston, with a competent cast that includes Jason Evers, Keenan Wynn and Michael Parks.

Another Thin Man (xxx)), on 12 at 7. William Powell and Myrna are delightful as the amateur sleuths Nick and Nora Charles in this 1939 mystery about the investigation of a triple murder on a Long Island estate.

The Red Badge of Courage (xxx), on 5 at 8. Richard Thomas (of the Waltons) is excellent in this 1974 made-for-television version of the Stephen Crane Civil War classic about a young Union soldier in his first battle who flees in terror but returns later to prove himself. Thomas gives a memorable portrait of personal reactions encompassing cowardice, fear, endurance and finally courage.

Raid on Rommel (x), on 8 at 12:45. Not to be confused with the excellent Desert Rats, this 1971 low-budget quickie filmed in Mexico tells of a group of British commandos out to neutralize the German guns at Tobruk. The action footage was stolen from the 1967 production of Tobruk, and Richard Burton in the leading role uses little of his acting talent.

Captain Falcon (x), on 11 at 1. Lex Barker is the only English-speaking actor in this 1958 Italian-made swashbuckler.

Canyon River (x), on 5 at 3:30. Routine 1956 western starring George Montgomery as a rancher plagued by rustlers on a cattle drive from Oregon to Wyoming.

Slaughterhouse-Five (xxxx), on 5 at 9. An ambitious 1972 film adaptation of Kurt Vonnegut's complex novel — a parable about Billy Pilgrim, an American Everyman. Both the director and the screenwriter have a good feel for the fantasy in Vonnegut's work — a mixture of Second World War experiences and mental illness — with the young cast equally sensitive. Recommended, but not for the whole family.

Helter Skelter, on 7 at 7. (Part 1) An unpreviewed 1976 made-for-television movie based on the best-selling novel about the Charles Manson murder case. Shown in two parts with the conclusion tomorrow evening, the film opens with the August 1969 discovery of five persons — including actress Sharon Tate — brutally murdered at Tate's Los Angeles home; and continues to the massive investigation which eventually points to Charles Manson and his "family." The large cast is made up of unknown actors and actresses.

The Lavender Hill Mob (xxxx), on 9 at 9. A hilarious, 1952 British-made comedy highlighted with a flawless performance by Alec Guinness as a timid clerk who evolves a fool-proof plan to rob the Bank of England. Recommended.

The Court Jester (xxx), on 11 at 9. Danny Kaye stars in this lightweight but entertaining 1956 comedy spoof of medieval England. Glynis Johns and Basil Rathbone co-star.

The Forty-Eight Hour Mile (xx), on 12 at 9:30. A competently produced 1969 mystery about a private detective investigating the case of a missing millionaire with too many women friends, starring Darren McGavin, Carrie Snodgrass and William Windom.

The Lawyer (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Barry Newman created his Petrocelli series character in this 1970 made-for-TV courtroom drama about a young attorney defending a wealthy doctor accused of killing his wife.

The Bird with the Crystal Plumage, on 2 at midnight. No rating available on this 1969 Italian-made thriller about a series of bizarre murders involving beautiful women, starring Tony Musante, Suzy Kendall and Eva Renzi.

Sweet November (xxx), on 6 at midnight. Sandy Dennis and Anthony Newley give sensitive performances in this poignant 1968 romantic drama about the unusual relationship between a bohemian New Yorker and a staid Englishman she invites to share her apartment.

Promise Him Anything, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1975 TV comedy about a tangled romantic web created by computer dating, starring Frederic Forrest, Meg Foster and Eddie Albert.

McHale's Navy (xx), on 7 at 12:30. From the TV series of the same name, a 1964 comedy about the misadventures of the crew of the PT-73, starring Ernest Borgnine, Joe Flynn and Tim Conway.

Shamus (xx), on 8 at 1:30 p.m. Burt Reynolds and Dyan Cannon star in this 1973 crime-drama about a tough New York private detective hired to recover a fortune in stolen diamonds. Reynolds gets beat up a lot but he's got style.

The Big Combo (xxx), on 6 at 2:25 a.m. An excellent 1955 crime-drama about an honest cop who takes on the syndicate, filmed with a good cast that includes Cornel Wilde, Brian Donlevy, Richard Conte, Lee Van Cleef and Earl Holiman.

Bionic Bodies Build High ABC-TV Ratings

JOHN J. O'CONNOR

(NYT) — In the sense that all traces of a discernible personality seem to have been successfully obliterated, Steve Austin may be prime-time television's first truly pornographic figure. He is, of course, ABC's "Six Million Dollar Man" and, as monotonously activated by Lee Majors, is the supreme electronic lummox. Devoting precisely the same degree of blank-faced attention to all activities — eating, flirting, killing for the OSI, his government-agency employer — Steve could be the ideal symbol for the 1970's. In any case, the series is one of very few on ABC to make the Top 20 popularity chart. And it is reported that the program attracts TV's highest percentage of children viewers.

What, then, does the network do for an encore? Without so much as a blush, the programming wizards have now unveiled "The Bionic Woman" to fill a scheduling vacuum on Wednesdays at 8 p.m. She is Jaime Sommers, once engaged to stolid Steve back in their hometown of Ojai, Calif. ("Home of the American Astronaut"). Like Steve, she has been critically injured in an accident. Also like Steve, she has been pasted back together with new body parts, courtesy of "revolutionary cryogenic techniques." For the moment, because of minor brain-cell and memory damage, Jaime remembers Steve, but "it's mostly in my head, not my heart."

The producers, though, are obviously reserving the option to reunite the couple, if audience research proves "positive." Assuming that all those new body parts are capable of meshing nicely, a future "Bionic Baby" is not entirely out of the question.

LINDSAY WAGNER . . . The Bionic Woman

Superman and Wonder Woman. Steve Austin may not be faster than a speeding train, but he can perform feats of strength and endurance far beyond the capacities of the average sedentary viewer. Nervous about his special powers, he must make special efforts to be good and gentle. He may not always succeed, but the intention is consistently noble. It is time, in other words, for fantasy.

In true comic-strip style, both "The Six Million Dollar Man" and "The Bionic Woman" are reduced to uncomplicated pictures with audio blurbs for dialogue. The same technique was used in the old-fashioned serial cliff-hangers that used to be shown at Saturday movie matinees. The actors are required to contribute not performances but pictorial arrangements. Everyone is deadly serious while reciting lines drenched in banalities. Simple "panel" succeeds simple panel, and every 15 minutes or so, hero or heroine performs some superhuman act to the sound of spooky electronic reverberations.

"The Bionic Woman," however, may face some audience-building difficulties. Jaime Sommers is played by Lindsay Wagner, a tall, strikingly attractive blonde who seems incapable of reaching the heights of total anonymity scaled by Lee Majors. Miss Wagner trails distinct traces of a personality, perhaps even of a sense of humor. She disturbs the lifelessness of the comic strip. In addition, the character of Jaime is noticeably wobbly in spots. Becoming intimate with Steve's mother, she asks, "Can I say something, just between you and I, Helen?" One prays that she isn't teaching English grammar to those problem children. In fact, as often happens when confronted with lowest - common - denominator television, one simply prays that it won't reach epidemic proportions.

CBS Dramatizes Helter Skelter

Helter Skelter, based on the number one best-selling book by Vincent Bugliosi and Curt Gentry about the Charles Manson "family" and the trial of the so-called Sharon Tate-LaBianca murderers, for which Bugliosi served as special prosecutor, will be dramatized in a two-part special Thursday, April 1 and Friday, April 2 (9:00-11:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

The four-hour-long, made-for-television movie, filmed as much as possible on the sites of the actual events, was produced and directed by Tom Gries from a script by J. P. Miller for Lorimar Productions. Lee Rich and Philip Capice are the executive producers.

Sharon Tate was a prominent Hollywood actress whose biggest starring role was as the ill-fated Jennifer in Valley of the Dolls in 1967. She was the wife of film director Roman Polanski and pregnant with their child when she and three of her guests, including well-known men's hair stylist, Jay Sebring, and a fourth visitor were murdered at her home in the hills above Beverly Hills, California, on the night of August 8, 1969.

The following night, Leno and Rosemary LaBianca also were the victims of apparently senseless murders in their Los Feliz area home several miles from the scene of the previous night's massacre. It was subsequently determined that both crimes, costing seven lives, were the work of the Charles Manson "family," a group of young people under the domination of Manson, who boasted of being responsible for 35 deaths. Vincent Bugliosi was appointed by the Los Angeles District Attorney's office to prosecute the "family."

DiCenzo brings to the role of Bugliosi a theaatrical background which started as a graduate of the Yale School of Drama, and included appearances on and off Broadway in New York and stints at the Pittsburgh Playhouse, Studio Arena Theatre, and Williamstown Theatre before many appearances in guest roles on television.

Railsback studied at the Actor's Studio in New York and has appeared in the motion pictures The Visitor and Bye Bye Billie. In the revival of Skin of our Teeth on Broadway, he appeared as the son, Jose. On television he starred in the feature, Second Thoughts.

Producer-director Tom Gries lists among his many credits The Glass House, and the CBS Playhouse 90 drama The Migrants, which were broadcast on the CBS Television Network and were received with critical and popular acclaim.

ANIMATION FILM FESTIVAL

International Animation Festival, a series of the best cartoons from around the world, debuts on Public TV 9 April 1, at 10:23 p.m. The entertaining, humorous and often thought-provoking programs will air each Thursday evening, immediately following presentation of KCTS 9's Festival Films from the Janus Collection.

According to producer Sheldon Renan, "the quality and depth of animated films has continued to improve, and there is a new interest in animation around the world." This quality is represented in films which utilize Woody Woodpecker, Andy Panda, Roberta Flack, the art of Toulouse Lautrec, the jazz of the Oscar Peterson trio, stories by E. B. White and Balzac, and animation by Monty Python's Terry Gilliam. The series is hosted by Jean Marsh.

On the premiere program, which follows The Lavender Hill Mob, birds, fish, elephants, insects and befuddled humans all are featured. The show begins with a film from Italy by satirist-cartoonist Bruno Buzzeto. His "Self Service" concerns some hungry mosquitoes whose bitty bites soon turn into big business; eventually even the Arabs and the Cosa Nostra get their lumps.

The United States is represented by Cameron Guess' "The Shepherd" — the story of Harry the Sheepherder and his problem of finding happiness in the big city where nobody want his sheep.

This program concludes with a series of short films from Yugoslavia's Zagreb Studios, which specializes in mini-films of a minute or less. As Ms. Marsh explains, "These are used on European television to fill in breaks in programming. But (they) have developed a following all their own, and even have their own stars." One such star is the rambunctious Maxicat, the official mascot of International Animation Festival.

The second program, airing April 8 at 10:30 p.m. immediately following "Rocking Horse Winner," features an operatic spoof of history, a wacky instructional film, and a grimly comic look at the limits of growth.

Ms. Marsh next introduces Derek Phillips' "Bigger is Better," in which a city grows from a single rose-covered cottage to a towering megalopolis that rears up in the form of a colossal dinosaur and collapses from its own unwieldy mass.

The third film, "Do It Yourself Cartoon Kit," is a nonsensical, mis-instructional film of zany, shaggy humor from Bob Godfrey of England.

Today's Movies

The Female Trap (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A grim 1968 thriller about a drifter who becomes involved with a beautiful young girl and her murderous family, starring Jack Lord and Susan Strasberg.

Pals of the Saddle (x), on 11 at 1. A 1938 John Wayne western, one of dozens he made in the late thirties and early forties — all low-budget and most of them bad.

Apache (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Burt Lancaster portrays a die-hard Indian waging a one-man battle against the U.S. in this rugged 1954 western adventure.

A Fistful of Dollars (xx), on 4 at 9. Fans of the so-called "spaghetti" western will enjoy this violent 1967 Italian-made effort starring Clint Eastwood as the mysterious gunfighter with no name becomes involved in a feud between two rival families in a Mexican border town.

Flight to Tangier, on 11 at 9. No rating available on this 1953 drama about the frantic search for two men who mysteriously disappear from an airplane in flight, starring Jack Palance and Joan Fontaine.

The Chase (xxx), on 12 at 9. Despite a screenplay by Lillian Hellman and a fine cast (Marlon Brando, Jane Fonda, Robert Redford, E. G. Marshall and Angie Dickinson), this 1966 drama about tension and passion in a small Texas town is a disappointment. Producer Sam Spiegel kept interfering with director Arthur Penn during the film, and the final jumbled story contains several unresolved points of view.

Helter Skelter, on 7 at 10:15 (time approx.) Conclusion of this 1976 television adaptation of the best-seller about the 1969 Tate-La Bianca murders. Tonight's segment follows the trial of Charles Manson and three women members of his "family".

Cheyenne Autumn (xxxx), on 12 at 11:40. John Ford directed this stirring 1964 western epic which tells the tragic true-life story of the migration of a tribe of half-starved Cheyenne Indians from their barren reservation in Oklahoma to their home ground in Wyoming. A fine cast includes Richard Widmark, Karl Malden, James Stewart, Edward G. Robinson, Gilbert Roland, Ricardo Montalban and Carroll Baker.

Moon of the Wolf, on 6 at midnight. Low-budget 1972 made-for-TV thriller about the search for a mysterious killer beast in the swamps of Louisiana, starring David Janssen, Barbara Rush and Bradford Dillman.

The Pit and the Pendulum (xx), on 6 at midnight. Thriller fans will enjoy this well-produced 1961 film rendering of the Poe classic horror story set in a mysterious castle, starring Vincent Price.

The Raven (xxx) on 7 at 12:45 a.m. Avant-garde American filmmaker Roger Corman directed this 1963 horror movie, loosely based on an Edgar Allan Poe classic poem. Cast includes Vincent Price, Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre, Hazel Court and in one of his early film roles, Jack Nicholson.

If a Man Answers (xx), on 2 at 1 a.m. Bobby Darin and Sandra Dee were man-and-wife when they made this lightweight 1962 comedy about the romantic problems of a commercial photographer and his jealous young wife.

The Thing with Two Heads, on 6 at 1:30 a.m. A bizarre 1972 thriller with a self-explanatory title, starring Ray Milland and Rosey Grier.

Twice Told Tales (xx), on 8 at 1:40 a.m. Another treat for thriller fans is this 1963 trio of Nathaniel Hawthorne stories, starring Vincent Price and Sebastian Cabot.

The House of Fear, on 7 at 2 a.m. No rating available on this 1939 mystery about a detective investigting an unsolved theatre murder, starring William Gargan, Irene Hervey and Dorothy Arnold.

CLINT EASTWOOD in a role he has often repeated, plays a ruthless, mysterious violence-prone gunman who gets involved in a feud between two powerful families in a Mexican border-town in, A Fistful of Dollars, the Friday Night Movie to be shown at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

TALENT FESTIVAL

Singing and instrumental stars of tomorrow are the focus of CBC Radio programs for the next six weeks as Themes and Variations broadcasts the Semi-Finals of the 1975-76 CBC Talent Festival.

Every Thursday at 8:03 p.m., hosts Karen Kieser and Harry Mannis introduce some of the 20 young Canadian concert artists who are competing for $18,000 in prizes in four classes. These are voice, piano, winds and strings. The programs are also heard in stereo on CBC-FM, Wednesdays at 9:03 p.m.

Judging the event is a panel of 12 major personalities from the Canadian music scene, which will select two musicians in each class to compete in the Finals April 23 in Edmonton.

The Finals, in which the eight contestants perform with the orchestra, will be broadcast live on CBC-AM, and repeated April 28 in the FM edition of Themes and Variations.

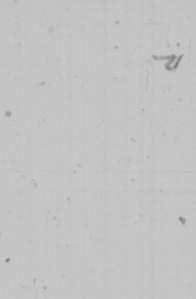
Pat Barclay



One of the more obvious truths of which man seems least aware is that his reactions to the enviroment in which he was born and raised color his perceptions of the rest of the world for the remainder of his life. I forget the name of the nineteenth-century Englishman who said in effect that the whole of Canada was not worth a damn because its salmon would not rise to the fly, but he was only an extreme example of a widespread human tendency. (Partial perceptions can work in reverse, too. If the gentleman in question had been anxious to quit his native hearth and home, he might well have been delighted with our persnickety salmon.)

The other day I was leafing through the second issue of The Squatchberry Journal, a new and very regional publication, and was struck by the way in which most of its poet contributors, nearly all of whom were born and raised somewhere else, wrote about a particular tree, a certain farmyard, a specific midnight, and so on. Yet the one poet who originated in the area (Juliet Franczyk of Caramat and Geraldton in the wilds of Northwestern Ontario) produced lines like these: "The laws of nature and the will of God — They mould the earth to what it is and will be — Time will always rule and leave her mark upon this well-trodden sod — And make for man his ultimate destiny."

Well, I don't want to make too much of one small example, but I do think that it points up an interesting fact about so-called "regional art": the native variety is strong on "soul", or the attempt to express the region's essence; whereas the imported article tends towards external observation and analysis.

Gary Geddes, in the introduction to his recent collection of writings of the Canadian Northwest, Skookum Wawa, quotes Emily Carr as saying, " . . . what they have to express over there (in the "Old World")—is not the same as we have to express here. It is different. The spirit is different." And Emily Carr, as we all know, determined to keep on struggling until she had created a new way to express the spirit of her region. For her, mere observation, however clear-eyed, could never be enough.

The selections in Skookum Wawa range from early historical writings (Captain George Vancouver, Alexander MacKenzie, Chief Maquinna) to a three-line poem by 25-year-old John Marshall titled "Seymour Inlet Float Camp: Domestic Scene" ("Mother is sewing—father's—thumb back on"). The early writings in particular fall into the outsider-observer category, but most of Geddes' other selections are satisfyingly and revealingly close to the land and its people.

Elsewhere Geddes has argued for "recognition that literature derives greater significance from its regional, or local roots than it does from shared national experience, especially in a country like our own which is so young, so vast, and so geographically and ethnically various." It's a claim that's hard to fault after reading, in Skookum Wawa, Emily Carr on her Indian friend Sophie, Earle Birney's "David", Pat Lowther's "Coast Range", Laura Berton's "Tales of the Klondike," or Roderick Haig-Brown's "Let Them Eat Sawdust."

So for the time being, at any rate, Geddes is probably right. "Shared national experience" should be the inevitable next step as surely as urban development follows the trailblazing of pioneers, but Canada's future as a nation now seems so precarious that an enlightened regionalism — in politics as in literature — is perhaps the best we can hope for. (Well, they say that while there's life there's still hope.)

Politics and literature, whatever anyone else may tell you, share a good deal of common ground. To get down to the grass roots of the matter, it's sheer concern for the land which animates both the regional writer and the intelligent voter. What is the literary ambition of the regional writer but to express the spirit of the land, and what is our popular nationalism but the determination to preserve it?

So if you happen to hail from the Prairies, or maybe the Canadian Shield, read Skookum Wawa as receptively as you can. It's well worth reading for anyone who wants to know what it feels like to have the Pacific region in one's bloodstream. (If you already know, you'll find the book full of lively moments of recognition.)

For Canadians at this point in time, shared regional experience probably deserves at least as high a priority rating as bilingualism.

The Poets' Handicap

By GARY GEDDES

Some years ago Leonard Cohen claimed to be well ahead of the "travelling pack of poets". Although his remark was pretentious, it was evident that he was amongst a relatively small group of poets in this country whose work seemed likely to last. However, there are many poets in that pack who, according to my judgment, have overtaken Cohen, passed him on the club-house turn and who are likely to leave him behind in the stretch.

The racing analogy is misdirected, since the writing of poetry is a long-distance activity; it's only end, or goal, is the creation of an excellent poem, after which the poet goes right back to the starting-gate. Poetry is a solitary pursuit, a struggle between a man and his visions, a wrestling with the language itself. In that respect, it is interesting to examine the work of these three poets — one a fresh starter, another slightly underway, and the third a veteran runner — to speculate upon their present, and possible future, position in the race that never ends.

I begin with the new starter, Don Domanski. Domanski's art has a certain naivete, a stamp of innocence, which often results in surprising metaphors and unexpected analogies that a more mature writer would be too embarrassed to offer. His work, at times, sounds like that of a clever child, especially in its preoccupation with evil in its domestic forms.

He talks easily of Satan and Lucifer, with whom he has had no real traffic, but with whom he has a certain fascination, as has the academic with the world of work. Even his self-conscious obliqueness and obscurity are a sort of indulgence, but one which can be more rewarding than the heavy literalness of many young poets. Beldam and Deserted Farmhouse, among others, speak of the disappearing, or vanished, past of our regions with something of the magic-realist eye of Colville or Roly Fenwick.

Domanski has the equipment, the poetic legs, to go a long way, but he lacks, at the moment, that depth which would put him ahead of his contemporaries. What I do find encouraging in Cape Breton Book of the Dead is that he has a certain sense of economy, which is an asset and a liability to him. He seldom over-writes, but he often leaves his work as little more than notes towards poems rather than as finished products. As the rats in his poems begin to gnaw at his ankles, he will no doubt achieve a sudden burst of speed.

Susan Musgrave, who is also in her twenties, has something of a head start on Domanski, at least in terms of exposure and publication. Her own situation seems to be almost the reverse of Domanski's, if only on the surface. She has the appearance of depth in her work, partially because she chooses to write of loneliness, despair, and death. Her poems reek of blood and rot; they also enjoy that sensual body-consciousness that involves a reader.

To a certain degree, she has capitalized, and the media have encouraged her in this, on the fact of her adolescent psychological stress, sucking melancholy from too many eggs. A sameness, a predictability results, so that her first collection, Songs of the Sea Witch, seems more significant, perhaps more honest, than subsequent books.

MUSGRAVE

Where Domanski lives within his poetic means, Musgrave lives beyond hers, particularly in terms of craft. She simply does not have enough of interest to say, or the equipment with which to say it, to justify the publication of so many poems. I don't want to suggest that her talent is small, or less important than that of Domanski. Neither is the case. Poets should live beyond their poetic means, as surely as they have to live beyond their meagre financial means; no one would want to suggest otherwise. But the parable of the hare and the tortoise isn't exactly out of place here.

Musgrave's Impstone begins with an epigraph from Galway Kinnell which is more prophetic and wishful than it is descriptive of the poems which follow — "Seeking love . . . love without human blood in it." The new ground which she possibly wants to break may have to wait for several books yet, because here again we are treated to familiar abstractions: death, loss, evil, pain, failure. Here, too, there is a certain flat, matter-of-factness, which has become characteristic of her own work and that of other Canadian poets; instead of the speaking voice, or what Wordsworth hoped was the common language of men, we often get the impression of a poet speaking in his least inspired voice, a rather chatty and monotonous early morning drone.

At times this matter-of-factness releases certain images that a more rigorous prosody would dissipate. But, more often, it encourages a poet to pay more attention to his random thoughts and feelings than their role in the poem justifies. Such seems to me to be the case in two potentially excellent poems, The Gift and Skookumchuk. The flat, laconic beginning of the former is interrupted by the intrusion of a hopefully bolstering statement —"all choices being evil—and death in certainty" — which serves to scuttle the poem before it gets fully underway.

The next three stanzas regain my attention, rising to a certain power in the image, "I see an old eye—in the unborn brain," and a familiar pleasure in the obviously Atwood-inspired lines:

Happiness when love is the only alternative.

"Skookumchuk," Musgrave's tribute to, and identification with, Emily Carr, begins flat-footedly, moves through certain by now embarrassingly familiar references to attempted suicide (a thing Carr never played with), but somehow arrives at a splendid observation about the painter: "She paints—the unexposed skin — the masks behind — loss." This, of course, is Musgrave's version of Carr, but in the context of the poem it works. As Picasso said to the person who did not think that Gertrude Stein looked at all like his paintings of her: She will.

Musgrave's poems are exciting, like a glimpse of something exotic, forbidden. But they vanish almost immediately, except for a few memorable lines and images which cling like Pacific leeches. Musgrave's muse seems capable of moving readers profoundly, if the poet will learn the other, better half of her art.

PURDY
. . . leads pack

In the long run, to return to our race image, Al Purdy seems to be well ahead of these two contenders, particularly in terms of the number of excellent, truly moving and memorable poems he has written.

Purdy has found his voice, a robust, at once elegiac and ironic voice, capable of saying big things by way of understatement or of saying almost nothing with grace and humor. He began in traditional poetic garb, but in the late '50s and early '60s forged a language and style uniquely his own, which, like his own description of hockey, is a "combination of ballet and murder."

His space is very much of this century, "the brief prelude to infinity," where the poet must take himself with half-seriousness, knowing that heroism and self-indulgence are absurd since "everything ends in a pot-belly."

Purdy's new paperback selection, The Poems of Al Purdy, hardly needs description. All of his best poems are there and have already been the subject of numerous reviews, frequently anthologized, and even more often discussed in classrooms. At his best he speaks convincingly of our age, a time of transition and unease.

He inherits and deepens the vision of Pratt's Towards the Last Spike, our great, almost Schweikian mock-epic. Like the worker in Wilderness Gothic, risking his life in an age without faith, to repair a church spire, a monument to the past, Purdy hangs there, precariously, "hammering and fitting God's belly-scratcher."

Read It Before You Write!

As I am reminded almost every week, it is impossible to write a column without saying something that will offend someone; impossible to drop a sentence without it falling on someone's toe.

So I am no longer surprised when a reader writes to say that I have disappointed or angered him; but I am constantly surprised by the things that have this effect.

My all-time favorite is a letter, which I still treasure, written in 1968 following my review of a book dealing with the battle of Waterloo. This lengthy, vitriolic letter from a well-known B.C. author took me to task for saying that Hougoumont was held all day by a force of Prussian exiles.

"The chateau, kitchen garden and orchard," he wrote, "were held by companies of the Scots Guards and Irish Guards." He then thundered: "That statement of yours about Prussian exiles holding Hougoumont is an insult to the men of the Guards . . . I think you owe some explanation to your readers . . ."

Written and verbal brickbats are an occupational hazard and, in this part of the world, one gets used to being attacked for a comment on something that happened as recently as 160 years ago; but I hadn't foreseen being rounded on for commenting on events that happened some 600 years ago.

A few weeks back I reviewed a book about chivalry in the Middle Ages and went to some pains to point out that in reality chivalry, as understood and practised then, was nothing like the modern dictionary definition.

I seem to have touched a raw nerve and, judging by the response, southern Vancouver Island has almost as many flower-of-knighthood worshippers as it has Scottish nationalists and, as my B.C. author would protest, I have insulted the Crusaders and all knights in rusty armor.

My heralds are en route to Westminster Abbey to tender apologies to the effigies. Meanwhile, I am comforted by knowing that not only are reviews being read but readers have actually found the book pages.

Those who were incensed by my remarks about chivalry should read Margaret Wade Labarge's biography of Henry V, that paragon of knightly virtues. It will help them to gain perspective.

The American-born, Oxford-educated, Ottawa-based author has produced a scholarly work founded on intensive study and visits to the sites of Henry's military and diplomatic duels.

Her Henry emerges on two levels: the familiar king of the history books — intensely religious, astute in statecraft, cautious and courageous in battle, and just according to the mores of 15th century western Europe; and at the same time complex, introspective, humorless, and completely callous and brutal following any real or imagined slight to his dignity.

Henry spent most of his nine years' reign waging war in France, which he believed was his by divine right. Thanks to the schisms among the French nobility as much as his own considerable generalship, he achieved by conquest the Treaty of Troyes whereby he was acknowledged as heir to Charles VI of France.

Old and ailing Charles survived Henry, who died at 35, by two months thus shattering the latter's dream of uniting the kingdoms of France and England under his own sovereignty.

The merit of this book is the way that Mrs. Labarge, quoting extensively from contemporary sources, gives a graphic picture of warfare in the age of chivalry.

Chivalry, we learn, although chiefly a matter of strange rituals, personal challenges, parleys, and pledges of honor, consisted also of sending heralds to warn your enemies of your intentions unless they surrendered, which chivalry forbade them to do, and then — because refusal was an insult to dignity — righteously carrying out the original intention with ruthless barbarism.

At Agincourt, the scrupulous research of Mrs. Labarge confirms, the chivalric Henry V, fearful lest his prisoners should assault his weakened army from the rear during the threatened second French cavalry charge, ordered them all to be massacred. Elsewhere the chivalrous French nobles were either held for ransom or butchered, while the English soldiery pillaged and raped their way across the land.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Labarge's academic presentation is often tedious, as a student of English history I am indebted to her for her detailed thoroughness. But I found I just couldn't take the book seriously — and the fault, I hasten to add, is mine, not hers.

Henry's boyhood, spent among a bewildering array of characters and plot-counter-plot, at a time when his father, Henry IV (Part 2), reigned precariously and only nobles counted and the common people were expendable, was difficult to take seriously when it so reminded me of 1066 and All That.

Later on, in France, I began thinking of the musical, The Desert Song, and of Flanders and Swann singing about Armagnac, Burgundy and Beaune.

And all the way through I was unable to visualize the slim, moody, frail Henry of reality, particularly during the set-piece battle of Agincourt. Despite all his well-chronicled deeds, he never fully comes alive in these pages, and like most people I continue to imagine him as fashioned by Shakespeare and embodied by Laurence Olivier.

In self-defence, I must end with a warning: no letter of protest will be acknowledged unless the writer can prove that he has read this book!

Dazzling Dylan

By MARILYN BOWERING

Dylan Thomas, one of the finest lyric poets of the century, died at the age of 39 in 1953 leaving behind, as well as his poems and prose, a legend of a life that seems fictional itself.

He was known as an "enfant terrible," given to equally furious bouts of excess and penance, culminating with his death during the fourth of his self-immolating American lecture tours.

He was lecherous and faithful, morose and gregarious, partly the victim of the expectations of others (the Artist should be outrageous — and so he was). His contradictions, Sinclair tells us, spouted from a consciousness made of equal parts Welsh nonconformist suburbia and the older bardic-minstrel heritage bequeathed to him by his father, an unrealized poet himself.

Dylan left school at 16, always clear, it seems, as to his commitment to poetry. He sold poems in London, did some hack work, was an arrogant reviewer and fairly well-known personality by the time he was 19.

Sinclair's thesis is that Dylan was nurtured by a dull, rural Welsh homelife, that he could only write in that atmosphere, but that restlessness and dissatisfaction led him to debauches in the city from which he would creep home to recover.

He would retreat to the bosom of mother Wales even as later he retreated to his wife Caitlin and his children, who provided stability and anchorage in his wandering, restless life. He was usually discontent, bored in the country, homesick in the city, moving back and forth like a displaced cat.

He lived in poverty, his adult life measured by a stream of letters asking funds, advances and jobs from publishers, friends, employers. He worked as a script writer and, in the later years of his life, as a broadcaster for the BBC, which, Sinclair remarks, was niggling in payment and often unappreciative of him.

Though Sinclair's is an affectionate look at the poet, it is far too simplistic and superficial to be of much value to those who read and like Dylan already and presents too little substance for those looking for an introduction.

The book's charm, and its flaw too, is the author's nearness to his subject. Sinclair writes in a style which is almost Dylan parody, giving us such memorable phrases as the "keg-of-bitter end" in reference to Dylan's death and half-wit lines like "body snatching . . . poetry from the corpse of his youth" and "the way to hell is paved by good conventions." This stands poorly next to Dylan's very real and biting wit.

DYLAN THOMAS. Poet of His People, by Andrew Sinclair. Thomas Nelson. $18.95.

What perhaps saves this book, lets us glimpse Dylan the person, are the photographs which enliven almost every page. We see Dylan growing more beery, less cherubic as time passes. We see his landscape, his studios, his Caitlin, favorite pubs and friends and are startled now and then by rather Byzantine paintings by Augustus John and Alfred Janes.

I understood more of the misguided, ill-conceived Brinnin, who was Dylan's ineffectual American shepherd, from the two photographs of him with Dylan, than could be gleaned from the text. Caitlin, too emerges through the photographs as the tough, intelligent, loving women she undoubtedly was, though Sinclair does, fortunately, let her speak in her own words throughout much of his book. Dylan is a constant, with photograph after photograph of him dangling a Woodbine between his lips and (can it be, through 20 years?) wearing the same sweater.

Not quite a coffee-table book, not quite a biography, this book hovers in publishing's no-man's land. But if one loves Dylan it is worth the borrowing, even the buying, for a look.

A Half-loaf for Man

By JULIAN REID

Years ago, when I studied psychology, our textbook contained one of those visually ambiguous drawings that Gestalt-theorists delight in. At first sight, it showed a rather smug-looking laboratory rat; but shift your focus, and lo! — it was a portrait of an ebullient B. F. Skinner.

That pretty well sums up Skinner's image. Edgar Pierce Professor of Psychology at Harvard, high priest of the Behaviorist movement which dominates academic psychologizing on this continent, he has elevated principles drawn from laboratory experiments on rats and pigeons into a mechanistic philosophy of human life and a far-reaching "technology of behavior" aimed at manipulating and transforming the entire course of human destiny.

His best-selling Beyond Freedom and Dignity aroused loud controversy among conventional liberal intellectuals. He was accused of confusing people with rats, of dismissing justice and morality as mere meaningless fictions, and of presenting a blueprint for a wholesale dehumanizing of the human race. About Behaviorism is Skinner's answer to these charges — an ambitious attempt to formulate an all-embracing philosophy of human behavior and its scientific analysis.

Skinner accuses his critics of cliche-ridden thinking and muddled semantics. But the "philosophy" he presents makes a depressingly threadbare alternative. In place of the old mentalistic cliches he offers a new mechanistic one: "operant conditioning." Convinced that all distinctively human behavior can be explained in its terms, he supports his point by dogmatically insisting that no analysis couched in any other terms can be counted as a satisfactory explanation. As an assertion of faith, this may do, but not as rational argument.

Like most explainers-away, Skinner is possessed by a single idea, which he pushes far beyond its natural limits. Operant conditioning is real enough; but so are consciousness, freedom, and dignity — all of which he seeks to deny in its name.

If this was mere academic theorizing, it wouldn't matter much. But the limitations of Skinner's vision become vitally important when his behavioral technology is put to work, as it increasingly is, in schools, prisons, and mental institutions. Not that it somehow "dehumanizes" its subjects, as critics charge — on this point Skinner's defence is convincing. But, more important, it supplies nothing to humanize them; and a refusal to supplement its techniques with warmer, more humane approaches amounts to dehumanization by default.

Man cannot live by bread alone, as an abler philosopher than Skinner once declared. And even on the bread-and-butter level, all Behaviorism can offer is a rather hard half-loaf.
